VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS
Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of Vinegar Bitters?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of Vinegar Bitters in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.
The properties of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.
Grateful Thousands proclaim Vinegar Bitters the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.
No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.
Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. Walker's Vinegar Bitters, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.
Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with Vinegar Bitters. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.
Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.
Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, Walker's Vinegar Bitters have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.
For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.
Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of Walker's Vinegar Bitters occasionally.
For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.
Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.
For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.
Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

The Auburn Courier

Thursday, February 26, 1874

The "inflationists" are said to have a majority of five in the United States Senate.

How can it be that in the little populous State of Maryland—Postmaster-General Creswell's own State—the deficit in the Post-office should be among the largest of any of the States? It amounts to $214,000. This is more than Florida, or Tennessee, or Mississippi, and other rotten borough negro States. We should like to hear from Mr. Creswell on this point.

It is now beginning to look as though the Philadelphia ring had killed the golden goose. Since the triumph of the ring candidate for mayor, the press is generally throwing cold water on the centennial project. It is just as well to consider it, too. The States at large cannot afford to risk money with such a ring as this election puts in control in the city, and the sooner the thing is understood the better for all concerned.

A terrible tragedy occurred at Watsonville, Santa Cruz county, California, resulting in the instant death of M. J. Gilkey and Dr. C. E. Cleveland. There had been a deadly feud between the two men, and Dr. Cleveland started out, avowing his purpose to kill Gilkey. A man named Deval tried to make him desist, but to no avail. The men met, drew pistols, and approached to within two feet of each other and fired simultaneously. Dr. Cleveland fired twice, and fell dead on his face. Gilkey retreated a few steps, leaned against a tree, and also fell to the ground dead. Both had been drinking hard during the day.

For a session in which nothing has been done, the House makes a pretty big showing. The Senate composed chiefly of wind instruments, figures less, in the sum total. Something like five hundred bills have been worked up in the House, many of them economical measures of great importance. The jobs have not yet come to the surface, plenty enough to be recognized, but it may be taken for granted, that with such abject demoralization, there plenty of big steals on foot. The Senate work has been confined principally to a discussion of the finances, and as nearly every man in the Senate has presidential yearnings, there is, of course, nothing accomplished. The term is running till May, but it is very doubtful whether anything will be done. If elaborate speeches are any satisfaction to the country, there are enough of them, but unhappily, they don't ease the money market, or decrease the taxes.

However wrong Harper's Weekly may be in general, it sometimes aims a stinging blow and sends the nail clear home. In this week's issue its editor gives a very intelligent statement of the status of the Republican leaders on the Financial Question, which, it very properly remarks, is the most important question now before Congress and the American people. Here is what the Weekly says:

We said last week that the Republican party, although in complete possession of the Government, and responsible for administration, has no financial policy. Yet the most pressing and important of all practical public questions is that of the finances, and the want of a clear and firm purpose upon the subject is therefore most injurious to the party.

Crozier is the name of the new Senator from Kansas, who was sent to fill out the unexpired term of the unwhitewashed Caldwell. Since his advent in that body, Crozier has made one speech on the subject of the Osage lands. From the report of it, we conclude Crozier is a regular stunner in the way of inflamed rhetoric. Here is a little extract from his exuberant family, and we submit that it equals anything of Pogram's or Poker John Logan's:

"The groves are delightful as any that were 'God's first temples;' the streams as limpid as the waters that gushed from the cleft rock of Old Testament memory; the climate such as the gods might choose for perennial habitations; the depressions and swells of the landscape as voluptuous as the most ardent artist could imagine for the proportions of the bewitching daughter of Jove; never fading green habilitates its graceful slopes, and the gentlest of breezes, freighted the odors of the most fragrant flowers perpetually intoxicate the senses, making existence therein a realization of the dreams of bucolic poets, from Virgil to Gray."

The Grant party invariably goes strongly for Retrenchment just before elections, but it is a difficult task for its members to show any gratifying results of their protestations. The public has become used to seeing millions swept away into private coffers during the past decade, and it may be that they will laugh at the bare idea of our speaking about a few thousand. Some enterprising individual has been examining into the management of the Treasury Department at Washington and has been awarded for his labor by the discovery of a number of subordinate Bureaus, existing without authority of law and without the least necessity. These Bureaus are of considerable importance, each having a "Chief of the Bureau," Chief Clerk, Subordinate Clerks, Copyists and Messengers. The chiefs receive a salary of three thousand dollars per annum, the chief clerks twenty-five hundred, and the subordinates from twelve hundred to two thousand dollars. One of these fancy elements of the Treasury Department is called the "Appointment Bureau," and the duty devolving upon it is to supervise the appointments of clerks in the Treasury. It is said that the labor of this Bureau can be fully performed by one man if he sticks to his business one hour each day. Eighteen hundred dollars are appropriated by Congress for the salary of the "Appointment Clerk," and yet the economical Secretary pays out fifty-four hundred dollars annually for the same services contemplated in the eighteen hundred dollar appropriation. Another of these fancy adjuncts to the Treasury is called the "Bureau of Records and Files," the entire duty of which is to take care of, and present for inspection when wanted, the Records and Files of the Department; yet it has its "Chief of the Bureau," chief clerk and other attaches hanging round and drawing fifty-four hundred dollars annually out of the Treasury, for services which could be rendered by a single clerk who would be glad to work for a third of the amount annually expended. There is another of these ornamental "Bureaus," called the "Mail Department of the Treasury." Now there is no doubt that Secretary Richardson and his co-officials ought to receive their letters and papers regularly, and have somebody to carry their letters and papers to the post office, but there is grave doubts of the necessity of having a "Bureau" for that purpose, with a "Chief Mailer," at a salary of three thousand dollars a year, four clerks at fifteen hundred dollars each, five clerks at fourteen hundred dollars each, three clerks at one thousand dollars each, besides a messenger and several assistant messengers. There are also "Stationery" and other "Bureaus," with the same array of useless chiefs and clerks—a half dozen or so men to do the work of a single clerk. These petty "grabs" have grown up under Grant tuition, and they will continue to thrive and be fat so long as the Grant party is continued in power. From the President down, there has been stealing in some form. The President, Congressmen, Custom officers, Revenue collectors, Inspectors, postmasters, agents, military officers and clerks have had their hands more deeply into the public treasury than becomes an honest Administration, and it is high time that the people, the farmers upon the broad acres of the West, the merchants in their counting houses and the mechanic in his shop, should pause a moment to consider whither we are drifting as a nation, and how long salary thieves shall sit in the Presidential chair and occupy seats in Congress; how long Credit Mobiliarists shall give direction to legislation; how long speculators shall hold the purse strings of the nation. Every election, whether it be of minor officers or more important ones, will have an influence upon the destiny of the nation, and either give aid and comfort to the various classes of official thieves and corruptionists, or assist in breaking their tenacious grasp upon the earnings of the people. The Grant party is feeling the effect of its own rottenness already, and if this year administers to it a succession of defeats in State elections, the day of its utter rout is as certain as the rising of the next sun. Let all opponents of Radicalism, of corruption, of centralization, with its love for combinations and corporations, with its devotion to Eastern capitalists in their effort to aggrandize manufacturing at the expense of the tiller of the soil, stand firm in their opposition, and, shoulder to shoulder, fight the battle of the people against monopolists, whether they exist in politics, in manufacturing, or in trade.

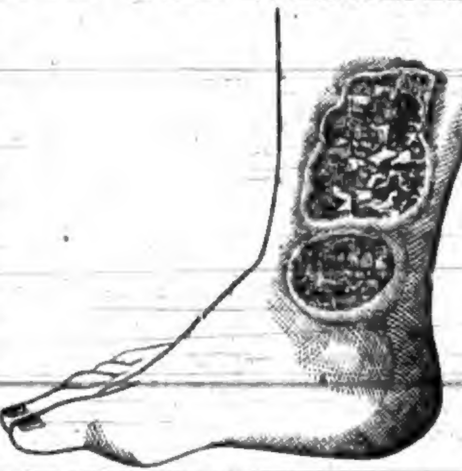
HOME TESTIMONIALS.

Aboit tp., Allen Co Ind. Mar. 8th, 1873.—I hereby certify that I was afflicted with fever sore for nearly 3 years We employed what we thought the best physicians of Ft. Wayne without any benefit; and for over two years I could not walk, and my whole system was affected. At this stage of the disease I consulted Dr. S. Clay Todd, and, I am glad to say, under his treatment I became perfectly well in four months, and thanks to a Kind Providence, and the skill of Dr. S. Clay Todd, I am no longer a cripple



I was 61 years old when cured Those who have such a disease should employ Dr Todd at once.

MRS. LYDIA KNEPPER six miles west of Fort Wayne.

Ft Wayne, Ind. Feb. 15 1873.—I hereby certify that Dr. Todd cured our infant daughter of a large scrofulous tumor on the right under jaw in two weeks without lancing. She has been perfectly well ever since. Cured Aug. 14, 1872.

MISS HARRIET BROWN Wife of Mr Harrison Brown, 5 miles west of Fort Wayne.

Fort Wayne, Sep. 17, 1872.—For the benefit of those who think consumption incurable, I will make a statement of my cure: On the 12th of last March I was taken with the Lung Fever, or as the doctor called it, Pleuro-Pneumonia. I was attended by one of whom I considered the most eminent physicians of this city 3½ months, during which time he employed 5 other physicians as council. For 3 weeks I though I was getting better, when an abscess began to form in my left lung, and the physicians pronounced it quick consumption, from this time I failed rapidly, and raised from a pint to a quart of phlegm and matter each day, and had night sweats; by the 26th of June I had got so weak I could not lift a glass of water to my mouth, and was confined to bed. At this time some ladies in the neighborhood persuaded my wife to employ Dr. Todd, and I am free to say I improved steadily from the time I began taking his medicines, and in 19 weeks I was able to walk 2 miles, and felt as well as I ever did, now I walk from 3 to 4 miles each day, and neither cough nor spit. I have no pain and think my lung is healed perfectly. JOHN A. MILLER,

30½, West Washington-st., Fort Wayne, Ind.

SHE PRAYED FOR DEATH.

Two years and four months I lay upon my back in the most abject suffering every night I thought I would not live until morning and every morning that I would not live until night, and prayed for death to relieve me from my misery. We employed ten (10) physicians the most eminent of Fort Wayne, and other cities, without any benefit. When we heard of the wonderful cures of Dr. S. Clay Todd of this city we employed him, and thanks to a kind Providence and the skill of Dr. Todd. I am now able to attend to my household duties. I would advise all who think their case past help, to apply to Dr. S. Clay Todd at once. Mrs. DAVID BIRLEY, 109 E. Holeman St.

EDUCATIONAL COLUMN.

J. A. BARNS, Conductor.

It is an encouraging sign to see so many of the parents and others in our township institutes, and in the schools. It begins to look like a revival in school matters. When parents have pupils in the schools, their visits should be as frequent as business will permit; for what earthly interests have we, of a higher or holier character, than that felt by a parent for his children? And instead of leaving them for a whole term in the care of the teacher, who is perhaps a stranger, would it not be well to call frequently and see what progress the pupil is making.

Township Institutes.

CONCORD TOWNSHIP.

The third and last institute for this term met at Spencerville February 14th. Teachers all present but one. Institute opened by the President, C. P. Howser. Roll called by the Secretary. On motion the President appointed J. Boyle Critic. The first exercise [illegible] lesson in arithmetic, by J. Shilling. Superintendent Barnes being present, now gave a lesson in proportion, showing how examples are often incorrectly stated, and giving the correct statement. A short time was then spent in examining the division of decimals. The next subject was grammar, by Mr. Barnes, who explained the use of regular and irregular verbs, collective nouns and participles. On motion of W. Devilbis a committee on resolutions was appointed by the President; M. Young, J. Boyle and W. H. Able were appointed.

Afternoon session was opened by a song from the choir, entitled "The Jasper Sea." The persons who so kindly enlivened our institute with music were Misses Bessie Kinsey, Mary Leighty, Maggie Dilley, Calley Kinsey, Emma Tindall, Emma Ayers, Lena Olds, Mr. Melvin Bishop and Mr. Franklin Wise. The next subject was history—the wars—by J. Boyle. His method of teaching that branch is good. It is done by topic and writing. Geography, by A. P. Shirtz, was followed by a discussion on the uses of maps and globes. Mr. Howser then gave an explanation of the revolution of the earth around the sun. Physiology by J. E. Dumot. Writing, by W. Devilbis, was followed by a discussion of the question, 'Can writing be taught successfully by a teacher who is himself a poor writer, provided he understands the principles." Next in order was a short lesson in bank discount, by M. Young. On motion of J. Boyle, C. P. Howser conducted a class in reading, after which the Critic's report was read and approved. The resolutions were then read by Mr. Young, and approved by the institute. Mr Howser now gave an invitation to as many as could, to meet in his district for an institute, should the weather and roads permit, promising to notify them by postal card as to the time. On motion of Mr. Young, C. P. Howser was elected Critic for the evening session. Closed by singing the Mariner's Song.

Evening session—Opened by singing the "Sleighride Song." Then followed discussion on "Incentives to Study," by J. Boyle, M. Young, A. P. Shirtz, W. Devilbis, C. P. Howser, J. Shilling and others. Next was a song entitled "The Beautiful World." Selection in reading, by L. Daniels. Discussion—subject—Objects of Recitation.

Several citizens at Corunna went together and purchased the right of the "Flora Temple" churn. Agents wanted.

Should the bill now before Congress for the establishment of a United States Circuit Court at Fort Wayne become a law, speculations are already indulged in who the appointee will be for judge. Judge John Morris, of Fort Wayne, and Judge Stanfield, of South Bend, are named.—Exchange.

We are in favor of the former by a large majority.

Rev. O. P. Downs, of Warsaw, addressed our citizens on the subject of temperance, at the Presbyterian Church, last Tuesday evening, and though not having a very large audience, he made a telling appeal in favor of a thorough temperance reform. He is to lecture again at the Court House next Sunday evening. The different churches omit their services for that purpose.

It's here. It's come. We've got it.—We have not seen it yet, but then its so, for we have been told so privately. The women have formed a league, and a temperance move is to be made. We are also impressively informed that they will take the Court House next Sunday night. We did not dare to ask where it would be taken for fear of seeming levity, but it is certainly to be took. They will next move on the ashery and sundry other institutions, and great is to be the fall thereof.

The Logansport Pharos, one of the best managed papers on the Wabash, comes to us enlarged and improved. It is now the same size as the COURIER and therefore we have a brotherly love for it. It is neatly printed with a new head and dress, and looks as bright and happy as the cherry face of it's local editor, Willard Nash, who, by the way, is becoming a second Josh Billings, only more so, in his celebrated items written under the head of "Don't do It."

One of our subscribers died sometime ago, and for weeks after his death his neighbors would inquire for the COURIER at the Postoffice. He was a charitable man, and his neighbors read his paper.—Since that time that community has been groping in the dark. The paper was stopped, their friend dead, and they without communication from the outer world.—Where are our missionaries. Behold the lilies of the field, they toil not neither do they spin, or take a paper. Let it be recorded.

The Kendallville Standard, in speaking of Mr. Kelly, says:

The reason why we know he is a 'blatherskite,' is because we heard him make a speech in this place. One speech is sufficient to convince any person of sound mind, of that fact.

We don't know what is meant by blatherskite in the above connection, but if it means a want of principle and honesty then Meyers was evidently talking about his superior in every ingredient that goes to make an honest man. Mr. Kelly may not be a fine speaker, but there is one thing we are sure of, he won't lie and then swear out of it by making his wife carry the blame.

"NOT GUILTY."

The State versus Smith

The Defendant Discharged.

Great interest was evinced in the trial of Wm. L. Smith, charged with rape upon a little girl named Garver. The case commenced last Friday before Judge Woods in the Circuit Court, and during the trial, the court-room was well filled with an attentive audience.

Some time was spent in empaneling a jury, after which about thirty witnesses were examined. As the interest has been so general, we give below the testimony of the prosecuting witness and that of the defendant.

Sarah Garver sworn. Am 11 years old Lived with the defendant last spring.—Helped him cut potatoes in the barn.—When together in the barn he carried me into the granery, and there insulted me and accomplished his purpose. Said not to tell any one as they would laugh at me and my mother would whip me. Promised me some peaches and candy. Done the same thing in the kitchen before, and in the sitting room on the lounge, Mrs. Smith was out in the garden at the time. He was generally kind to me.

Wm. L. Smith sworn. Live 2½ miles from town. Am 55 years old. My health was bad during May, June and July. Was hurt by the fall from a horse. Was planting corn when I was overcome so that I could not walk. Boy took me home on a stone boat. Doctor said I was sun-struck I was not able to work for several months The garden is 18 feet to house, 2 windows on side next to it, about 3 a. in lot Sarah came in April. I did nothing to Sarah.—I sometimes had to scold her. Met Long on the 4th of July, did not make a remark to him about hard work with a little girl. I went to Sarah's mother on Sunday. Saw something was wrong. Sarah says you have been abusing her I said not it is a lie. Sophia says if we take this to court we can make you pay us a good deal of money. In the morning I brought her clothes up to her and told her that she need not come back.

The above is substantially the testimony, leaving out the vulgarity that was necessary in the development of the facts. Prosecutor W. R. McConnell opened for the argument before the jury in a fine effort, followed by Ninde and Morris with telling speeches, Mr. Penfield of this place closing the argument, in a very fair and scholarly manner.

As there was some objection to Judge Woods' charge in his illustration of what he considered beyond a reasonable doubt, we give his explanation in full, on that point:

"In order to the conviction of the accused in a criminal case, the evidence must exclude the possibility of innocense upon any reasonable theory of the case; that is to say, the guilt must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, and this means not any imaginary or supposable doubt, but a doubt suggested by or arising from evidence in the case.

That certainty in the mind of a juror which excludes a reasonable doubt, is such a certainty as would enable him after deliberation, to act with unhesitating confidence in a matter of the highest importance, involving his own interests, and this must be in a matter about which he was not bound to act at all, and where non-action would not affect him.

This degree of certainty may be illustrated by supposing that the consequence of a wrongful conviction must fall on the juror himself, and then give the juror the privilege of remaining in the pannel and deciding the case, or withdrawing therefrom, as he shall choose; if then, after due deliberation upon the evidence, argument and instruction, he can, with unfaltering confidence convict, his verdict should be guilty."

The following from the Fort Wayne Gazette is certainly not the expression of public sentiment here. There is no sane man who believes that the jury was tampered with, and as to the Judge, it would, in our opinion, be certain death to approach him with a bribe. These misrepresentations are wrong, and must be the mark of an evil spirit. We feel that Mr. Smith has had a fair and impartial trial that he has been acquitted by a jury of his countrymen. He stands vindicated before the law, and he should be respected accordingly. We have never believed in his guilt, and are glad to know that so worthy a citizen, heretofore, has been mercifully and fairly dealt with. Had he been pronounced guilty we would have as readily endorsed the punishment he would have so justly merited. Here is the item as it appeared in the Gazette:

"AUBURN, Feb. 23.—Yesterday the excitement over the trial of W. L. Smith, of this county, who is charged with committing a rape upon the person of Sarah Garver, reached its height Sunday evening, beginning at 7 o'clock. Judge Morris and the Hon. L. M. Ninde, of Fort Wayne, made eloquent and effective pleas for the defense, and were followed by Mr. Penfield, of this place, for the State, in a masterly argument. The jury retired, at mid night, and after a long discussion, agreed upon a verdict of 'not guilty,' which was brought in at 10 o'clock Sunday. Smith was highly elated over the verdict and grasped the members of the jury by the hands wishing them long life and prosperity. Thus money has cleared another scoundrel, and left an innocent little girl with stained character to be pointed at with the finger of scorne."

Happy Event.

The tenth anniversary of the wedding of A. J. Ralston, Esq., and his accomplished lady, was celebrated in a more than usual manner last evening by what is termed a "tin wedding." This being the first of the kind ever inaugurated here it was an occasion in which nearly everybody invited managed to be present, all displaying their various tastes and humor by an appropriate article manufactured from the glittering tin. There was every chance to give the affair a [illegible] character, which was taken advantage of, and [illegible] and fancy [illegible] for their share of patronage. Many presents from the most trifling to the most expensive, were showered upon the happy couple, and there was happiness and good cheer everywhere.

The host and hostess were dressed in the different articles of wedding apparel presented, during the evening, such as a tie cap, bonnet, slippers, articles of jewelry, etc., and made a laughable appearance. The attendance was large, the supper most splendid, and the enjoyment supreme. The happy family received many warm congratulations.

Plantation Jubilee Singers.

This celebrated troupe of vocalists will give two of their grand concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings, Feb. 27th and 28th, at the M. E. Church, in this place—They are highly spoken of by those who have heard them They sing the good old camp-meeting songs with a melody unsurpassed, besides a number of sentimental pieces. The troupe is composed of 2 males and 7 females, all colored. Admission 25 cents.

The young lady teachers of Auburn, (and the Inter-Ocean says that Auburn has the best looking school-ma'ams in Indiana,) are now investing in chickens, so that they may get the wish-bones to place above the door, and he who first enters under said wish-bone is the fated man. If it be true then a certain chivalier de Ocean has "put his foot in it."

The very refined editor of the Press wants us either to "change our religion or quit lieing" From the manner he falsifies in the very article in which he makes the above statement one would infer that he does not know what 'religion' means. The people of Waterloo are to be pitied indeed To think that the town is defended by such a man as Baxter,—without stability enough to refuse to attach his name to a document which is calculated to curse his patrons and send his fellow men—intoxicated—into hell itself, is too much wolf for the lambs of Waterloo to harbor. 'Liar' forms the backbone of all his arguments He refutes nothing honorably, and we might as well expect to get sweet incense out of a skunk as to get good sense out of Baxter. It isn't in him, ex nihilo nihil fit.—Butler News.

That last sentence does the business.—We doubt whether Baxter will ever again be able to hold up his head.

We hear the name of our esteemed friend, C. A. O. McClellan, of Waterloo, mentioned in connection with the congressional nomination for this district.—Ligonier Banner.

While we feel confident the above is not of his seeking, we cannot ignore the fact that Mr. McClellan would be an excellent selection for the congressional race. He is one of our most popular citizens, has never been an office-seeker and would rather forfeit the chances of an elec'n than stoop to low political tricks to accomplish his object. He is a self-made man, having risen by his energy and thorough practical business capacity, to an honorable position in his profession, enjoying the respect and esteem of his fellow man. We want square, practical men for these positions, the superficial is not enough, as our past experience has taught us. Let the office seek the man, is the old plan, and this would certainly be the case in his nomination.

The COURIER man is trying to dodge the responsibility of telling the farmers that it took two bushels of wheat to get one to market, and he offers us a $5 bill to tell him where he said so. Probably 'his intentions were honorable,' but he can send us the V, or explain just what he meant by the following balderdash, which he will find in leaded type, on the local page of the Auburn half of his paper, dated Jan. 8, 1874.—Press

In the last week's issue of that paper it quotes our item as follows, which is correct:

"When the farming community prospers, we all reap some reward; when the farmers, on account of excessive freight tariffs, are obliged to give two bushels of grain in order to get one into market, we do not wonder that they combine together for the purpose of putting down such mercenary corporations—we believe it to be their duty thus to combine."

Two weeks before the Press had it wheat, instead of grain, and that is why we challenged it. There is some difference between the word "wheat" and "grain." Corn is also grain but it is not wheat. We had this last in view when we wrote the article, which our friend has not been able to digest, and has since been picking at. We claim that the facts in the case, as to this great staple of the west will bear us out. Of course, if there is a chance for a misconstruction Charles W. will take advantage of it Why did he not make the application with clover seed it would have counted so much more.—But we give him credit for giving our article correctly.

DEATHS.

COOL—On Thursday Feb. 19, 1874, at his residence 2 miles south of town, Christopher Cool, aged about 50 years.

The deceased was born in Montgomery County, New York, and moved to his late residence in this county in 1848, being one of the early pioneers. Though somewhat close in his dealings with men, he was always regarded as a fair-minded, honest man, and made his word as good as his bond. He leaves an aimable wife, there being no children to bless the union A few weeks before he died, having in fact no idea of such a sad event, he wrote the following beautiful lines, dedicated to his country. There is a spirit of patriotism and christain sentiment pervading them that find excellent expression, for one living in his sphere of life.

A GLORIOUS LAND.

BY C. COOL.

Our country, 'tis a glorious land,
With broad arms stretched to every shore;
The proud Pacific chafes her strand
She hears the dark Atlantic roar
And nurtured on her ample breast,
How many a goodly prospect lies
In nature's wildest, grandest dress,
Enameled with her loveliest dyes.

Rich prairies deck'd with flowers of gold,
Like sunlit ocean's roll afar;
Broad lakes her azure heavens behold,
Reflecting clear each trembling star;
And mighty rivers mountain born,
Go sweeping onward, dark and deep,
Through their sheltering branches leap.

And cradled 'mid her clustering hills,
Sweet vales in dream-like beauty hide,
Where love the air with music fills,
And calm content and peace abide;
For plenty here her fullness pours,
In rich profusion o'er the land,
And sent to seize her gen'rous store,
There prowls no tryant hireling band.

Great God! we thank the for this home—
This bounteous birth-land of the free,
Where wand'rers from afar may come,
And breathe the air of liberty;
Still may her flowers untrampled spring,
Her harvest wave, her cities rise;
And yet till time shall fold his wing,
Remain earth's lovliest paradise!

any attempt to separate them during life. The lungs, heart, pancreas, liver, spleen, and alimentary canal in each of these strange beings were excellently developed, and differed in no wise from those of ordinary mortals. The lower portion of the ensiform cartilage, or breast-bone, in each, by doubling or bending out, made a long union, on which the bodies hinge freely. This joint is somewhat similar to, but not so complicated as, that at the elbow. The band at the smaller part has a circumference of nine inches, and when the link was stretched, and the twins were placed as far apart as possible, there was a space of eight inches intervening. The peritoneum, or membraneous lining of the belly in each, was found to enter the band and four pouches overlapped each other at the centre of the band. The most marked feature here was the presence of two such pouches from the body of the large brother, Chang, and the upper one shorter than the lower, but each lapping, one from above and the other from below the single pouch of Eng. The astounding and curious fact was developed that a line passing down the centre of the band would sever all three of their prolongations, and open the peritonitial cavity of each liver, so that if the knife had been used in life death would inevitably have resulted.

A SUIT involving the neat little sum of $638,000 has just been decided at Providence, R. I., after fifteen years' litigation.

The West.

GEN. SHERIDAN is firmly convinced that a general Indian outbreak is impending, and he has communicated his view to Gen. Sherman, who orders him to repress the threatened disturbance with all the force that he can collect. Every savage that is caught off his reservation is to be held as an accomplice in the murders of Lieut. Robinson and Agent Appleton. ....The indictment against ex-City Treasurer Gage, of Chicago, for perjury, has been quashed....Rush R. Sloane, late President of the Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland railroad, has been arrested on seventeen charges of embezzlement. His stealings, it is alleged, amount to over $150,000.

McLaughlin, of Detroit, for $4,000 and the championship of America, was won by the latter....A whole family named Thompson, living near the Stock Yards, in Chicago, have been poisoned in some mysterious manner. Three little children are dead, and the mother and nurse are in a dangerous condition....The temperance war has broken out in Jeffersonville, Ind., and threatens to invade Louisville, just across the river.

MARDI GRAS was celebrated with the usual pomp throughout the Southern cities.... Property is taxed twenty times as much as before the war in South Carolina.

LIEUT.-COL. BUELL, with a small force of cavalry, recently struck a camp of Comanche Indians on the northwestern frontier of Texas, killed ten of them, and recaptured a large amount of stock.

Washington.

THE cause of the present Indian outbreak on the frontier, according to statements of officers of the Indian Bureau, is the fact that the Interior Department has been unable to provide the Indians with their annual supplies, owin[illegible]e inadequacy of the Indian appropria[illegible] fund for the present fiscal year is entirely expended, and there is a deficiency of $1,000[illegible]. The Interior Department has no means of relief until Congress shall make additional appropriations.

SEVERAL important amendments to existing laws have been agreed upon by the House Committee on Judiciary. It is proposed to allow criminals to testify in their own behalf; also, to amend the law prescribing punishment for manslaughter, so that in the discretion of the Judge a court may sentence persons convicted of manslaughter to twenty years' imprisonment, the limit being at present three years.

PRESIDENT GRANT has appointed the Court of Inquiry to try Gen. Howard. Gen. Sherman is at its head, and associated with him are Gens. McDowell, Pope, Meigs and Holt. Maj. A. B. Gardner is Advocate-General. The Court-Martial will begin March 3.

GEN. GARFIELD, of Ohio, made a short but earnest speech in the House, the other day in favor of the free transmission of newspapers in the county where they are published. He said that the country press alone reflected the opinions of the people, as the able and intelligent editor of a country newspaper, loafing leisurely about all week and mixing with people promiscuously, was thereby enabled to give expression to the verdict of the multitude, while the city editor, sitting in a fifth-story office, dashing off an article in haste, could not represent anybody but himself. Therefore, it occurred to him that the people are entitled to have their own views sent to them without cost, and that the metropolitan press, containing fresh ideas, should not object to it.

"Interests" to them, owing to Grand Master Adams' cruel interpretation that their interest was the "interest of the hawk in the sparrow." Some surprise is expressed that the body should adjourn without any utterance on the cheap transportation question. The subject was not introduced into the deliberations until the last hours of its proceedings, and it was then postponed until the next annual meeting, on the ground that the recommendations of the Committee on Transportation were too specific.

THE first annual meeting of the Ohio State Grange was held at Xenia last week. Five hundred and fifty delegates, all Masters of granges, were present. The Secretary reported that 550 of the 600 granges in the State had been organized since last April. The order is in a most flourishing condition throughout the State, and is rapidly growing.

THE Kansas State Grange was in session at Topeka last week, 600 delegates being in attendance. The reports of the Executive Committee, Business Agent, and officers show the affairs of the order to be in an excellent condition, and the financial interests to have been economically managed. The order is increasing more rapidly than at any previous time. The membership in the State numbers 30,000. ....The State Grange of Missouri, held at Boonville, last week, was one of the largest conventions that ever assembled in the State. Delegates from over 1,600 granges were in attendance, representing a membership largely over 100,000. The meeting was characterized by the utmost harmony and good feeling among the delegates.

THE Tennessee State Grange has just had an interesting and harmonious session at Gallatin. Nearly 500 subordinate granges were represented, there being between 500 and 600 delegates present, many ladies being delegates.

The bark Punchinello, from New York for Bristol, was recently wrecked on the Irish coast. Twelve of her crew perished.

THE pork-worm, trichina spiralis, is again getting into the muscles and heads of people in different parts of the country, creating no little consternation, and making business for the undertakers. Several cases are reported in Chicago and suburbs, and hog meat is a drug in the markets of that city.

EXTRAORDINARY BANK ROBBERY.

One of the Boldest and Most Successful Robberies on Record—The First National Bank of Quincy, Ill., Relieved of $500,000—A Wagon Load of Plunder Carried Off.

The usually quiet city of Quincy, Ill., was startled as it was never startled before on the morning of Friday, the 13th of February. The porter of the First National Bank, on opening the portals of that institution at 8 o'clock in the morning, as was his wont, was struck with consternation at what his eyes beheld. The ceiling and walls of the building near the vault were in a broken and shattered condition, and the bricks shaken from their position. He at once notified the officials, when an investigation was made, revealing a robbery which, in its conception and execution, eclipses any of the daring schemes for plunder that figure in the annals of recent American crime. It being impossible to unlock the vault door, an exploration was made in the second story, where an opening was found in the hall floor, through which the burglars had descended on the top of the vault. Further examination showed that a hole over three feet square had been drilled through three feet of solid masonry, and a plate of boiler iron two feet square cut from the lining of the vault with chilled chisels. This done, access was obtained to the interior of the vault, where were two safes, one containing the money and special deposits of the bank, and the other Government bonds and valuable papers. The money safe was found with the doors blown off their hinges and depleted of all its contents save a bag of gold. There were in it $90,000 in currency belonging to the bank, $200,000 in Adams county bonds, worth par, and special deposits of greenbacks and Government bonds, bringing the sum total up to $500,000. The other safe, containing valuable papers and bonds, was also charged with powder and blasted, but did not yield, and its contents, although showing the marks of powder, are safe. In the vault were found the tools employed by the burglars. The kit was elaborate and of the most modern invention.

Theories differ as to the time of organizing the stupendous robbery, and the length of time required to execute it. The explosion was made at 2 o'clock in the morning. The manner of working after reaching the interior of the vault was as follows: Powder was filled into the cracks around and between the hinges of each safe, and held fast by the free use of putty. A connecting fuse was then adjusted to set both blasts off at once, and then passed through a rubber hose to the top of the highest safe, where a small pistol was screwed on an old ledger, and so arranged that when it was discharged it set off the fuse. This pistol was fired by means of a cord which led from the vault to the street, and thus the burglars set off the explosion, when the vicinity of the bank was cleared of people. Several persons in adjacent buildings heard the sound and felt the concussion, but thought it nothing serious.

The currency and special deposits taken from the bank, it is stated, would make a respectable wagon load. To get away with the spoils it was necessary to let one of their number down into the vault by a rope several times and raise him up with the booty, and yet this was done and these experts neither disturbed the neighborhood, which is in the heart of the city and within a square of the police headquarters, nor were they seen by anyone. The bank publishes a statement that it will not be seriously affected by the robbery, will continue its business, and pay all deposits. It is one of the strongest institutions in the West. The bank offers $20,000 for the recovery of the stolen property.

SHOCKING CASUALTY.

Twenty Workmen Buried Beneath a Falling Wall—Eight of the Number Killed, and Eleven Badly Injured.

Philadelphia has just been the scene of a terrible and shocking disaster, resulting in the death of eight human beings, and the maiming of some dozen more. The lager-beer brewery of Henry Muller, on Thirty-first and Jefferson streets, fell with a tremendous crash the other day, burying in its ruins over forty workmen. The fall of the building was caused by the immense weight of the ice which had been packed in large quantities in the upper stories. The walls bulged, and the whole building, a large brick structure, tumbled to the earth with a tremendous crash. The falling ice, etc., crushed in the large mash-tubs, containing above 2,000 barrels of beer, which poured with great rapidity into the cellar, almost drowning those who were attempting to escape. Around the ruins were gathered thousands of excited people, many of whom were women who ran hither and thither, wringing their hands and screaming in the excess of their grief. The presence of entire families, fearful of the safety of their bread-earner, and rending the air with their cries of distress, added much to the general confusion. When the walls gave way and the huge structure came down upon the unfortunate men, casting them with the ice, bricks, and debris, down through the floors in the sub-cellar beneath, their shrieks and moans were something appalling. A number were killed outright, and others escaped death by scarcely a hair's breadth. The living were so tightly wedged in between blocks of ice and beams as to be unable to extricate themselves, and by their smothered cries the operations of those who came to their rescue were guided. Some of the unfortunates waited patiently the efforts of their rescuers, while others groaned terribly, calling on death to release them from their sufferings. In all eight men were killed, and eleven seriously injured.

LATER.—Later accounts from the disaster are to the effect that twelve dead bodies have been taken from the ruins, that six others are seriously and eighteen slightly wounded.

THE ANTI-RUM WAR.

The Praying Hosts Rapidly Gaining Ground in Ohio and Elsewhere—The Crusade Spreading to Other States.

The crusade against the rum-mills in Ohio and other parts of the West is spreading like the Epizootic. The war has broken out in Columbus, the capital of Ohio. A meeting, attended by over three thousand men and women was held in the City Hall, a few evenings ago, and arrangements made for a simultaneous assault upon the strongholds of the liquor-dealers. At Ripley, the crusaders are still moving on the enemy's works. At last accounts only one saloon held out, and the brave women had concentrated all their efforts upon it, with encouraging hopes of success. Many of the saloon-keepers who have been prayed out of their business are leaving for Germany. At Nelsonville a movement has been commenced against the gin-mills, $10,000 having been subscribed to assist the ladies. At Springfield, the women have developed a new plan of campaign. A few of the principal sample-rooms are designated, and each is visited by four committees, singing and praying in quick succession. Dinner is cooked and eaten by the whole corps at one of the churches, so no time is lost. The whisky ring has met, and resolved not to admit committees to the saloons any more. The saloon-keepers have raised a fund to carry on a defensive war. They are a bad lot, but the women do not despair of ultimate success. In Jeffersonville, Ind., the crusade has begun in earnest, and threatens to spread across the Ohio river to Louisville. Praying and singing bands are holding forth in churches and saloons every day. Illinois, too, has been invaded by the contagion. At Danville, Lexington, and other towns, the friends of the temperance cause are preparing for an onslaught upon the common enemy. In Milwaukee, and other points in Wisconsin, the report comes that the anti-rum hosts are marshaling for the fray.

The women of Hamilton, Ohio, are thoroughly organized for a raid on the numerous saloons of that city. At Morrow, a saloon-keeper has procured an injunction against Mrs. Grimes and 159 other ladies, who, he alleges, have damaged him to the extent of $1,000. The crusade has struck McConnellsville, Piqua, Mount Vernon, Madisonville, Delaware and other large Ohio towns, and the war rages at red-hot heat, many of the saloon-keepers and druggists yielding without offering opposition.

At Manchester, Iowa, the women last week commenced a praying and singing raid on the saloons. The fever is breaking out in other points in the State.

The temperance advocates in St. Louis are preparing for a revival in that city on the Ohio plan.

The war has broken out in Nebraska. At Lincoln, the capital of the State, the women are thoroughly organized, and a few days ago commenced work in earnest, visiting saloons, and praying for the rum-sellers to abandon their iniquitous trade.

The fever is extending to the large cities. In Chicago the temperance people are talking of organizing. In Indianapolis and Jersey City the ladies have banded together, and are visiting the large saloons, armed with prayer and hymn-books.

The crusade has reached Rock Island and Yorkville, Ill. In the former place forty-eight saloon men have been indicted by the grand jury for violations of the State law. If the prosecution of these men fails to close the rum mills, it is intimated that the women will organize themselves into proper bands, and will not rest till the cohorts of King Alcohol have been routed. In Oswego, Kendall county, the ladies have organized, and are holding prayer-meetings in such saloons as will admit them.

At Danville and Bloomington, Ill., the women are organizing for a raid on the gin mills.

The crusade has spread to Minnesota, and the temperance advocates of St. Paul, Minneapolis and other towns are organizing for the work.

Five saloon-keepers in Springfield, Ohio, have been fined in sums of $50 to $450 each for violation of the Adair liquor law.

THE INDIANS.

Expeditions Fitting Out to Meet the Hostile Savages—The Sioux Reported in Large Force Near the Platte River.

The news from the plains seems to indicate that war between the whites and Indians is inevitable, and the busy note of preparation is heard all along the frontier line. The savages are represented by a dispatch from Cheyenne "as red-hot—worse than in 1865." Gov. Furnas, of Neb., is very much alarmed, and went to Washington last week to procure arms for the citizens of the State.

He states that some 12,000 or 14,000 Sioux are moving in a southeasterly direction from the Big Horn Mountain and Powder River country, threatening the settlements on the Platte. He is evidently seriously impressed with the danger that menaces the people of his State. The laws prohibiting such action as he desires, Secretary Belknap was compelled to deny his request, although he did so very unwillingly.

An Omaha dispatch says: "Arrangements are in progress at the Department headquarters for fitting out expeditions to the White Stone and Red Cloud Agencies. It is believed by well-informed officials here that, if the soldiers cross the Platte, as they must necessarily do to reach the exposed agencies, there will be a fight. In that country there are 60,000 Indians and about 45,000 Sioux, one in five of whom is a figthing man. Well-informed officials are of the opinion that these Indians can muster from 10,000 to 12,000 men. Large amounts of ammunition are being shipped from the Forts Leavenworth and Rock Island Arsenals to the various ports in this Department. All post commanders have been ordered to keep their commands in readiness to take the field against the Indians on a moment's notice."

A Cheyenne telegram says: "A war is inevitable between here and the Sioux Indian reservation. The country is rolling and fine grazing, and there are not less than 50,000 head of catte there, but we would rather have war than peace when we are robbed and murdered with impunity."

LATER advices from the frontier indicate that hostilities in the vicinity of the Indian agencies are not so imminent as at first supposed. It is now believed that the hostile savages have gone to the Big Horn country, to gain time for laying their plans for the coming campaign, and to summon the northern nations to their assistance. The military expedition now fitting out at Cheyenne will march to the agencies, but it is not believed they will encounter any opposition. It is the opinion of many that the reports of depredations from the frontier have been grossly exaggerated, that there will be no Indian war, but that the Commissioners will settle the matter by another treaty.

Ohio Men at the Head of the Nation.

Ohio certainly has no reason to complain of her representation in the high places of the nation. President Grant was born and lived most of his life, prior to the war, in Ohio. The General of the army, Sherman, is an Ohio man, and so is Sheridan, the Lieutenant-General. Secretary Delano is a citizen of Ohio, so is Justice Swayne, of the Supreme Court, and so is Mr. Schenck, our Minister to England. The late Chief-Justice Chase was from Ohio, and now the new incumbent, Chief-Justice Waite, is taken from the same State. Thus Ohio men stand at the head of the civil, the military, the judicial, and diplomatic departments of the Government. Since the organization of the Government, we doubt whether there has been a time when men from any one State filled so many of the highest national positions. And there are still several men in Ohio who would accept office under the national Government if pressed to do so.—Hearth and Home.

Odd Phrases.

The origin of the term sub-rosa, or "under the rose," is said to be the following: Cupid gave a rose to Hippocrates, the God of Silence, and from this legend arose the practice of suspending a rose from the ceiling over the table while eating, when it was intended that the conversation must be kept secret. The explanation of the origin of "By hook or by Crook" is that in the old time, persons entitled to get firewood in the King's forest, were limited to such dead branches as they could tear down with "a hook or a crook, without hurt to his Majesty's tree." "In spite of his teeth" originated thus: King John of England once demanded of a Jew the sum of ten thousand marks, and on being refused, ordered that the Israelite should have one of his teeth drawn every day until he gave his consent. The Jew submitted to the loss of seven, and then paid the required sum, and hence the expression, "in spite of your teeth."

THE Athenians who put a boy to death for killing a bird, because the act indicated a cruel disposition, would have dealt more harshly with Patrick Naughton than did the Cincinnati Police Court, which sentenced him to six months' imprisonment for burning a dog. Naughton, an engineer on the Little Miami Railroad, was standing idly by his engine fire when the unoffending brute was thrown up to him by somebody. Holding the dog in one hand, he opened the door of the furnace with the other, and tossed the animal into the flames. Then he closed the door. His excuse was that he was absent-minded on account of the strike.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S taxable property is valued at $184,000,000. In 1860 it was $490,030,000.

Nathan Rothschild, of London.

The high priest of the Exchange was not happy even in the midst of his overflowing coffers. Naturally enough, he had few friends and numberless enemies. In his later years he suffered from constant dread of assassination. He was always receiving threatening letters, declaring that his life depended on his sending certain sums of money to certain addresses. He scented murder in every breeze—suspected poison in every cup. In sleep, he had nightmare visions of crouching things; in waking hours, he started at every unexpected noise.

One morning two strangers were announced as having important business with the banker, and they were shown into his private office. He bowed to them and inquired the nature of their negotiation. They bowed and said nothing, but advanced toward him, thrusting their fingers nervously into their pockets. Rothschild's alarm was excited at once. They must be searching for concealed weapons; their bearded faces made it clear to his excited fancy that they were homicidal ruffians. He retreated in terror behind a large desk, seized a ponderous ledger, hurled it at their heads, and screamed "Murder!" at the top of his voice. A small army of clerks poured into the room and laid violent hands on the strangers, who proved to be wealthy Polish bankers bringing letters of int[illegible]tion to the (physically timid) li[illegible]ans. Embarrassed by his au[illegible]ly august presence—what is there [illegible] breathing money-bag capable of [illegible]ring awe?—they forgot their [illegible] their common coolness of conduct. They were nearly as much terrified as the renowned Israelite; and as it was their initial visit to England, they imagined at first that all foreigners were deemed robbers and desperadoes until the contrary was established.

The wretchedly rich Nathan never went out alone after dark, never entered an unlighted room, had servants within call of his bed-chamber, and slept with loaded pistols under his pillow.

A fellow-Frankforter, dining with him one evening, and observing the luxury of his household, remarked, "You must be happy, baron, with the power to gratify every wish."

"Happy, indeed!" was the response. "Do you think it happiness to be haunted always by a dread of murder—to have your appetite for breakfast sharpened by a threat to stab you to the heart unless you enclose a thousand guineas to some unknown villain?"

On one occasion, when the great financier had been to an evening party, and had gotten into his carriage to go home, a friend wishing to make an appointment, stepped out to speak to him. The timorous banker mistook his familiar friend for a highwayman, and thrust a pistol out of the carriage window, with his favorite cry of "Murder!" before he could be acquainted with the situation.

As Rothschild grew richer and older his fears increased. He became almost a monomaniac on the subject of assassination, and many of his relatives thought him in serious danger of insanity through his constant apprehensions. Most of the menacing messages were unquestionably sent him by his enemies, with whom he was plentifully supplied. Conscious of his weakness, they revenged themselves upon him by inspiring him with baseless terrors. He was repeatedly told so, but he could not be induced to believe that he did not dwell in an atmosphere of poisons, poniards and pistols.—Harper's Magazine.

Healing Lung Diseases.

We find the following reported, and give it for what it may be worth. So many cures for consumption have been advertised that it is well to be skeptical: "Dr. William Kock, of Berlin, well known to specialists from his investigations in the domain of surgery, and from his treatise on gunshot fractures, has discovered a new method of treatment for consumption. It consists in healing up the affected portions of the lungs by injections of iodine, so as to check the process of festering, which is the origin of the disease. The treatment has been tested in the great hospitals of Berlin within a short time, among others at the Royal Charity, in the presence of the most eminent surgeons. All the reports of the cases in which this treatment has been administered are favorable, and hold out a promise of a complete cure. For years Dr. Kock has been trying the experiment with animals, having tested it with more than three hundred, at a vast outlay of time and money."

Cure for Cancers.

A writer in Coleman's Rural World gives the following recipe for the cure of cancers:

Take chloride of zinc, blood root pulverized, and wheat flour, equal parts or quantities, worked into a paste, and applied until the mass comes out. First, spread a common sticking plaster much larger than the cancer, cutting a circular piece from the center of it a little larger than the cancer, applying it, which exposes a narrow rim of healthy skin; then apply the cancer plaster, and keep it on twenty-four hours. On removing it the cancer will be burned into, and appears the color of an old shoe sole, and the rim outside will appear white and parboiled, as if burned by steam. Dress with slippery-elm poultice until suppuration takes place, then heal with common salve. I've known the above to cure.

The Wind Cutting Capers.

They have queer atmospheric phenomena out in Colorado. Not long ago a man was walking down Virginia Canon, when he was surprised by a sudden roaring sound, not unlike that made by a train of cars passing through a tunnel. Stopping a moment to listen, a whirlwind, apparently not more than a yard in diameter, and travelling no faster than a spirited walk, picked him up, as it were, and waltzed off down the road with him. Its vertical force was sufficient to invert the tails of his coat above his head, notwithstanding the pockets were loaded with specimens of silver ore, and at the same time he was carried along for a hundred feet or more, like a feather, while under him was a noise like that of an empty cart bouncing over a stony street.

FARM, FIELD, AND FAMILY.

FARM TALK.

Scions for grafting may be cut at any time previous to the starting of the buds in the spring, and when cut should be kept in a cool cellar, where they will not dry up.

EXTERMINATION OF TREE-BEETLES, ETC.—An old, well-dried barrel, smeared internally with tar, having a properly protected lighted lamp in the bottom, will collect large quantities of beetles during a night.

IT is said that Mr. Husted of Lowell, Mich., has tried with success the plan of putting bands of one thickness of paper around the stems of his apple-trees to catch the moth. When woodpeckers have torn the papers into shreds in their search for the concealed enemy, new bandages are applied.

—To cure colic in horses, melt a pint of hog's lard over a slow fire, add soot from the chimney until it becomes as thick as cream, add two or three pods of red pepper, pour the mixture into a bottle and give to the animal. If the horse is not quickly relieved, repeat the dose.

—The Agriculturist gives this remedy for founders:—As soon as the horse is found to be stiff swab the legs and feet with hot water—so hot that the hand cannot bear to touch it, but not so hot as to scald. After a short time the legs should be rubbed dry and the horse gently exercised. Has never known this to fail to remedy the trouble.

HOW TO CHOOSE A GOOD COW.—A writer in the Northwestern Farmer says: "The crumpley horn is a good indication; a full eye another. Her head should be small but short. Avoid the Roman nose; this indicates thin milk, and but little of it. See that she is dished in the face—sunk between the eyes. Notice that she is what stock men call a good handler—skin soft and loose, like the skin on a dog; deep from the loin to the udder, and a very slim tail. A cow with these marks never fails to be a good milker."

PERMANENCE OF ORCHARD GRASS.—A writer in the Philadelphia Press says that he has had a field of grass over thirty years, that still gives bounteous crops, "breast high at maturity." The soil is a strong sandy loam. It was originally seeded in connection with red clover and timothy, which were long ago run out, and there is now some white clover and blue grass, which aids to make a thick and nutritious bottom growth; but the orchard grass maintains the supremacy, and he knows of nothing—lucern excepted—which will yield annually so much cattle food. But it is even superior to lucern, because better adapted to the climate of the North.

FEEDING CORN TO HOGS.—As another evidence of the increased profit of feeding corn on the farm to swine, over selling the grain in market, a writer in the Cincinnati Gazette gives the following testimony: In August, 1872, I bought thirty-seven head of hogs at four dollars per one hundred weight, the average weight being 126 pounds. Cost of the lot $186.48. On December 10th, when I sold them, the average weight was 270 pounds, or a gain of 144 pounds per head. They ate twelve bushels of corn apiece. This at twenty-five cents per bushel would be three dollars. The total cost of the hogs, when fattened, was, therefore, $267.40. I sold them at four dollars per cwt., amounting to $399.60. Balance in favor of feeding, $101.12. By feeding my corn, it brought me nearly 48 cents per bushel."

SHEEP AND COWS TOGETHER.—A correspondent of the Practical Farmer writes: I have been farming and keeping sheep nineteen years. During the last seven years I have been keeping thoroughbred Southdowns, carefully selected from some of the flocks in the country. My lambs have averaged me $10 a piece, and the wool $2 for each sheep. I think I can keep one sheep and one cow to every acre, on a given amount of pasture land, just as well as to keep the cow alone. In regard to alleged injurious effects affirmed by some of keeping sheep and dairy cows in the same pasture, I will state that I have never observed them. And if there were any injurious effects resulting from the practice, it would be confined to the short space of time intervening between first turning to pasture and harvest, say from the the first of May to the middle of July. Sheep prefer and will cling to the old pasture, while cows are continually seeking and longing for new.

HOUSEHOLD AND KITCHEN.

If the crust to bread is wished tender, as soon as the loaves are taken out of the oven, wrap them in a wet cloth wrung from cold water, and then lay over it a dry towel.

GROUND RICE GRUEL.—Boil one tablespoonful of ground rice, rubbed smooth with cold water, in a pint and a half of milk, with a bit of cinnamon and lemon peel. Sweeten slightly, or season with salt.

TO REMOVE FLESHWORMS.—Liquor of potassa, one ounce; cologne water, two ounces; white brandy, four ounces. Wash with warm water, apply coarse towel vigorously; then use this preparation.

SAGO GRUEL.—Take three tablespoonfuls of sago and wash in cold water; then add one quart of boiling hot milk and boil for twenty minutes; sweeten and flavor with lemon peel, or a tablespoonful of brandy.

TAPIOCA JELLY.—Wash a teacupful of tapioca—soak it for three hours in cold water—turn off the water and pour over it one quart of boiling water. Add the grated peel of one lemon; sweeten to taste, and boil for one hour.

HONEY SOAP.—Dissolve two pounds of yellow soap in a dish suspended in a kettle of boiling water. Add a quarter of a pound each of strained honey and palm oil, and three cents' worth of oil of cinnamon. When cold, it is ready for use.

STRENGTHENING JELLY.—Boil in two quarts of water one ounce of rice, one ounce of sago, and one ounce of pearl barley, until reduced one-half. Strain into a mold. Take a teacupful, morning, noon and night. It can be sweetened and flavored to taste.

A PIECE of red pepper, the size of your finger-nail, put into meat or vegetables when first beginning to cook, will aid greatly in killing the unpleasant odor arising therefrom. Remember this for boiled cabbage, green beans, onions, chickens, mutton, etc.

CORN FRITTERS.—Young, sweet corn, pepper, salt, nutmeg, butter hot in the pan. Grate the corn from the cobs into a basin, season and drop by spoonfuls into the pan and fry until brown. This is a delicious breakfast relish, but requires a considerable time to prepare.

ISINGLASS JELLY.—Boil one ounce of isinglass shavings with a slice of brown bread crust and a handful of Jamaica peppers, in one quart of water, until it is reduced to a pint. Strain into a mold. A tablespoonful of this jelly taken in milk is a good tonic for dyspepsia.

FRUIT CREAMS.—Dissolve half an ounce of isinglass in warm water enough to cover it; add this to a pint of cream sweetened with four spoonfuls of sugar and boil it. When cool lay some apricot, raspberry or peach preserves in a glass dish and pour the cream over it.

PRESERVATION OF EGGS.—Eggs are preserved in France by smearing them all over with a solution of beeswax in double the quantity of olive oil with the finger. The shell is rendered air-tight, and when packed in bran or chaff and kept dry the eggs may be preserved for months. Rubbing the eggs with linseed oil has been successful in preserving them for six months.

TO PRESERVE CLOTHING PINS.—They should be boiled a few moments and quickly dried once or twice a month, when they become more flexible and durable. Cloth lines will last longer and keep in better order for wash-day service, if occasionally treated in the same manner.

TO PREVENT COLD FEET AT BED-TIME.—Draw off your stockings just before undressing, and rub your ankles and feet well with your hand, as hard as you can bear the pressure, for five or ten minutes, and you will never have to complain of cold feet in bed. It is hardly conceivable what a pleasurable glow this diffuses. Frequent washing of the feet, and rubbing them thoroughly dry with a linen cloth or flannel, is very useful.

TO MEND RUBBER SHOES.—Get a piece of pure rubber—an old shoe—vulcanized rubber will not do; cut it in small bits. Put it into a bottle, and cover to twice its depth with spirits of turpentine or refined coal oil naptha. Stop the bottle and set to one side, shaking it frequently. The rubber will soon dissolve. Then take the shoe and place the rip or cut close together, and put on the rubber solution with a camel's hair brush. Continue to apply as it dries, until a thorough coating is formed. Spirits of turpentine dissolves the rubber slowest, but forms the most elastac cement.

Intelligence of Hogs.

Hogs often show great intelligence and aptitude to learn. A forester had a Chinese pig which followed him like a dog, came at call, and ran up and down stairs. It learned to blow and perform several tricks. It was very expert in hunting mushrooms, and, when told to keep watch, it would remain at its post until called away. When its owner said, "I am going to kill you, it would lie down on its back and stretch out its legs.

When Louis XI. was sick, in order to relieve the sadness of his mind, a nobleman thought of teaching a pig to dance, and bringing it before him. It was not long before a pig could hop about very well to the sound of a bagpipe. They then dressed it with coat, pantaloons, necktie, hat, sword, etc., in short, all that the court gentlemen of the time were accustomed to wear, and introduced it into the presence of the king. The animal bowed, danced, and followed all orders in the most artistic manner, until, getting tired, it became so awkward that the king roared with laughter, to the delight of his courtiers.

An English gentleman carefully trained a hog for hunting. "Slug," for so the hog was called, was very fond of the chase, and was ever on the alert when the huntsmen were preparing to start; but the dogs could not endure its company, and their owner was never able to make use of both at the same time. "Slug" could scent a bird from a great distance, and would dig in the earth to show where it had been. When the bird hopped it followed like a dog.

Hogs have been trained for draught. A countryman was in the habit of going to St. Albans market in a small cart drawn by four hogs. Another countryman won a wager that his hog would carry him on its back four miles in one hour. These facts are cited to show that the hog is a much more intelligent animal than we give him credit for. However, every kind-hearted person will disapprove of teaching dumb creatures to perform tricks. For our own part, we take no pleasure in seeing dancing bears and spelling pigs; for the process of training draws so deeply on our sympathy, that we look upon everything of the kind as the torturing of animals.

An Old Fortification.

The Spanish fort of San Juan de Pinos, now called Fort Marion, at St. Augustine, Fla., is the oldest fortification on the Western continent still used as a place of defense. It covers about an acre of ground, and would accommodate a garrison of 1,000 men, with 100 guns. It was begun in 1620, and completed in 1756, the Indians being compelled to do the labor of building. Over the entrance is the Spanish coat of arms and the name of the then Governor, the Chief Engineer of the works, and the date of the completion of the fort. In 1835 a dungeon was discovered by the caving of a wall from above, and in it were two iron cages just large enough to admit the body of a man, and each contained a human skeleton. Who the victims, were there is no tradition to tell. In one of the dungeons Osceola was chained, previous to his removal to Fort Moultrie. The fort is now garrisoned by an old Sergeant.

Origin of the Dollar Mark.

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly has a curious paper on the origin of the dollar-mark ($). In brief, the theory is that the two parallel upright marks may be traced back to the pillars of Hercules, and the S-like figure is the scroll entwined around them. According to tradition, when the Tyrian colony landed on the Atlantic coast of Spain, and founded the ancient of Gades, now Cadiz, Malcarthus, the leader of the expedition, set up two stone pillars as memorials, over which was built a temple of Hercules. As the temple increased in wealth, the stone pillars were replaced by others, made of an alloy of gold and silver, and these two pillars became, in time, the emblem of the city, as a horse's head became that of Carthage. Centuries later, when Charles V. became Emperor of Germany, he adopted a new coat of arms, in which the pillars of Gades, or Cadiz, occupied a prominent position in the device. Hence, when a new coin, the colonnato, was struck at the Imperial Mint, it bore the new device—two pillars, with a scroll entwined around them. The coin became a standard of value in the Mediterranean, and the pillars and scroll became its accepted symbol in writing.

The two horizontal bars which cross the symbol of the English pound sterling are also thought to have a similar origin. In the same paper the symbolic origin of the pillars of Hercules is traced far back into the remote era prior to the dispersion of the human race from its Asiatic birthplace. They are identified with the household pillars of the Scandinavians, and the idea from which the concrete embodiments spring is to be found alike in the Sanskri Vedas and in the glowing imagery of the Hebrew poets. They are the symbols of night and day, of light and darkness, which, to the dawning intelligence of the Arian races, were evidences of the Omnipotent, and, to the Jewish patriarchs, the work of a revealed Creator.

The Elder Booth Acting in French.

In these days, when so much wonder has been excited by the performance in English of Mr. Fechter and Madame Janauschek, it may be interesting to remember that so far back as 1828 Junius Brutus Booth (the elder) achieved one of the greatest triumphs the stage has known. Playing in French in the character of Orestes, in Racine's tragedy of "Andromaque," his accentuation was so perfect, and every peculiarity of French acting so minutely observed by him, that the astonishment and delight was general. At the close he was loudly called for, and cries of "Talma! Talma!" saluted him amid every sound of applause and approbation. Speaking of the performance, the critic of the New Orleans Courier of the day wrote: "A spectacle of deep interest, one as novel as it was pleasing, was offered last Tuesday night in the Orleans Theater of the lovers of dramatic talents. Yielding to the solicitations of several gentlemen of this city, Mr. Booth consented to present himself before a French audience in the part of Orestes. This effort, perilous in the extreme, and which nothing but a wish to give to Frenchmen an opportunity of judging fairly of what is termed the English style of tragic acting could have urged Mr. Booth to risk, has been crowned with the most flattering success. The ever-increasing interest excited by the warmth of his feelings, the earnestness of his manner, and the impetuous ardor of his delivery, and above all, whenever passion rose high, when the furies goaded Orestes to crimes, criticism was merged in admiration, and with one voice all wondered that a stranger should thus feel and express all the beauties of Racine."

Going Down into the Sea.

The International for January has a remarkable article on "Deep Sea Explorations," by Prof. Carpenter. A diver can only explore the sea to the depth of about 120 feet. But the most delicate instrument have been constructed that can give us reports from the very bottom of the sea. The cords in use are about the size of a quill, and these, if made of the finest hemp, will bear a strain of more than half a ton. The sounding brass is a long, hollow brass rod, fitted with valves that open upward so as to close upon and retain any water or sediment gathered at the bottom. The sinkers weigh 100 pounds each, and are so hung that when the red touches bottom they fall off and remain there. The pressure exerted by the water on the apparatus is about a ton to every square inch for every 4,800 feet of depth; so that to reach the bottom of the Atlantic in its greatest depth a weight of five tons to the square inch must be indorsed. The results of recent explorations make us almost as well acquained with the currents; the hills and plains, the sediments, the strange inhabitants and plants, the thermometrical condition of the deep seas, as we are with those of the continents.

Riding After Reindeers.

I wanted to see the Laps and drive a reindeer. They can go fifty miles an hour for two hours daily. The sledges are narrow, and have an oscillating motion, and one unaccustomed to them will tumble out in all directions. You drive with one line only; that reaches from the animal's horns, and is tied around your arm. After you get pitched out, the reindeer stops when he gets tired of dragging you through the snow. Sometimes they 'bout face and buck you out, and not infrequently perform that task by kicking. I was keeled out by a kick and snatched along two hundred yards at the rate of nearly a mile a minute. We drove to an acquaintance who owned four thousand reindeer. I went into his tent, and found men, women, dogs and other animals sleeping together, and I found so many fleas there that I took my bag and went out to sleep in a snow-bank.—Du Chaillu.

Seventh—Thou shalt not excite quarrels.
Eighth—Thou shalt not hate.
Ninth—Have faith in holy writings.
Tenth—Believe in immortality.

THE GRANGERS.

Proceedings of the National Convention of the Patrons of Husbandry, at St. Louis.

NINTH AND LAST DAY.

The National Grange was principally occupied during the day in saying farewell, and little business was transacted.

The report of the Committee on the Boston Grange, which disfranchises and declares that body extinct, was adopted.

The report of the Committee on Transportation, after being presented and partially discussed, was withdrawn on the ground that it was too specific and not general enough in character, and the whole matter lies over until the next annual meeting.

Master Wardlaw, of Florida, delivered the closing speech, as follows:

When Florida is called upon to place a beautiful wreath upon the still more beautiful brow of some lovely sister, Florida not only responds with alacrity, but esteems it a pleasure, a high and honored privilege. But, to say farewell, to bid adieu to brothers and sisters, to the [illegible] [illegible] with which we have been surrounded during the Convention, is truly unpleasant—is terribly embarrassing—touching a tender chord. I have always appreciated the noble sentiment, that the heart feels most when the lips move not but the eye speaks a gentle good-bye.

Very soon, worthy Master, the sound of your gavel will be heard, and the question asked our Worthy Overseer, "Are the labors of the day completed?" and the response will come back, "They are, Worthy Master." Then will the solemn significance of these words, reverberating through the hall, perhaps for the last time, be felt by many of us as never before. How it should remind us of the important necessity of being prepared to meet where parting is no more!

When Virgil bade adieu to his beloved in those beautiful, touching, prophetic words, "Vale, vale, formosa puella," we repeat but to admire. When Napoleon Bonaparte looked upon his lovely Josephine, and turned from her in consummation of the darkest deed of his life, afterwards to be banished to lonely exile, the reminiscence but tends to give us pain. But, Worthy Master, many practical illustrations are afforded us of the band of brothers and sisters mingling together for days in the most harmonious social and friendly accord, gathered as they have been in this hall from all quarters of the Union, who rejoice but to sorrow at the necessity of separation. Sad though the thought—though solemn the truth—some of us will never meet again.

It is gratifying, however, Worthy Master, to know, as I honestly believe, that this meeting, by its wide-spread influence from North to South, from East to West, caps the last arch that shades the bridge of the unfortunate bloody chasm. As it was my sad pleasure, as the Representative of the State of Florida, fourteen years ago, in the Charleston Convention, to deliver a short eulogy upon one of Green Mountain's honored sons, ex-Gov. Robinson, who was suddenly stricken down by death on the second morning of the session, if my brother from Vermont will meet me on this floor, we will clasp hands with the Patron's grip, silently and invoking God's blessings, illustrating the truth that "United we stand divided we fall."

Worthy Master, one more word, and then I am done. May we all prove worthy of our vocation; do all we can in accordance with the principles of right, to promote the good of our Order; and may a kind overruling Providence grant us a happy reunion at Charleston, S. C. [Applause.]

The grange then adjourned to meet in Charleston, S. C., the first Wednesday in February next.

The Invalid and the Violinist.

An old and infirm soldier was playing his violin one evening on the Prater at Vienna. His faithful dog was holding his hat, in which passers-by dropped a few coppers as they came along. On the evening in question, however, nobody stopped to put a small coin into the poor old fellow's hat; every one went straight on, and the gayety of the crowd added to the sorrow which swelled the old soldier's heart, and showed itself in his withered countenance.

All at once, however, a well-dressed gentleman came up to where he stood, listened to his playing for a few minutes, and gazed compassionately upon him. Ere long the old fiddler's weary hand had no longer strength left to grasp his bow; his limbs refused to carry him further; he seated himself on a stone, rested his head on his hands, and began silently to weep. At that instant the gentleman approached, offered the old man a piece of gold, and said:

"Lend me your violin a little while."

Then having carefully tuned it, he said:

"You take the money and I'll play!"

He did play! All the passers-by stopped to listen, struck with the distinguished air of the musician, and captivated by his marvelous genius. Every moment the circle became larger and larger. Not copper alone, but silver and even gold, was dropped into the poor man's hat. The dog began to growl, for it was becoming too heavy for him to hold. At an invitation from the audience the invalid emptied its contents into his sack, and they filled it again. After a national melody, in which every one present joined with uncovered heads, the violinist placed the instrument upon the poor man's knees, and, without waiting to be thanked, disappeared.

"Who is it?" was asked on all sides. "It's Armand Boucher, the famous violin-player," replied some one in the crowd. "He has been turning his art to account in the service of charity. Let us follow his example."

And the speaker sent round his hat also, made a new collection, and gave the proceeds to the invalid, crying, "Long live Boucher!"

Deeply affected, the invalid lifted up his hands and eyes toward heaven, and invoked God's blessing on his benefactor.

There were that evening two happy men in Vienna: the invalid—placed for a long time above the reach of want—and the generous artist, who felt in his heart the joy of doing good, according to the words of Scripture, which says, "The merciful man doeth good to his own soul."

CONGRESSMAN SAYLER, of Indiana (the Ohio Congressman with the same sounding name is Saylor), has introduced a bill, which, if passed, would work a revolution in the patent business. One is prejudiced in its favor from the first, for almost any change would be an imprvement. After a careful examination of its provisions we believe it entirely feasible, thoroughly just and quite important. The plan, in a word, is to throw the use of all patents open to all persons who will pay to the owner a certain equitable royalty for their use. This would be striking a blow at the roots of the worst monopolies in the manufacture of articles into which patents extend in one way or another.—Chicago Journal.

SOME years ago, Sir B. Guinness, the great Dublin brewer, gave £100,000 for the restoration of St. Patrick's (Protestant) cathedral in that city. Another great brewer, Mr. Matthew D'Arcy, M. P. for County Wexford, has now offered Cardinal Cullen £100,000 to build a new Catholic cathedral.

Attacked by Vampires.

A gentleman states that, while in Surinam, he awoke about four o'clock one morning, and was considerably alarmed by finding himself weltering in congealed blood, and was unable to account for this, as he felt no pain whatever. "The mystery," says he, "was that I had been bitten by a vampire or specter of Guana, which is also called the flying dog of New Spain. This is no other than a bat of monstrous size, that sucks the blood from men and cattle while they are fast asleep, even, sometimes till they die; and as the manner in which they proceed is truly wonderful, I will endeavor to give a clear account of it. Knowing by instinct that the person that they intend to attack is in a sound slumber, they generally alight near the feet, where, while the creature continues fanning with his enormous wings, which keeps one cool, he bites a piece out of the great toe, so very small indeed that the head of a pin could scarcely be received into the wound, which is consequently not painful; yet through this orifice he continues to suck the blood until he is obliged to disgorge. He then begins again, and thus continues sucking and disgorging until he is scarcely able to fly, and the sufferer has often been known to pass from time to eternity. Cattle they generally bite in the ear, but always in places where the blood flows spontaneously. Having applied tobacco ashes, as the best remedy, and washed the gore from myself and hammock, I observed several heaps of congealed blood all around the place where I had lain, upon the ground, on examining which the surgeon judged that I had lost about fourteen ounces of blood."

Critical Periods of Human Life.

From the age of forty to that of sixty a man who properly regulates himself may be considered in the prime of life. His matured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to the attacks of disease, and all of the functions are in the highest order. Having gone a year or two past sixty, however, he arrives at a critical period of existence; the river of death flows before him, and he remains at a stand-still. But athwart this river is a viaduct called "The Turn of Life," which, if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of "Old Age," round which the river winds, and then flows beyond without a doubt of causeway to effect its passage. The bridge is, however, constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden whether it bend or break. Gout, apoplexy, and other bad characters are also in the vicinity to waylay the traveler and thrust him from the pass; but let him gird up his loins and provide himself with perfect composure. To quote a metaphor, the "turn of life" has a turn either into a prolonged walk or into the grave. The system and power, having reached their utmost expansion, now begin either to close, like flowers of sunset, or break down at once. One injudicious stimulant, a single fatal excitement, may force it beyond its strength, while a careful supply of props, and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant, will sustain it in its beauty and vigor until night has nearly set in.

Naming a Child.

One evening, at the house of Dr. Arnott (1853), Mr. Rowland Hill gave some curious traits of the wretched ignorance of a population of nailers in some central district of England with which he was acquainted. A clergyman exerted himself to effect an improvement, and took particular care to get their children baptized. One day, having come to baptize a newly born infant, whom he understood to be a boy, he asked what name he should give the child. The father was quite at a loss—had no predilections on the subject.

"Shall it be a Scripture name?"

Assent.

"Well, what Scripture name?"

The man agreed, at the minister's suggestion, that Benjamin would do. As he was retiring afterward, he heard a great shouting, and turning back, met the father who exclaimed:

"Sir, it wunna do—it maun be done again—the bairn's a wench!"

"Squat!"

From Dr. W. J. Jordan, a planter of Morehouse Parish, we learn the particulars of a most outrageous act of piracy, committed in that parish. It appears that the steamer Ellen D., which left here some months ago, fitted out for a trading expedition by Messrs. Krantafass & Gerson, was tied up at Point Jefferson, on Bouff river, during the greater part of last week. They had been doing a pretty good business, and felt satisfied with the result. On Friday, however, just before dark, five men, whom none of the traders had ever seen before, came aboard at nearly the same time. Some of them had crossed the river, others had ridden down to the landing by different approaches. No two arrived together, yet all arrived within the space of fifteen minutes. They were handsomely dressed, good-looking men in every instance, and there was a striking air of intelligence about them. With the exception of this prevailing similarity, they seemed to be quite unknown to each other, bent on entirely independent errands, and only assembled thus by the most unaccountable of accidents. They were sitting or standing about, as all customers on a trade boat are in the habit of doing. One, a particularly handsome fellow, had just bought and paid for a pair of boots; another was rejoicing in a new hat; others were contemplating different purchases, and everything seemed to be going on as usual. Suddenly the handsome man cast his eyes around, and said, in a low clear tone: "Shall we?" and instantly the other four started to their feet. "Ready!" they all answered, and quick as thought their pistols were drawn, presented at the heads of the clerk, salesman, pilot, and engineer of the hapless boat, and the laconic but suggestive command was given: "Squat!" It was done like lightning. Before those unsuspecting traders quite comprehended the state of things, they were tied, blindfolded, and lying helpless on the floor. The five elegant-looking gentlemen then proceeded below, where the four deck hands were subjected to a similar operation. After this the real business of the day commenced. It transpired that the five gentlemen knew each other quite intimately, for they laughed and talked in the pleasantest possible way, while they went through the safes and the stock of goods, taking all the money—about $1,000—and such of the goods as were at once valuable and portable. Their selections in the latter—which, by the way, evinced the greatest judgment—amounted to $500 and upward. After accomplishing all this with a neatness and dispatch quite remarkable, the party made off at a great rate, and were far advanced on their road when assistance came to the disconsolate victims on board the Ellen.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Gossip's Punishment.

In a small society like that of Edinburgh there was a good deal of scandal and gossip; every one's character and conduct were freely criticised, and by none more than by my aunt and her friends. She used to sit at a window embroidering, where she not only could see every one that passed, but with a small telescope could look into the dressing-room of a lady acquaintance, and watch all she did. A spinster lady of good family, a cousin of ours, carried her gossip so far, that she was tried for defamation, and condemned to a month's imprisonment, which she actually underwent in the Tolbooth. She was let out just before King's birthday, to celebrate which, besides the guns fired at the Castle, the boys let off squibs and crackers in all the streets. As the lady in question was walking up High street, some lads in a wynd, or narrow street, fired a small cannon, and one of the slugs with which it was loaded hit her mouth and wounded her tongue. This raised a universal laugh; and no one enjoyed it more than my uncle William, who disliked this somewhat masculine woman.—Mrs. Somerville's Autobiography.

The Last First.

Three hundred and fifty years ago Pope Julius II. undertook to settle the squabbles among the royal houses of Europe and their representatives at foreign courts by promulgating a complete list of seniority, which all were enjoined to accept and respect. It is a curious fact that of the twenty-six titles named but three now exist in that original form—the Pope, the Emperor of Germany, and the King of England. The Margrave of Brandenburg was placed number twenty in the list. His descendant now sits upon the throne of Germany. The Archduke of Austria, twenty-one in the old list, has become Emperor, and the Duke of Savoy, twenty-two, reigns King of Italy.

CONSUMPTION.—In a new work on consumption, by Dr. Henry MacCormac, of London, the theory is maintained that consumption, or tubercular disease, is caused solely by breathing air which has already been breathed, either by animals or human beings. The hourly elimination of carbonic acid by the lungs, amounts to ten or twelve hundred cubic inches, and if the air is already contaminated with that gas and with other organic effete substances, its power to remove these from the body is seriously injured, and the detritus of degeneration being retained, becomes tubercle.

After reviewing the death-rates of different capitals, the doctor concludes that the prevelance of consumption in Vienna may be traced directly to the use of close stoves, doubly glazed and padded windows, which are never opened, and consequently to living in chambers which are never ventilated. The case is the same in Petersburgh, where out of an annual mortality of 5,000, 1,900 die from consumption. In this capital double doors and windows, every interstice being carefully closed with wadded cloth, or violoh, excludes the currents of air, and along with the close stove, render stagnant the stinted, breath-fouled atmosphere, effectively hindering its replacement from without, and, in fine, entailing the direful scourge of tubercular disease, from which no class or condition of the community is exempt.

The Story of an old Bachelor.

There was a fine old general once who, having spent most of his life in the field of Mars, knew very little about the camp of Cupid. He was one of those rough and honest spirits often met with in his gallant profession, innocent as an infant of almost everything save high integrity and indomitable bravery. He was nearly fifty years old, and his toils were over, when Master Don Cupid brought him acquainted with a Widow Wadman, in whose eyes he began to detect something that made him uneasy. Here was the result:

During his service he had never seen anything worthy of notice in a woman's eye. In fact, he would scarcely have observed whether a woman had three eyes in her head, or only one; for, no matter where his own eyes were, his thoughts were ever among "guns, and drums, and wounds," and love was a thing that lived in many memory just as he remembered once reading a visionary story-book called the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments," when a boy.

Well, the general had settled down into an amiable, gentlemanly fellow, living alone, with comfortable wealth around him, and having little to do, save now and then to entertain an old comrade in arms, when companionship afforded opportunity for him to "fight his battles o'er again." But alas! o'er this calm evening of the old gentleman's day, a veil of perplexity was doomed to fall, and he soon found himself in troubled waters, the depths of which he could by no means understand. He floundered about like a caged rat under a pump, and such another melancholy fish out of water never before swallowed the bait, hook and all, of the angling god of love.

The poor general! We must give him a name, or we can't tell the story; and the best name for such a story is Uncle Toby. The poor general debated abstractedly about his new position, and never had siege or campaign given him such perplexity before.

At length, however, the blunt honesty of his disposition rose uppermost among his conflicting plans and his course was chosen. At school he once studied "Othelo's Defence," to recite at an exhibition, but made a great failure; and he now recollected there was something in this "Defence" very much like what he wanted to say. He got the book immediately, found the passage, clapped on his hat with a determined air, and posted off to the widow Wadman's with Shakespeare under his arm.

"Madam," said General Uncle Toby, opening his book at the marked place, with the solemnity of a special pleader at the bar. "Madam,—

'Rude am I in my speech,
And little blessed with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now, some nine moons wasted, they have used
Their dearest action in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats o. broils and battle;
And therefore—'"

Here the general closed the book, wiped his forehead, looked up at the ceiling, and said, with a spasmodic gasp,—

"I want to get married!"

The widow laughed for ten minutes by the watch before she could utter a syllable, and then she said, with precious tears of humor rolling down her good natured cheeks,—

"And who is it you want to marry, general?"

"You!" said Uncle Toby, flourishing his sword arm in the air, and assuming a military attitude of defiance, as if he expected an assault from the widow immediately.

"Will you kill me if I marry you?" said the widow, with a merry twinkle in her eye.

"No madam," replied Uncle Toby, in a most serious and deprecating tone, as if to assure her that such an idea had never entered his head.

"Well, then, I think I'll marry you," replied the widow.

"Thank you, ma'am," said Uncle Toby;" but one thing I am bound to tell you, madam—I wear a wig!"

The widow started, remained silent a moment, and then went into a longer, louder and merrier laugh than she had indulged in before, at the end of which she drew her seat nearer to the general, gravely laid her hand on his head, gently lifted his wig off, and placed it on the table.

General Uncle Toby had never known fear in hot battle, but he now felt a most decided inclination to run away. The widow laughed again, as though she never would stop, and the general was about to lay his hat upon his denuded head and bolt, when the facetious lady placed her hand upon his arm and detained him. She then deliberately raised her other hand to her own head, with a sort of military precision, executed a paid manoeuvre with her five fingers, pulled off her whole head of fine, glossy hair, and placed it upon the table by the side of the general's, remained seated with ludicrous gravity in front of her accepted lover—quite bald!

As may be expected, Uncle Toby now laughed along with the widow, and they soon grew so merry over the affair that the maid servant peeped through the key-hole at the noise, and saw the old couple dancing a jig, and bobbing their bald at each other like a pair of Chinese Mandarin. So the two very shortly were married.

How Shall a Women Wear her Stockings?

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

How shall a woman fasten her stockings so as not to interfere with the circulation, or spoil the shape of the le—let me see—of the honi soit qui mally pense. After the most careful research, as far as our limited facilities would allow, we arise from our humble explorations, and humbly tender the following suggestions:

Wear them short, and let the tops bubble over the shoe in the form of lace, a la beer mug.

If you have 'em long, put mucilage inside and stick 'em to you.

Have them long enough to tie about the waist, and use the top for a panier.

Edge the tops with steel and fasten a loadstone to your corset.

Fasten a strap to each stocking, extend them gracefully up each side of the body and attach, with blue ribbons, to the earrings.

Pin them to some other article of clothing in the immediate vicinity.

Fasten them to a nail and go barefooted.

Attach a small balloon to each stocking.

Make them out of material that will draw up.

If you are thirty-five and unmarried, make a hole near the top of each stocking and button it to your knee cap.

These are all the methods that suggest themselves to us at present and of the number some one or more may be deemed worthy of adoption. We have taken a sudden and lively interest in this matter, and shall not rest until the needed reform is brought about. Woman's limbs shall not be hampered, and knotted, and deformed if we have enough inventive faculty to bring about new and healthful ways of wearing the stocking, and we think we have We shall continue our investigation into this subject. What the women in this country most need is not suffrage, but symmetry; not a place in legislative halls, but a place to fasten their stockings

Serious Charge Against Senator Thurman.

From the St. Louis Democrat.

The Cincinnati Enquirer shows its independence of the "great political leaders" in Ohio by squarely demanding of Senator Thurman that he shall redeem some of the promises he made to his constituents during the last summer's campaign. The Senator then denounced the effort of the East to force the speedy resumption of specie payments as a deliberate measure of injustice to the west. The Enquirer says "he went further, and declared if God would give him strength to reach Washington his voice would be heard resisting this effort on the part of Eastern capitalists, which, if successful, would end in wide-spread financial ruin." He is reminded that the contest has been going on in Congress for more than two months, and that his voice has not yet been heard on either side. We fear that the Buckeye Senator has been gobbled by the monopolists. It was easy for him to talk boldly under the branches of the spreading buckeye to a crowd of coon-hunting Democrats in the Sunfish Mountains. With such surroundings Thurman can talk as loosely and curse the d—d Yankees and bloated bondholders as glibly as Brick Pomeroy; but when he gets to Washington he yields to the seductive influences of metropolitan life, and all his Democratic principles suffer a sort of sea-change. We sometimes fear that our Mr. Bogy may be led astray in the same manner.

The Nocternal Feline.

Yes, sir, I know lots of men who will start up in bed and shiver and shake, and curse and swear if a tomcat prowling along the garden fence, opens his jaws and utters one single yell. On the contrary, the midnight cat never disturbs me. In fact, I like to lay and listen to the music of a dozen cats holding mass convention on the garden fence.

As the first cat breaks out I heave a sigh and wonder if the world wouldn't be as well off without cats, but I don't get mad. Some men tear around and declare that they'll never sleep again until they kill every cat within a circle of four hundred and fifty miles; and nothing will soothe them.

After the third yell I wonder if it wouldn't be just as well if a bad boy should buy an ounce of arsenic, a pound of meat, and distribute the two around in back yards, but I don't go further. Some men jump out of bed and yell: "Where in thunder is the boot-jack—where's a club?" And they rush to the door and sling clubs and yell "scat!" and wake everybody on the block.

After the fifth yell, I wonder if I hadn't better raise the window and ask the cats to adjourn around the block, on account of my wife's nervousness, but I don't get mad. Some men allow their hair to come right up, fall over chairs, stub their toes against the stove, and exclaim: "Helen Blazes, but won't I sicken these felines!"

By and by the cats cease howling, and my eyelids begin to ache. I am rapidly losing conciousness, when the old Maltese rises to a question of order, and the opposition commences yelling him down. He yells back, and I get up to see what time it is, and then wonder if it wouldn't be as well for me to go out and explain matters, and entreat the convention to go down the fence to the grape arbor. Mind I don't run around after the shot gun, and wake up my wife and ask her for powder and old nails and broken glass, and bark my shin on the stove hearth and call out: "I'll kill a million cats to pay for this.

Maltese yields the floor, and the convention goes ahead in an orderly manner. I imagine that the business which called the crowd together has been disposed of and creep back to bed. My wife wakes and wants to know what I get up for, and I tell her I was after the peppermint for my neuralgia. Some men would lay and jaw and fume for an hour, and finally get up a fight with their loving parter.

I just close my eyes to sleep when old Maltese offers an amendment to some motion, and the opposition go for him again. He yells back, spits at the ... in scorn, and they fall upon him. He backs under my window and stands at bay. I creep out of bed and seize a club, but drop it again as I remember that I am not mad. It would, perhaps, be well to step to the door, and throw the boiler and the wood-box, and the cupboard, and the ax, and the wood-pile, and the whole summer kitchen, at the cats, but I refrain, and I merely tap on the window, and urge old Maltese to cover himself with glory. Some men would grab up the table or sofa, or the first thing handy and ejaculate: "I'm a sinner if I don't murder somebody or something!"—Years of observation have convinced me that the general antipathy to cats is entirely unfounded.

THE SPANISH SAILOR.

"It was that dreadful winter that the Spanish sailor was found. Ah, me! it is a pure white winter idyl."—Bret Harte.

The snow-fraught winds wailed drearily,
As might some hapless ghost,
That winter eve, long years ago,
On the lone New Jersey coast.

The night, with freezing, darkling glance,
Had frowned upon the day,
Till, paling with affright, the sun
In terror stole away.

The cattle shivered in their stalls,
Beneath each warm roof-tree;
The good folks whispered in their prayers,
"God help those out at sea!"

When, sudden piercing through the storm,
A sound there rose and fell,
A word in strangely foreign tone,
And sad as funeral bell.

The cabin door was open flung,
That all in woful plight
Might see, as 'twere a beacon fire,
The cheery homestead light.

Naught but the darkness met their gaze;
Their ears, the muffled roar
Of breaking waves on ice-bound coast
Of that lone ocean shore.

Again upon the midnight air
That weird cry faintly rose,
And "Christus!" "Christus!" broke upon
The cottagers' repose.

The morning dawns, and eager hands
The snow-drifts cast away,
But wondrous pitiful the sight
That there before them lay.

A bronzed and bearded mariner
Had perished that dread night,
In sight and sound of Christian souls,
Of rest, and warmth, and light!

And as they looked a shrill voice broke
Upon their startled sense,
As though once more the cold lips spoke,
O "Christus," take me hence!

All fled, save she, the youngest there,
Who fearlessly knelt down,
And smoothed the glossy raven hair,
And bearded cheek so brown.

And opening with her baby hands,
In curious, childish quest,
His jacket rough, found nestling close
Upon the dead man's breast.

A little foreign bird, with voice
Of mimic tone and power,
Whose soft wings glistened in the sun,
Like some bright tropic flower!

And oft in after years, when it
The household pet became,
It echoed its lost master's cry
Upon the holy name!

THE LAST FLOWER OF THE YEAR.

The gentian was the year's last child,
Born when the winds were hoarse and wild
With wailing over buried flowers,
The playmates of their sunnier hours.

The gentian hid a thoughtful eye
Beneath deep fringes, blue and shy;
Only by warmest noon-beams won,
To meet the welcome of the sun.

The gentian, her long lashes through,
Looked up into the sky of blue,
And felt at home—the color, there,
The good God gave herself to wear.

The gentian searched the fields around;
No flower-companion there she found.
Upward, from all the woodland ways,
Floated the aster's silvery rays.

The gentian shut her eyelids tight
On falling leaf and frosty night;
And close her azure mantle drew,
While dreary winds around her blew.

The gentian said, "The world is cold;
Yet one clear glimpse of heaven I hold.
The sun's last thought is mine to keep;
Enough—now let me go to sleep."

SCHOOLMASTER OF RUSSIAN BAR.

"When is he expected?"

"They said he was coming in to-night's stage."

"He taught in 'Frisco, didn't he?"

"Yes; I guess he was in the department."

The doctor's wife was an authority on all matters in Russian Bar and on this last sensation, the coming of a schoolmaster, she freely enlightened her neighbor, Mrs. Blunt, a plump widow, whose miner husband had died a few months before. There was not much to gossip about in that quiet village. The arrival and departure of the stage brought the people to their doors three times a week, and if a stranger was noticed, envoys were immediately dispatched to the hotel to learn his name and business and the probable length of his stay. But now Russian Bar was to have a new schoolmaster and the folks wondered much if he would have any trouble with Sam Seymour, the butcher's boy, or Ike Walker, an unruly spirit, who had knocked down and pummeled the last preceptor who undertook to teach him school discipline. The trustees were powerless in these matters and declared that if a schoolmaster was not able to "get away" with the boys in a square, stand-up fight, he might as well pick up his traps and leave Russian Bar.

On the very evening of the expected arrival, Seymour and Walker, the leading spirits of the mutinous schoolboys, met at a pool from which both were trying to coax a few speckled trout for supper.

"Have you heard what the new chap is like, Sam?" said Ike, as he impaled a wiggling worm on his hook.

"No; have you?"

"Father told Jake, the barkeeper, that he was very young."

"And small?"

"Yes."

"Guess he won't stay long in town, Ike."

"I guess not, Sam. School ain't good for us, such fine weather as this."

The worthies sat and fished in silence for some little time, and then Ike produced a bunch of cigarettes and passed them to his friend. At last, finding that the fish would not bite, they shouldered their poles and straggled up to the village, pausing a moment to stone a Chinaman's rooster, which had strayed too far from the protecting wash house.

Philip Houghton was a schoolmaster from necessity, and not taste. Like many who have been educated as gentlemen in one sense of the word, that is, without the acquaintance with any special pursuit that might be turned to any particular account in the struggle for bread, he found himself adrift in California with nothing to fall back on. Seeing an advertisement in a city paper for a competent teacher to take charge of the school at Russian Bar, he answered it, and was accepted at a venture. Putting his few movables together—a pair of old foils and a set of well worn boxing gloves, for Houghton was an accomplished boxer and fencer—he bought a ticket for Russian Bar.

He found the stage driver a communicative, pleasant fellow, who, at his request, described the characteristics of his future home. Indeed, his description of the class of boys whom Houghton was to take charge of, was not very encouraging. "You'll find them a hard lot," said he, "and they're all on the muscle, too."

"What is about the weight of my oldest?" asked Houghton, good-humoredly. "You see, if I have to exercise something more than moral suasion, I want to get posted on the physique of my men."

"Well, Sam Seymour is about the strongest."

"And what is about the size of the redoubtable Ike?"

"Well, I guess he tops you by half a head."

"O I expect we'll get along well enough together," said Houghton; "and I suppose this is the first glimpse of Russian Bar," he added, as a turn in the road brought them in view of that picturesque village.

The stage bowled along the smooth road and past the great white oak, under whose friendly branches the teamsters were accustomed to make their noontime halt.

"I'll set you down at the hotel," said the driver. "There's Perkins, the proprietor, that fat man smoking on the stoop."

Houghton confessed to himself that the prospect before him was anything but a prepossessing one. He was not of a very combative nature, though he liked a little danger for the excitement, but a game at fisticuffs with a dirty, mutinous boy, had neither glory nor honor for a man that had been one of the hardest hitters in his college.

The folks were all at their doors when the stage clattered up the single street, and the slender, good-looking young man by the driver was measured and canvassed before that worthy had passed the mail to the doctor, who, with his medical vocation, also found time to run the postoffice.

The doctor's wife was at her window, and, after a long survey of the schoolmaster, hastened to communicate her opinions to Mrs. Blunt. Meanwhile Houghton washed off the red dust of the road and took his seat at the supper table. The driver had introduced him to about a dozen of the leading citizens during the few minutes that intervened between their arrival and their evening meal.

"How do you like our town, Mr. Houghton?" asked the landlord, graciously, as he helped his new guest to a cut of steak.

"Well, it seems a pretty place."

"When you get acquainted you'll find yourself pleasantly situated; but you'll have a hard time with the boys."

"So they all tell me. Anyhow, I am not unprepared," said Houghton, cheerfully.

After supper the landlord remarked confidentially to the doctor "that the young man had grit in him, and he thought he'd be able to 'make the riffle' with the boys."

When Houghton arose next morning and opened his window to the fresh breeze, odorous with the perfume of the clambering honeysuckles, he felt that, after all, a residence in a remote village, even with a parcel of rough boys to take care of, was preferable to the dusty, unfamiliar streets of San Francisco. He smiled as he unpacked his foils and boxing-gloves, a little sadly, too, for they were linked with many pleasing associations of his under-graduate days.

"Well," he soliloquized, as he straightened his arm and looked at the finely-developed muscles, "I ought to be able to hold my own in a stand-up fight with these troublesome pupils of mine. This is my day of trial, however, and before noon we shall probably have had one battle out."

The schoolhouse, a raw, unfinished looking frame building, stood hard by the river, about half a mile from the town. When Houghton opened the rickety wooden gate that led into the school lot, he found a group of some twenty boys already assembled. Among them were Ike Seymour and Sam Walker. The latter's sister, a pretty girl of sixteen, was leaning against the fence with half a dozen of her friends, for the Russian Bar schoolhouse was arranged for the accommodation of both sexes.

Houghton handed the key to the nearest boy and asked him to open the door. With a look at the others, and a half grin on his face, he obeyed.

"Now, boys, muster in," said Houghton, cheerfully, to the boys.

They all passed in—Seymour and Walker last. The latter took a good look at the schoolmaster as he went by. When they were seated, Houghton stood at his desk and laid a heavy ruler on the books which were before him.

"Now, boys," he said, "I hope we shall get along pleasantly together. You treat me fairly and you shall have no reason to complain, I promise you. Silence and obedience are what I require, and a strict attention to the matter of our instruction."

Giving them a portion of the grammar to prepare for recitation, he walked quietly up and down the room, occasionally standing at the windows, but appearing to keep no surveillance on the boys. Suddenly the crack of a match was heard, followed by a general titter.

Houghton turned quietly from the window, and saw the blue smoke from a cigarito arising from where Seymour sat.

"What is your name, boy?" he asked, in a stern tone.

"My name is Seymour," replied the mutineer, insolently.

"And are you smoking?"

"I guess so."

"Leave the room!"

"I guess not."

There was a dead silence in the school room now, and Houghton felt that the hour of trial had come.

"Seymour," he said again, very quietly.

"What?"

"Come here."

Seymour, putting his hands in his pockets, sauntered from his desk, stood within a yard of the schoolmaster, and looked sneeringly into his face.

"Leave the room," said Houghton again, in a lower voice.

"No."

The lithe arm straightened like a flash of lightning and the rebel measured his length on the floor, while the blood gushed from his nostrils. In a moment he sprang to his feet and rushed furiously at the schoolmaster, but went down again like a reed before that well-aimed blow. The second time he fell, Houghton stooped down and, lifting him as if he had been a child, fairly flung him outside the door. Seymour, confused and amazed, staggered down to the brook to wash his face and reflect on the wonderful force of that slight arm. And Houghton, turning to the school without a word of comment on the scene, commenced the recitation. Walker was mum. Seymour's fate had appalled him, and, in fact, the entire mutinous spirit of the scholars of Russian Bar was in a fair way of being totally subdued.

When the trustees heard of the affair they unanimously commended the schoolmaster's pluck.

"I tell you what, boys," said Perkins to a crowd who were earnestly engaged at a game of old sledge in his bar-room, "that Houghton knows a thing or two about managing boys. He'll fix 'em off, or my name's not Perkins."

Houghton was hospitably treated by the folks at Russian Bar. They felt him to be a man of refinement, but brought down in the world, but showing no offensive superiority in his intercourse with them. The doctor's wife pronounced him to be the best New Yorker she had ever met, and the gossips insinuated that Mrs. Blunt, the widow, was setting her cap for him.

Gypsey Lane, the daughter of a leading man in Russian Bar, and made wealthy by a saw mill, which, all day long groaned and screamed some distance down the river, did not express her opinion as to Houghton's merits, but in the summer evenings when the schoolmaster, rod in hand, wandered along the stream and threw his line across the mill-dam, Gypsey was seldom far away. Lane, a bluff, hearty old fellow, frequently asked Hougton to spend the evening with him, and told his adventures in early California to a patient listener, while Gypsey dutifully mended her father's socks on the verandah.

Mrs. Lane, when Gypsey was but a baby, was laid to rest in Lone Mountain long before Lane ever thought of settling at Russian Bar. Seymour and Walker were the best and most industrious pupils the young master had and were happy in accompanying him on his fishing excursions. In fact, they all agreed that the educational department in the village was a thriving success.

One pleasant evening in June Gypsey Lane, twirling her straw hat, thoughtfully picked her way across the broad field that lay between her house and the mill. The stream was a winding one, and as she placed her foot on the first stepping-stone she saw a straw hat on the grass which she knew well.

"How is Miss Lane this evening?" said Houghton, lazily, from beneath a Manzanita bush, where he had been enjoying a book and a pipe.

"Well, thank you. How is Mr. Houghton?" replied Gypsey, shyly.

"Warm, but not uncomfortable. Are you going to the mill?"

"Yes, I have a letter that has just come for father."

"May I accompany you?"

"Certainly, if you choose."

Houghton put on his hat and helped Gypsey across the brook.

"I had a letter from New York a few days ago," said he, after they had left the first bend of the river behind.

"A pleasant one?"

"Well, although in some sense it brought good news, still I can hardly call it a pleasant letter."

They walked on and Gypsey swung her hat pensively, longing with a woman's curiosity, to hear more about the New York letter.

"I am going to leave Russian Bar," said Houghton abruptly.

"Indeed, how soon?"

"I don't know yet; possibly within a week."

The hat was swayed from side to side with increased energy.

"Do you care much, Miss Lane?" This with an earnest look into the hazel eyes that were kept steadily bent on the brown parched grass beneath their feet.

"Yes, of course, we shall be very sorry to lose you," returned Gypsey, evasively.

"If I come back in a few months with something for my future wife, shall I see this ring on her finger?" whispered Houghton, capturing the little hand that held the hat, and slipping a pearl ring on her delicate finger.

Gypsey said nothing; but her eyes turned for a moment on the schoolmaster's earnest face, and in the next her soft cheek was resting on his shoulder.

Russian Bar, to a man, turned out to wish Philip Houghton God speed on the morning he took his place by the driver who one year before had set him down at Perkins' Hotel. They knew he was on his way to New York, and that he had been left some money, and the gossips more than suspected that there was something between Gypsey Lane and their favorite. At all events, her eyes were red for a week after his departure.

Winter had come and the river was swollen and rapid, and many a lofty tree from the pine forest had found its way to the hearths of Russian Bar. One delicious morning, crisp and cold, after a night's rain, the stage with mud, halted before Perkins' Hotel. It had been all night on the way, for the roads were very heavy.

The worthy proprietor of that excellent house was in the act of tossing his first cocktail, when a hearty hand was laid his shoulder, and Philip Houghton shouted:

"Perkins, old boy, how are you!"

The landlord returned the shake hands, dived behind the bar and had a second cocktail mixed in a moment. "And now," said he, as he pledged the ex-schoolmaster, "when will the wedding take place?"

Six weeks afterward the old mill was hung with evergreen wreaths, and a grand festival was held at Russian Bar. Gypsey Lane was a lovely bride, and when Houghton took charge of the mill and invested all his New York money in the village, and was admitted to practice in the courts—everything seemed to take a fresh start. Through all, his warmest and most devoted friend was Sam Seymour, once the terror of Russian Bar schoolmasters, and now the holder of that important position.—San Francisco Morning Call.

"Have no money, father."

"But I gave you a thousand dollars to graduate on."

Regular Eating.—Half the girls in the land become dyspeptic before they are out of their teens, in consequence of being about the house and nibbling at everything they lay their eyes on that is good to eat; whereas, were they to eat but three times a day at regular times, and not an atom between meals, they might enjoy perfect health. To digest a full meal and pass it out of the stomach requires not less time than five hours. If a person eats between meals, the process of digestion of the food already in the stomach is arrested, until the last which has been eaten is brought into the condition of the former meal; just as, if water is boiling and ice is put in, the whole ceases to boil until the ice has been melted and brought to the boiling point, and then the whole boils together. No wonder that dyspeptics are cross and peevish! How can they be otherwise, since a disordered stomach is the source of so many pangs? Yet they deserve punishment for neglecting to obey the laws which nature renders imperative if health is to be preserved.

An Eastern Legend.—The philosophers of India once possessed a book so large that it required a thousand camels to carry it. A King desired to have it abridged, and certain scholars reduced it so that it could be carried by a hundred camels. Other kings came, who demanded that it should be diminished still more, until at length the volume was reduced to four maxims. The first of these maxims bade kings to be just; the second prescribed obedience to the people; the third recommended mankind not to eat except when they were hungry; the fourth advised women to be modest.

What is Meant by a Horse Power?

The power of prime movers is measured by horse power. Watt found that the strongest London draft horses were capable of doing work equivalent to raising 33,000 pounds one foot high per minute, and he took this as the unit of power for the steam engine. The horse is not usually capable of doing so great a quantity of work. Rankine gave 26,000 foot pounds as the figure for a mean of several experiments, and it is probable that 25,000 foot pounds is a fair minute's average work for a good animal. It would require five or six men to do the work of a strong horse. Watt's estimate has become, by general consent among engineers, the standard of power measurement for all purposes.—Scientific American.

Modern Medical Discovery.—It is claimed that disease, with a few exceptions, has been conquered by the research and intellect of enlightened men; and yet a noted professor of New York admits that "of all sciences, medicine is the most uncertain," and that "thousands are annually slaughtered in the sick room." Certain "schools" of medicine are in existence, one of which "makes the patient ill," in order to claim a cure; and another administers "sugar-coated bread pills," relying upon nature to effect her own cures. Dr. J. Walker, of California, an old and respected physician, tried both modes of treatment and both failed. He then appealed to nature's curative—herbs; and now enjoys rugged health. He has given the benefit of his discovery to the world, in the shape of Vinegar Bitters, and since its introduction has sold a quantity almost large enough to make a small harbor, or to float the "Great Eastern." Its curative properties are attested by grateful thousands.

Hack, Hack! Cough, Cough.

Cough is a symptom by which various diseased conditions of the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs manifest themselves. But whether it arises from the irritation produced in the throat and larynx by taking cold, from an attack of Bronchitis, from incipient Consumption, or from various other causes, nothing will allay it more speedily nor cure it more permanently than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It does not matter whether it be a recent attack, or a lingering cough, the Discovery is in either case equally well adapted for its relief and permanent cure. In fact, it will cure a cough in one-half the time necessary to cure it with any other medicine, and it does it, not by drying it up, but by removing the cause, subduing the irritation, and healing the affected parts. No time should be lost in commencing the use of a proper medicine for the relief of a Cough, for unless this course is pursued, serious and dangerous disease of the lungs is liable to result.

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 13, 1870.

Dr. Pierce: For the past six months I have used your Golden Medical Discovery in my practice, and in that time I have tested its merits in severe coughs, both acute and chronic. In chronic disease of the throat, severe cases of bronchitis, general derangement of the system, constipated condition of the bowels, and wherever a thorough alterative has been indicated. In all cases I have found it to act gently yet thoroughly and effectually in removing the various diseased conditions; and bringing about a healthy action throughout the system." Yours fraternally,

FARM, HOUSEHOLD, AND KITCHEN.

FARM HINTS.

THE English and Continental farmers know the value of bone dust, and the Americans will soon find it out.

MR. M. L. SULLIVANT, the great Illinois farmer, of Livingston county, has contracted for the erection of fifty tenement houses on his farm at Gibson.

OF guano, as a permanent fertilizer, there is some doubt; but as a stimulant of growing crops, on good soil, it is invaluable, either on grass or arable lands.

MR. HANSON Ordway of West Newbury, Mass., raised one hundred and eighty-eight barrels of onions last season on seven-eighths of an acre, which he sold in Newburyport for $1,000.

SOOT is a most valuable manure, either for grass or for turnips, as it quickly forces the plants, & prevents the fly from committing its ravages. It is also excellent for destroying the grub in onion beds.

THE Country Gentleman recommends linseed oil meal for horses that are never allowed to run out to grass, being slightly aprelent. A handful in each feed, morning and evening, is about the quantity usually fed.

A GRINDSTONE should not be exposed to the weather, as it not only injures the wood-work, but the sun's rays harden the stone and render it useless. Neither should it stand in the water in which it runs, as the part remaining in water softens so much that it wears unequally.

AN Ohio farmer suggets that the granges set themselves about introducing the English sparrow for the protection of fruit-growers. The sparrows breed fast and eat a good deal. A pair of sparrows having a family to bring up will consume over three thousand caterpillars a week.

A MAN in Woodbury, N. Y., raised and marketed from five-eighths of an acre on his farm, egg-plants which sold for $499.15; radishes which sold for $78—making a total of $577.15 cash in hand. Besides this his family was supplied and some given away. There were 1,829 hills of the egg-plants, 3½ by 4 feet apart.

PEOPLE who, at husking time, have barked their sore fingers and broken their worn nails in the effort to make space to start a shovel in a wagon load of ears which they desire to transfer to the crib, can thank The Journal of the Farm for this suggestion of a better way: "In loading corn take to the field a piece of pine board six feet long and a little wider than your shovel; place an end on the tailboard close to one corner of the wagon and the other on the bottom end; fill up as usual. In unloading, shovel down the board to the bottom of the wagon, and not an ear need be touched by the hands."

To cure a wart on a horse, take a common suture needle, a large sewing needle will do, but if slightly crooked at the point, better; thread it with a double cord, each one containing three threads of fine saddler's thread well twisted and waxed. Pass the needle through the center of the wart close to the skin, drawing the thread half way through. Cut the cord next to the needle, and tie each half separately with a surgeon's or other secure knot, as tightly as possible. Cut the ends off close to the knot, and the wart will soon disappear. If the wart is small at the base, the cord may be tied around it as close to the base as possible, and the same end will be accomplished.

IT is a mistake in wheat culture to sow inferior seed. Indeed this is very foolish in regard to any and every crop. Like begets like. Weakness and disease are propagated in the plant world very much as they are transmitted from parent to child in the world of human beings. The greater pains should be taken to procure the choicest seed that can possibly be had. It will pay the farmer who depends upon his own growing of seed, to cut out the best portions of a field, when there is a perceptible difference, and devote them to this important use. Indeed, it is a wise policy to select the earliest and finest heads, and from these grow seed. It is also well to obtain a change of seed from time to time, as successive sowing in the same soil and climate seems to induce more or less degeneracy. The farmer should never grudge a little extra outlay in the purchase of choice seed. Such outlay is pretty certain to be well rewarded.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.

KEROSENE is the best article ever discovered to cleanse rust from grates and fire irons.

TO PURIFY CIDER.—A few slices of the red beet, put into a barrel of musty cider, will deprive it of its disagreeable taste and smell, as well as prevent it from becoming vapid or acrid.

PURPLE INK.—Take one and one-half ounces ground logwood, one-half ounce pulverized alum in one and one-half pint of soft water. This will make a very fancy ink.

FROSTED FEET.—They may be cured as follows: White oak bark, taken fresh and boiled in water for a strong liquor. Bathe the feet in the liquor. It is pronounced the best of all remedies.

A HOT lemonade is one of the best remedies in the world for a cold. It acts promptly and effectively, and has no unpleasant after effects. One lemon properly squeezed, cut in slices, put with sugar, and covered with a half pint of boiling water. Drink just before going to bed, and do not expose yourself on the following day. This remedy will ward off an attack of the chills and fever if used promptly.

CREOSOTE FOR WARTS.—Dr. Hainey, of St. Thomas' Hospital, London, has written an article for the Lancet, detailing the effects of creosote applied to warts. He applied it freely in an obstinate, warty excrescence on the finger, then covered it over with a piece of sticking plaster. This course he pursued every three days for two weeks, when the wart was found to have disappeared, leaving the part beneath it quite healthy.

A USEFUL SOAP.—The following is commended by those who have tried it for scrubbing and cleaning painted floors, washing dishes, and other household purposes: Take two pounds of white olive soap and shave it in thin slices; add two ounces of borax and two quarts of cold water; stir all together in a stone or earthern jar, and let it set upon the back of the stove until the mass be dissolved. A very little heat is required, as the liquid need not simmer. When thoroughly mixed and cooled, it becomes of the consistency of a thick jelly, and a piece the size of a cubic inch will make a lather for a gallon of water.

KITCHEN RECIPES.

NEVER boil tea of any kind. Japan tea needs long steeping.

WINE WHEY.—Boil a pint of milk, and put to it a glass of white wine; set it over the fire till the curd has settled, when strain it and sweeten to your taste.

PLAIN DOUGHNUTS.—One pint of rich buttermilk, one heaping teaspoonful of soda, half that quantity of salt, three tablespoonfuls of melted lard, flour to knead well.

PICKLED ONIONS.—Peel off the outer skin of small onions, boil them until clear or half cooked, in salt water, and throw them while smoking hot into a jar of cold vinegar, spiced.

GRAPE JAM.—Boil the grapes in just water enough to make them tender, strain them through a colander, then in one pound of pulp put one pound of sugar; boil this half an hour; the common wild grape makes a nice jam.

OATMEAL GRUEL.—Mix a dessert spoonful of fine oatmeal or patent groats with two tablespoonfuls of cold water and boil for ten minutes, stirring frequently. For a richer gruel, boil two tablespoonfuls of groats in a quart of water for an hour. Strain through a sieve; stir in a piece of butter large as a walnut and some sugar, nutmeg or ginger.

FRIZZLED BEEF.—Into a pan put slices of dried beef, with just enough boiling water to cover them. Let them cook ten minutes and drain off the water. If not fine enough, cut smaller. Return to the pan with a lump of butter the size of a walnut, and a little pepper. To a quarter of a pound of beef allow two eggs, beat well together, and when the beef is hot, stir in. Cook about three minutes, and send to table hot.

HOW TO PREPARE COFFEE.—French cooks say good coffee cannot be made by boiling; it must be leached; the aroma and flavor of the coffee goes off in the steam if it is boiled. The ground coffee must be put in a vessel that is like a fine sieve in the bottom, pour boiling water on this, and as soon as it passes through it is fit for use and if not used immediately should be placed where it will simply keep hot and not boil. We give this French method of making good coffee not for the benefit of hygienists, for they will not use coffee, but to those who still feel that they must take coffee, we would say, if you must have it, make it in the best way.—Journal of Health.

The Slanderous Tongue.

The tongue of slander is never tired. In one way or other it manages to keep itself in constant employment. Sometimes it drips honey and sometimes gall. It is bitter now, and then sweet. It insinuates or assails directly, according to the circumstances. It will hide a curse under a smooth word, and administer poison in the phrase of love. Like death, it "loves a shining mark." And it is never so available and eloquent as when it can blight the hopes of the noble-minded, soil the reputation of the pure, and break down or destroy the character of the brave and strong.

What pleasure man or woman can find in such work we have never been able to see. And yet there is pleasure of some kind in it to the multitudes, or they would not betake themselves to it. Some soul or body must be gratified by it. But no soul in high estate can take delight in it. It indicates lapse, tendency toward chaos, utter depravity. It proves that somewhere in the soul there is a weakness, waste, evil nature. Education and refinement are no proof against it. They often serve only to polish the slanderous tongue, increase its tact, and give it suppleness and strategy.

AN immense hotel, to be called "The Washington," is about to be erected in Paris, planned, built and managed on American principles, and with a view to the accommodation of American tastes and requirements.

The Burned Pantechnicon, at London.

The Royal Pantechnicon Company was organized in 1863, and was similar to our Security and Trust Companies. The building itself was an imposing block, eight stories high, fronting Hyde Park, and in the immediate neighborhood of the platial residences of Baron Rothchild, the Duke of Willington, Sir Robert Peel, and others. The front walls were of granite, elegantly sculptured. The building cost £1,000,000. The basement, which was lined with iron, was carefully guarded by watchmen; while each safe had an iron grating before it. Here were locked up the valuable silver ware of the old families of England, who rarely used it except on state occasions. These priceless collections were carefully numbered, the company, giving bonds for their safe keeping, and charging according to the value of the property.

The first floor was a magnificent art-gallery, in which were deposited the rarest pictures of the Turner, Reynolds, and other galleries. Persons going out of town also left their private collections of pictures here for safe-keeping. Besides these there were glass cases filled with costly jewelry and valuable collections of coin. Admittance to the Pantechnicon could be obtained only from a depositor or a Director. In the rear of the first floor were collections of equipages, mostly of foreign make, which were considered so costly that the owners feared to trust them on their own premises. On the floors above, besides several art galleries and marbles, were endless collections of costly furniture, requiring constant care and attention to keep in order. The Pantechnicon was also used for the safe-keeping of landed titles, mortgages, and other valuable papers, the company sometimes advancing money on the collaterals deposited.—New York Sun.

New Houses.

The coincidence of a man moving into a new house and dying soon after, has frequently been a subject of remark, and there is an avoidable cause—the house is moved into before the walls and plaster and the wood are sufficiently dried. Sometimes the cause of death is the poisonous character of the water conveyed through new lead pipes. No water for drinking or cooking purposes should be used in a building supplied with new lead pipes, in whole or in part, for at least one month after the water has been used daily; this gives time for a protecting coating to form on the inner surface of the pipes, when their chemical change from contact with water generally ceases.

But the damp materials of the house have the most decided effect, especially on persons over fifty years old or of frail constitutions; whereas, if the person were in the full vigor of life and health, not even an inconvenience would be experienced. In building a new house, or in going to live in another locality where the water is not far from the house, it should be ascertained with the utmost certainty that the spring or well is higher than the privies or barnyards. Insidious and fatal forms of decline and typhoid very often result from drinking water which is drained from the localities named. The safest plan, and the only safe plan for furnishing dwellings with the most healthful and unobjectionable water, is to have a water-tight cistern and let the water from the house or barn, or other outhouses, be conveyed into it through a box of sand several yards long, this box to rest on a board, or cemented bottom and sides, so that no outside water could get into it.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Six Men Killed by an Explosion of Dualin.

On last Friday evening, says the Houghton (Mich.) Mining Gazette extra of Feb. 15, at about 7:30 o'clock, a terrible accident occurred at the Phoenix mine, in Keweenaw county, two miles from Eagle river, the origin of which will probably never be known. Four miners and a subordinate underground officer were preparing in an apartment of a building on the location, occupied by the mining captain as his office, a quantity of dualin, to use that night in making a "sand blast" in the mine. The men were taking the dualin—100 pounds—from its original package, and transferring it to a bag, when the explosion took place. Besides the dualin, there were three kegs of powder in the room. Three of the men were handling the explosive, the fourth was holding a lighted candle, while the fifth man stood looking on, when the explosion occurred. The house was shattered to atoms, and the men literally blown to pieces. Captain John Hoatson, underground superintendent of the mine, was in his office, an adjoining room, at the time, seated at his desk, and was struck by some of the flying missiles on the left side of the head and face, receiving such injuries that he died this (Sunday) morning. The following is a list of the killed:

Captain John Hoatson, a highly-respected citizen of this district for a number of years, age 46, native of Scotland, leaves a wife and four children; Captain Richard Johns, English, unmarried; Fred. Striker, German, wife and eight children; William Dunn, English, unmarried; and two brothers named Marks, English, one of whom leaves a wife and four children.

Effect of Frost on Sap of Trees.

A remarkable paper has recently been contributed to a German magazine by Professor Mohr, showing not only that the sap does not freeze in trees and plants which live through hard winters, but also the reason why it does not freeze. He says that though it is true water, as we generally see and understand it, freezes at thirty-two degrees, it does not do so when its particles are finely divided. Tropical plants have large cells, and these are the ones in which the sap freezes, but in plants with very small cells in which the liquid particles are finely divided, there is no freezing of the liquids until after the structure has received injury of some sort. This is true, he says, of insects and insect paupæ. They never freeze; but cut one apart, soon after the humors solidify, and on thawing life flies.

THE church property in the United States is estimated to be worth $250,000,000.

The Chin.

Fortune-tellers are generally skillful physiognomists, and all the features of the human face do their share in enlightening the understanding of the seers. The chin at the present day is rather difficult to read, on account of the increasing custom of wearing the beard. A good chin should neither project nor retreat much. A very retreating chin denotes weakness, and a very projecting one harsh strength, united with firmness amounting to obstinacy. A pointed chin denotes acuteness. A soft, fat, double chin generally denotes a love of good living, and an angular chin judgment and firmness. Flatness of chin implies coldness; a round dimpled chin, goodness; a small chin, fear; sharp indentings in the middle of the chin point to a cool understanding. The color and texture of the skin and of the hair and beard have also direct harmony with the features. These should be studied more than they have been. A facility in drawing faces is of great use to the student of physiognomy, as it enables him to note peculiarities of feature which no written description would be capable of preserving.

The Floating Islands of Florida.

A traveler in Florida thus describes the floating islands in Lake Poinsette:

We passed several floating islands. They are formed by the dead roots of the smart weed and other swamay vegetation torn up by the wind and hurled upon the shore. A soil is formed, birds drop acorns upon the mass, and little trees make their appearance. A second wind sends the whole thing out on the lake, where it floats subject to every breeze. One of these islands was sunk in the channel between Lakes Poinsette and Winder, in the memorable gale of August, 1871. The Captain asserted that he had cut many a bay tree over a foot thick from the sunken island. Its dead trees still appear above the water at the mouth of the river. Sometimes Indians and white hunters set these islands on fire. The blaze genertaes a gale, and the burning islands are driven across the lake. Some of the islands are over a half mile in circumference.

Short Sermons.

She that is loved is safe.

The only thing humorous about some men is their melancholy.

He that makes himself an ass must not take it to ill if men ride him.

The song which is sung in heaven must be learned on earth.

He had but few enemies—saving his friends.

A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market.

The cause that never made a fanatic never produced a martyr.

By taking revenge a man is but even with his enemy; but in passing over it, he is superior.

Keep innocency, 'tis the greatest felicity—and a good conscience, for 'tis a continual feast; this is the only music which makes a merry heart; this makes the prisoner sing when the jailer trembles.

An Oil-Dripping Stone.

In a note to a gentleman who has written a book upon the oil regions, Ex. Gov. Horatio Seymour incidentally says: "When you go to Boston visit the Museum of Natural History, Geology, etc., in the State Agricultural Hall, and ask the keeper to show you a piece of coral stone, which has to my knowledge been dripping oil for twenty years in that building. It may throw some light on the 'oil question.' The likenesses in your book interested me. They are not of men I know, but they are all marked with intelligence, vigor and enterprise. They make a curious study for those who care for physiognomics. I do not think faces show men's natural traits so much as they do their histories. What a man has gone through leaves marks on his face. I thought I could read the story of each one before I looked at the letter press."

Ayer's Ague Cure,

FOR THE SPEEDY RELIEF OF

Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons,

R Has been widely used, during the last twenty-five years, in the treatment of these distressing diseases, and with such unvarying success that it has gained the reputation of being infallible. The shakes, or chills, once broken by it, do not return until the disease is contracted again. This has made it an accepted remedy, and trusted specific, for the Fever and Ague of the West, and the Chills and Fever of the South.

Ayer's Ague Cure eradicates the noxious poison from the system, and leaves the patient as well as before the attack. It thoroughly expels the disease, so that no Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dysentery or Debility follows the cure. Indeed, where disorders of the Liver and Bowels have occurred from Miasmatic Poison, it removes the cause of them and they disappear. Not only is it an effectual cure, but, if taken occasionally by patients exposed to malaria, it will expel the poison and protect them from attack. Travelers and temporary residents in Fever and Ague localities are thus enabled to defy the disease. The General Debility which is so apt to ensue from continued exposure to Malaria and Miasm has no speedier remedy.

For Liver Complaints it is an excellent remedy.

The Auburn Courier

Thursday, March 5th, 1874

The mystery of Chang and Eng, which has puzzled scientific men for half a century, has at last been solved. The autopsy show that a tissue, the same in effect as the liver, was continuous in the twins and that in all probability, any attempt to sever the ligature would have resulted in death to both.

Miss Kate Field has been writing some of her lively letters to the Tribune—this time from Spain. "Madrid," she says, "goes to bed at 8 A. M., breakfasts at 1 P. M., takes a siesta before going to to a bull-fight at 4, drives afterwards, dines at 7, and later begins business. There are those abject enough to retire at night and rise in the morning. They are shop-keepers and secretaries of legation possessed of conscience. Conscience emulates the lark—it rises early."

Congress has been in session nearly three months and has accomplished literally nothing at all in the way of legislation to bring financial relief to the people, and we might with truth say that nothing of any nature has been done which is worthy of the name of legislation. The principal business is to talk about investigations into the corrupt transactions of official rings and dishonest agents of the government. This state of affairs fully illustrates how sadly the country has degenerated under Republican rule and if the spring elections do not show a change in the political sentiment of the country all the signs will fail.

United States Senator Maxey, of Texas, gets this nice note from the Vicksburg Herald: "In addition to his mental imbecility, his ignorance, intolerance, bigotry and narrow mindedness, Senator Maxey has a power of suction not excelled by any force pump in existence, and a capacity for absorption that would shame the Desert of Sahara. He has three ideas only. First, he was born in Kentucky; second, he graduated at West Point, and third, he was an Old Line Whig!' Upon these three subjects he can gabble by the hour; but if any one ever got a grain of wheat from his ocean of chaff, we have yet to hear from him. If Dick Yates, of Illinois, were living, the twain could do the entire drinking for the Senate, but as Richard 'has gone where good niggers go,' we commend Maxey to the kind attentions of Chandler, the peripatetic demijohn from Michigan.

The End.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

If the people of Massachusetts have got to the inevitable "somewhere" where the line must be drawn, amen! They have stood a good deal from the administration of General Grant. They have long restrained themselves from their natural leadership of the great issue of purity and good government, which is as certainly in the near future, as the near future is sure to come The old Puritan State has not merely dropped out of its place at the head of the line, it has suffered itself to become the prey of corruption, has suffered an inoculation in its own body of the disease that prostrates Louisiana. But the Republican party of this State has met all previous contumly from the administration with a greater exhibition of patience, and repaid it with generous majorities at the poll, and unquestioning loyalty in the party press. For this return of good for evil, the Republican party has long since lost sympathy and patience. We have long lifted up our voice in the wilderness against the acquiescence in the policy that was making the political and moral life of the nation an offense in the nostrils of the peoples of the earth, and in prophecy of its overthrow. To this end we have exposed corruption, denounced bad men for their iniquity, and sometimes 'good' men for their willingness to seem corrupt. But all this is past. If the hour of revolt has struck in Massachusetts, whether it is to be a reform from inside the Republican party or a reform from the outside, we shall be found on its side and in hearty sympathy with it. We raise no question of how or from whom it comes. The spirit of revolt may go just so far, when aroused by a petty snub to the Boston sense of respectability, as when fixed by the eloquence of a Schurz or a Sumner. To-day is the opportunity of Massachusetts to lead this party of purity in politics. If we let it go by, the spark shall light, to-morrow, among a folk of quicker sense.

Pioneer Sketches

—OF—

DeKALB COUNTY

NUMBER ONE.

We have before us an interesting series of sketches of pioneer life in this county, published in pamphlet form by the Rev. S. W. Widney in 1859, copies of the Democratic "Messenger," published by Berry & Pierce in 1853, and other data, upon which we must solely depend in publishing these sketches. From what we can learn, this pamphlet was quite limited in circulation, and, as there are a great many who have [illegible] it, and many more who have never heard of it, we shall take the liberty, at times, to give its sketches entire, and add as much outside of it as possible.

The early history of this county, like that of many other counties, has not been handed down to us with that degree of minuteness that would prove interesting to the readers of the present day. Authentic records of its early settlement do not appear, and the few who participated in the scenes of that period have been gathered to their fathers. Yet there is a lively interest still manifested in the naration of the severe battles fought, and victories won over the giant forests by the first settlers, and if there is nothing new to offer, the oft repeated tale has a charm about it that never wearies, and the thrilling adventure or humorous incident are sources of enjoyment that captivate and enchain the most indifferent.

When we look over the beautiful fields and fertile valleys of the present day and see the evidences of improvement and enterprise on every hand, we are prone to ignore the terrible sufferings and privations that fell to the lot of those, who struck the first blows and inaugurated the plans that brought those great achievements. When they left their comfortable homes to labor and toil in those mighty forests, no civilized voice fell upon their ear to cheer the heart with joy, no green meadows nor beautiful orchards greeted the eye, nor happy homes gave them a welcome, but all was desolation and lonliness. Such was the case when the first steps toward improvement were made, and well do those who first made them merit our unqualified praise and admiration. Mr. Widney says, in pursuing this subject beyond our own personal knowledge, (reaching back only to the 6th of May, 1837, and confined even then to the townships of Concord, Newville,) we will have to call for the assistance of that notable character so often appealed to, "the oldest inhabitant of the several townships and settlements." Be it known therefore to the above named distinguished personage and all others to whom these presents may come—that dates of the origin of the several settlements, names of the first settlers, and incidents pertaining to the first settlements, progress of improvements &c. will here find a ready market and be fully paid for in that very convenient currency for hard times, namely, thanks.

Very few settlers were within the bounds now embraced by DeKalb county, the early part of the year 1836. There were a few, however, along the little St. Joseph river. The following list embraces all that we know of at present, viz: Homer Blake, who settled on the tract of land owned of late years, until quite recently, by his son Henry Blake, below Spencerville—David Butler, on the farm where he still resides; John Mathews, on a tract of land forming a part of the home farm of Hon. R. J. Dawson; Mr. Yates, on another portion of said farm, and the present site of Spencerville. Old Mr. Rhodes and sons, on the farm joining Spencerville on the west. Jeremiah Rhodes, on the farm owned by Mr. Melton, on Bear Creek. Daniel Rhodes, on the farm occupied by his widow. Mr. Brandt and Crannel Rood, on the farm in the bend of the river east of Spencerville. Wm. Mathews, on the farm where Jacob Dills resided. George and David Mathews, on a tract on the opposite side of the river from William. Mr. Lytle and Jared Ball, on the farm owned by Gavin Hamilton, one mile below Orangeville. Washington Robinson, on the present site of Newville, and Wm. Rodgers and Jacob Platter, on the farm belonging to Samuel Wyatt, near Newville. A part of this county was then embraced in LaGrange county and the balance in Allen.

Early in the year 1836, John Blair, Esq., settled on the farm where he died; Charles Wilber, on the farm owned by old Mr. Hull, near Orangeville; William Burley, at the present site of the last named village; Joseph Ludwig, on the farm where he lived; Judge Walden, a little farther up the river, and Arial Rood, still farther up. A little later in the season, perhaps, Judge Widney settled on the farm where he died and John P. Widney on the farm owned by Gardner Mellindy, at Newville; Benjamin Alton, on the farm owned by Dr. Herrington; Dr. Babcock a little below on the farm owned by Mr. Scoles, and Asher Coburn, and perhaps some others of his relatives, in the Coburn settlement.

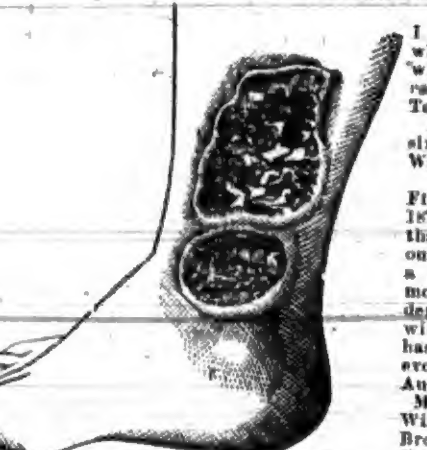
HOME TESTIMONIALS.

Aboit tp., Allen Co Ind. Mar. 8th, 1873.—I hereby certify that I was afflicted with fever sore for nearly 3 years We employed what we thought the best physicians of Ft. Wayne without any benefit; and for over two years I could not walk, and my whole system was affected. At this stage of the disease I consulted Dr. S. Clay Todd, and, I am glad to say, under his treatment I became perfectly well in four months, and thanks to a Kind Providence, and the skill of Dr. S. Clay Todd, I am no longer a cripple



I was 61 years old when cured. [illegible] who have such a disease should employ Dr Todd at once.

MRS. LYDIA KNEPPER six miles west of Fort Wayne.

Ft Wayne, Ind. Feb. 15 1873.—I hereby certify that Dr. Todd cured our infant daughter of a large scrofulous tumor on the right under jaw in two weeks without lancing. She has been perfectly well ever since. Cured Aug. 14, 1872.

MISS HARRIET BROWN Wife of Mr Harrison Brown, 5 miles west of Fort Wayne.

Fort Wayne, Sep. 17, 1872.—For the benefit of those who think consumption incurable, I will make a statement of my cure: On the 12th of last March I was taken with the Lung Fever, or as the doctor called it, Pleuro-Pneumonia. I was attended by one of whom I considered the most eminent physicians of this city 3½ months, during which time he employed 5 other physicians as council. For 3 weeks I though I was getting better, when an abscess began to form in my left lung, and the physicians pronounced it quick consumption, from this time I failed rapidly, and raised from a pint to a quart of phlegm and matter each day, and had night sweats; by the 26th of June I had got so weak I could not lift a glass of water to my mouth, and was confined to bed. At this time some ladies in the neighborhood persuaded my wife to employ Dr. Todd, and I am free to say I improved steadily from the time I began taking his medicines, and in 10 weeks I was able to walk 2 miles, and felt as well as I ever did, now I walk from 3 to 4 miles each day, and neither cough nor spit. I have no pain and think my lung is healed perfectly.

JOHN A. MILLER,

We have a young man, when laboring under excitement, offers to sacrifice both arms—around her.

Notwithstanding the bad roads a large number of farmers were in town on last Saturday.

This is regarded as a good season for maple sugar, and our farmers are embracing the opportunity.

The churches all closed services in the evening, for the temperance meeting, except the Baptists.

Peach growers say that the trees are all right, and give promise of a good showing of bloom.

Our young lads are preparing for a minstrel performance. Shall there be gnashing of teeth.

When our barbers get a customer in the chair they hold him until the next one comes, so says one of the craft.

The Columbia City Dramatic Company appear next Saturday evening, in 'Married Life' and Michael Erle."

We are obliged to our friend John Shutt Esq., for a list of new subscribers at Spencerville.

James Clifford, of Waterloo, was granted a license yesterday to sell intoxicating liquers by the beverage, also John Hebel, of this place.

We have just received a new lot of job type of the latest styles, and any one wishing work done will do well to give us a call.

Some of our boys saw a tremendous moon the other night. As it was nearly midnight it's a great wonder they did'nt see a whole flock of moons—hic.

The Court House was crowded with people last Sunday evening, either to hear the "niggers" sing or the temperance lecture, we don't know which.

The negro, at the concert, said in his short lecture on slavery, that he had lots ob hardships, but there was oder niggers had harder ships than he did.

How nice and comfortable it looks to see a young man with a calico scarf on when the weather is warm enough go to in swimming.

Dan Culver has over 60 scholars in his writing class, and has room for a number more. Persons wishing to join the class can do so, at any time, for ten cents per evening.

Our next term of school promises to be a very successful one. We are glad to learn that so many foreign students are coming, for this is encouraging, not only to the teachers, but to our citizens generally.

A new temperance organization known as the St Joseph Total Abstinence society has been formed at South Bend, under the auspices of the young Catholic gentlemen of that city. It starts with a membership of 100

Last Tuesday was like an April day, the gentle rain fell, the lighting flashed, the thunder roared, and she stole a march on this blustering month. Next morning March was herself again—snow had covered the ground.

A fine lot of new goods have just been received and is now opened, at Sprott & Son's Shoe Store where every style of boots and shoes can be obtained at the lowest prices. The new styles are neat and attractive, and everybody should see them

Wanted—All those having copies of the early papers published in this county or can give any record or incident of the county will please send in the same to this office. We promise to take good care of them, use them in our sketches and return them promptly.

The artesian well appartus is now in order and working away at the earth's crust The gass below is so powerful that it works its way to the surface through 1,300 feet of water, and burns for several minutes. From this, one would judge that there is a pretty hot place somewhere below.—Ft Wayne Sentinel

The trial of H. Bennett, charged with stealing a coat at Waterloo, came off before the Circuit Court last Monday, J. E. Rose, Esq , on the bench. The case was submitted to a jury, but before they agreed on a verdict, they were called back by request of the attorneys, and the case decided by the court. He was sentenced to 10 days in the county jail and find $2

We have made a discovery, and we humbly beg the pardon of our neighbor of the Press. We have been calling him Charles Washington, but his real name is Charles Kelly Baxter. We can now plainly understand why he said Free Kelly was too big a fool to go to Congress. It seems this complaint is what ails the family even unto their first cousin

We shall soon sadly miss the entertaining reading furnished by the secretaries of the several township teachers' institutes.—Press.
The above shows the animus of that paper toward the great work which the teachers of DeKalb County have accomplished this winter. It is a sneer upon their efforts, and a stab at the profession. They should remember their friends.

It is now proposed to build five miles of road from Logansport to the Crawfordville line of railroad, and thus connect the Eel River road with it. This will give us a through line to St. Louis by way of Terre Haute. Logansport is backing the enterprise and we understand that work has commenced. This will add to the importance of our line and we hope to see this accomplished soon.

The Plantation Jubilee Singers appeared at the M. E. Church last Friday and Saturday evenings, and were quite well patronized. Their music was something new and everybody seemed to be pleased with it. There is a melody about their singing not heard every day. If they had a little brighter manager to lead them it would add to their effectiveness, though Mr. Pollard does the best he can.

Major Charles H. Jones, the sprightly and versatile traveling correspondent of the Cleveland Herald, gave us a call last week. Charley has been interviewing our Governor on the grange question. He now sings:

"The hickory berry vine entwines
The brown nuts of the turnip tree;
The cashmere heifer skips and plays
To the tuneful bleat of the feathery bee.
On tall boughs 'mid the buckwheat buds
We hear the low of the finny plover,
While the bay bull hitched to the rumbling scythe
Husks out the golden clover."

Franklin Grange was organized Dec. 2d, 1873, and was numbered 709. Jackson Grange organized Feb 14th, 1874, and is No. 1414, an increase in 2½ months of 705 in the State of Indiana alone.

Yet the Press does not like this, and says the growth of it has not been rapid. Now, if Baxter could get up a little stronger opposition, we have no doubt it would be prolific of more granges.

Notice.

All persons having claims in my hands for collection for work done on the Baltimore Rail Road, are requested to call at my office in Waterloo, on or before the 14th inst. and prove their claims, as I have entered into an agreement with said company, whereby they agree to Pay all Claims of which I furnish satisfactory proof without further litigation, even though the work was done under subcontractors.

C. A. O. McClellan.

The ladies have formed a temperance league here, not for the purpose of visiting saloons, as there is no present necessity for that, but to assist in educating the people upon a temperance basis, that will make the sale of liquors a useless avocation. They have our hearty co-operation and support. We believe in this kind of work and that it can be made profitable. Men keep saloons to make money. If the people can be educated to do without intoxicating liquors then the avocation of the saloon keeper is gone. Something at least can be done in this direction.

Mary had a little lamb, and so did Molly Grub, they both came into town one day, (the girls) and with the proceeds of one shearing, (the lambs are several years old now) they were enabled to buy more goods than they could carry home. When asked where they got such bargains, they replied, at Vordermark's, sign of the Big Shoe, where you can find everything you want. They have new styles which are 'perfectly splendid.' And then these gentlemen take pride in showing their goods. Just go and see their shoes and gaiters, they are beauties North of the Court House.

Bank—Two gentlemen from Wabash, Messrs Riley and Mote, were here last Monday, looking over the ground preparatory to establishing a bank, and expressed themselves well pleased with the location They met a few of our citizens at the Swineford House in the evening and canvassed the subject thoroughly. They have engaged the front of the Cool building and intend commencing business about the 1st of next month. They come among us with a cash capital of $30,000, and our citizens are expected to take stock to the amount of $20,000 more.— This is an institution that we have long felt the need of, and think that every encouragement should be extended. Many of our farmers have money out on interest, and are sometimes put to great trouble as to its security. A bank will obviate all this. Money can be deposited at a reasonable interest and can be withdrawn at any moment. It is a great convenence in business transactions, and there is scarcely any part of community but what will realize some benefit therefrom.

At last the Courier attempts a defense of the system by which half of that paper is printed and controlled by parties residing in Chicago, they inserting advertisements at one cent per line in their half, and Tommy charging his home patrons ten times that amount for a similar favor in his half. For fear his patrons may not see this as he does, he then magnifies the employment of one jour and an apprentice into the constant employment of three full hands in his office.

The above comes from the pen of our gifted Washington. He resembles his great name-sake in but one particular—Washington told the truth, and Charles W. does not. As to our charges they are in some cases about the same as the Press in some cases not. For instance, in business cards the Press charges professional gentlemen at Waterloo and at this place, $6 per year, while for the card of Dr. Todd, occupying 3 times the space of an ordinary card, is inserted for the same price We have but one price for all of our patrons and don't propose that one shall pay 3-times more than another. For fear the patrons of the Press may not see this we would merely call their attention to the different sizes of these cards as they appear in that paper. As to the one jour and apprentice we employ, if we were to give the force of the Press office on the same basis, there would only be one apprentice to enumerate. But we will not be so illiberal as our neighbors on that score. We have, at this writing, a force to work of three full hands, none of whom have worked less than four years at the trade. If Charles W. can prove to the contrary we will make him a present of that $5 that he thought he gobbled up so quick the other week, by substituting a word of his own in our item on the grange question.

'His boast of superior enterprise, is sufficiently answered by the fact that the subscribers to the Press read the President's message just one week before the Courier readers did."

Yes, what the Press does once in a year we do every week. The President's message was printed for them in the commercial office at Toledo in supplement form and did not appear in the columns of the Press at all. How is that for high? He condemns us for giving reading matter in this way every week and then prides himself on the great feat once in a year. Such enterprise deserves a leather medal

TIES WANTED.

The Hon W. Keyser, Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad writes to Mr. J. L. Davis of this place, that Col S. K Johnson, Asst Engineer of this company has been authorized to purchase all the cross ties needed to complete the extension to Chicago. He will be provided with the cash to pay for all the ties as fast as delivered and inspected. He buys them for the company and is not a contractor.

Our farmers will see by this that there is no fear of their getting the cash for their ties as soon as delivered. It is necessary that no time be lost in getting them out, and if a sufficient number are on hand in time the laying of the track will commence, both ways from the Junction, as soon as the weather will permit. A large number is wanted, and we hope they will get them out without delay.

A new Feature in Hash.

Hash, in the vulgar acceptance of the term, is undoubtedly a good thing—at irregular intervals—as an article of boarding house diet, but its great draw-back has been the large amount of elbow grease necessarily expended in its manufacture. We are pleased to be able to announce to professional hash slingers that a gentleman in Fort Wayne has lately made a discovery which will at least create a sensation among potato and hash eaters. The gentlemen on cutting the rind from a small sized "Murphy," a few days since, found a streaked, striped, bloody potato-bug snugly ensconced in a narrow cell, of its own manufacture, an eighth of an inch beneath the surface. It will at once be observed that, should the bug continue this custom, the necessity of mixing meat and potatoes for hash will be obviated—just bake the potato and bug together, and serve the same as quail on toast.

EDUCATIONAL COLUMN.

J. A. BARNS, Conductor.

Examination of Teachers.

Examinations will be held at Auburn, on the first Saturday in each month, and at Waterloo the last Saturday in each month until further notice.

James A. Barns, Co., Supt.

Several qualifications are necessary to make one a successful teacher, among which may be mentioned, as among the most necessary, good government, a good education and a knowledge of human nature. Visits to the different schools show that while we have some teachers who possess all these qualifications in an eminent degree, others are not so fortunate. Some have a good education, but no ability to apply it. Others have a good faculty of teaching and governing a school, but have only a limited education. There are some in the former class who will find it necessary to study how to apply their knowledge to a better advantage or to abandon the work altogether. As for the latter class, although they stand higher in the estimation of the public, yet serious objections might be urged against entrusting our schools in their charge alone, even in the case of those schools that are the most backward. Teachers with a limited education are often selected to teach in a certain district, on the ground that they "can teach anything in that school," and if they succeed in pleasing the people of the district, no one inquires whether the scholars are advancing much or little. And so the matter goes on from year to year, and still the school is "easy to teach." And so it will be for twenty years, if such a teacher is continued in the school. He does not advance the standard of the school, because he cannot do it, and is in the way of any one who can. Each year his pupils reach the same point they reached the year before, and can go but little further, for, as the teacher is not able to give them much assistance, he gives them little or no encouragement to go beyond the usual stopping point. He cares but little about the matter, more than to employ his time to good advantage during the winter months, and pays but little attention to his books, except so much as may be necessary to keep him ahead of his pupils, with every year just enough "reviewing" to enable him to pass examination And now comes the very natural question, "If these teachers go on in this way, how long will it be before these schools cease to be 'easy to teach?'" Is this the way to do what the law contemplates, and what every well-wisher of schools desires, that is to raise the poorer schools to the standard of the best? Certainly not. The manifest duty of such teachers is to apply all their leisure time to study. If they have good natural ability to teach, there is so much the greater demand for a better education, so their abilities may be made useful to the pupils under their charge. We need good teachers, those who have a talent for the work, and we feel like holding out extra inducements to this class, but at the same time insist that our schools must not be held back to accommodate them. We dislike to part with good teachers, but insist that some of them need and must have a more thorough education.

An exchange says: "Few readers have any idea of the exhausting nature of an editor's labors." How true! The poor editor goes home at night and finds his wood-pile exhausted. He immediately goes for the saw and buck. His groceries are exhausted. He trots down town for more, only to find his credit exhausted.—He returns home with a soup bone and is not surprised to find his wife's patience exhausted Night is upon him when he finds his supply of tallow dips exhausted. After roaming all over the neighborhood to borrow a candle, he returns to his cheerless home completely exhausted by his unsuccessful efforts. Truly, the labors of an editor are exhausting.

Free of Charge.—Call at W. & E. T. Martin's Drug Store and get a sample bottle of Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup, Free of Charge. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and for any person suffering with a severe cough, heavy cold settled on the breast consumption or any disease of the throat and lungs it has no equal. Our regular size bottles 75 cents. In all cases money will be promptly returned if perfect satisfaction is not given. Two doses will relieve any case. Try it.

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

ANOTHER scene in the contest for women's rights has just been enacted at Worcester, Mass., where the estates of the women who refused to pay taxes, because they were denied the vote, were put up for sale. But one of them was purchased, and that by a friend. Land taxed without representation is about as unsalable as tea was in the same State about 1775.... The Massachusetts Supreme Court has decided that women have an equal right with men to sit on school boards.... The Maine Senate has voted in favor of the abolition of the death penalty.

A FRIGHTFUL accident occurred the other day at Union Dale, Pa. A locomotive leaped the track, going over an embankment seventy-five feet, killing instantly the engineer, the conductor, the fireman, and the brakeman.

A SHOCKING tragedy was recently enacted in New York city. A party of drunken detectives, in pursuit of a man for whom they had a warrant, broke into the house of a reputable citizen named McNamara, who, resisting the outrageous intrusion, was shot down by the intoxicated officers.... The perpetrator of the New York Stock Exchange hoax has been arrested and held to bail. He is a young man by the name of McCoy.

A NEW YORK police spy reports that there are 300 Communists in that city, and that the German and Irish organizations are organizing with the Frenchmen.... The medical commission which conducted the autopsy upon the Siamese Twins, at Philadelphia, report the following as the most important of their discoveries: They found that the two livers, which were supposed to be joined only by blood-vessels, were really one body, the parenchymatous tissue being continuous between them, so that when they were removed from the bodies and placed on the table they formed one mass. The so-called tract of portal continuity is therefore liver tissue. It will be remembered that Chang was said to be possessed of one more pouch than Eng. When the liver was removed, however, an upper hepatic pouch was found, also, proceeding from Eng, so that the band contained four pouches of peritoneum, besides liver tissue. These disclosures show that any attempt during life to separate the twins would, in all probability, have proved fatal.

The West.

Two rabid dogs made a terrible raid through the streets of Chicago, a few days ago creating the wildest consternation. Seventeen persons and sixty canines were bitten before the brutes were dispatched.

THERE has been serious rioting in St. Clair county, Ill., between the striking coal-miners and the negroes who had taken their places in the mines. Gov. Beveridge, at the call of the Sheriff of the county, has sent arms and ammunition to be used in suppressing the rioting.... Hostile Indians recently appeared at Julesburg and Chappell stations, on the Union Pacific railroad, stole several head of horses, and fired into the station-houses.... The National Crop Reporter publishes estimates in relation to the percentage of the hay and potato crops of 1873, in producers' hands Feb. 1, in the States of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Ohio, and Wisconsin.... These States produced last year over 9,000,000 tons of hay, of which there was on hand Feb. 1 a little over 48 per cent., or about 4,500,000 tons. Illinois retains the lightest percentage, a trifle less than 45, and Wisconsin the heaviest, nearly 52. The States named produced last year about 20,000,000 bushels of Irish potatoes. Amount now on hand 10,000,000 bushels.... The prospects for fruit in Southern Illinois and Southwest Missouri are flattering.... The freight war which has for some time been going on between the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads has gradually spread, and fierce battles are now fighting between these two corporations in nearly every city of the Union. The result is a general reduction of rates and a universal rejoicing among the traveling and shipping public. This battle, which has now lasted for several months in the East, has moved westward, until nearly every Western road is on the war-path.

GENERAL SHERMAN is now at Fort Laramie, Wyoming Territory, where he and General Ord are organizing an army to operate against the murderous Sioux, General John E. Smith will be in command of the troops in the field.... Three hundred men went adrift in East Saginaw Bay, Mich., on the morning of Feb. 23, on a cake of ice upon which they had built a fishing village, and which was driven away from the shore by a strong southwest wind. The cheerless craft bore them out into the lake till a change of the wind to the west brought them up to the eastern shore of the bay, where 200 of them managed to escape at different points. About 100 were still on the ice at last account, and their escape from the perils of the breaking ice and the freezing weather can hardly be hoped for.... A call has been issued a for convention of delegates from the Northwestern States to be held at Rock Island, Ill., on March 24, on the subject of cheap transportation.

A DISPATCH from Saginaw Bay of Feb. 24 states that 75 or 100 men were still on the ice-floes, about ten miles from shore. Little apprehension was felt for their safety, as small parties were constantly making their way to shore, although the passage was very perilous, having to be made over broken cakes of ice.

THIRTY-SIX valuable circus horses and other property of Montgomery Queen's circus were consumed by fire at Morris, Ill., last week.... The Government has recovered judgments against the whole batch of Pekin, (Ill.) distillers, the total amount being $315,000.... The Vogel Excise law, which repeals the Graham Liquor law, together with all restrictions upon the sale of liquor on Sundays or election-days, has been passed by the Wisconsin Assembly.... L. M. Haverstick, editor of the Rock Island (Ill.) Union, was recently cowhided by J. P. Cropper for an alleged insult to Mrs. J. P. C.... Some excitement is caused in San Francisco by serious charges against the Mayor and City Treasurer touching their management of the city's financial affairs, and broad hints are thrown out that a big steal has been going on. The Grand Jury will ventilate the matter.

A DETROIT dispatch of Feb. 25 says: "No definite information has been received in regard to the ice-floe at Bay City, but the general opinion is that all have escaped. If any remain, the north wind, which has prevailed to-day, has probably driven them to their former position, thus enabling them to land. There can, therefore, be no doubt of the safety of the men who have not escaped to the west shore." .... Dispatches from Cheyenne report that the military preparations continue. Gen. Sheridan has returned to Chicago, but Gen. Forsyth will remain and accompany the expedition against the Indians.

A LARGE amount of money and bonds, believed to be the treasure stolen from the First National Bank of Quincy, has been unearthed at Nauvoo, Ill.... A fire destroying property to the amount of $45,000 occurred in South Bend, Ind., on the 26th ult. The Singer Sewing Machine Company is the principal loser.... A dispatch from Saginaw Bay announces the glad tidings that all the fishermen adrift on the ice have safely reached the shore.... Cincinnati is enjoying a little Tammany sensation of its own. It has been discovered that Hon. William S. Groesbeck and Mr. Burnett gave each $12,500 to an Alderman to influence the passage of the bill through the Council authorizing the purchase by the city of Burnett Woods Park, owned jointly by the two gentlemen named. The evidence was too palpable to admit of denial, and Groesbeck and Burnett both plead guilty, but hold that they gave the money with the understanding that it was not to be used in an "improper manner." Too thin.

The South.

COL. WYATT C. THOMAS, an old and prominent Arkansas journalist, is dead.

THE temperance crusade has extended to Mississippi, Tennessee, and other parts of the South.... Steve Lowery, the last survivor of the notorious Robinson county (N. C.) band of outlaws, was recently killed by three farmers near Lumberton. The entire community turned out to view the body of the dead bandit, and expressed the wildest joy at such a deliverance. Thus ends the history of the worst, most cruel and bloodthirsty gang that ever infested any country. A reward of $6,200 will be paid the parties concerned.

DAMAGING freshets are reported in various parts of the South. The running of railway trains has been seriously interrupted by the destruction of bridges and culverts.... There is great rejoicing in Robeson and adjacent counties in North Carolina at the death of Steve Lowery, the last of the Scuffletown outlaws, and large numbers of people flocked to Lumberton to view the dead body of the terrible bandit. When shot he carried a rifle, three pistols and a knife.

Washington.

A STRONG movement is being made for the abolition of the tax on leaf tobacco.... The House Committee on Appropriations have reduced the amount of the Indian appropriation bill to about five millions of dollars. The estimates were for about seven millions.

A WASHINGTON correspondent states that the Senate Appropriation Committee will propose the abolition of the postal-car system on railroads, and the repeal of the clause providing for the free delivery of letters—the latter, on the ground that large sums are thus spent for the benefit of residents in a few cities, which the people at large are taxed to pay for.

THE House Commerce Committee have prepared a bill to compel the Chicago and Northwestern railroad to allow the use of the bridge across the Mississippi River at Clinton, Ia., to the Chicago and Dubuque Railroad Company. It will undoubtedly pass.

WE give below an analysis of the vote of Western Congressmen on the proposition to revive the franking privilege: Illinois—Barriere, Clements, Farwell, Fort, Hawley, McNulta, Morrison, Robinson, and Ward voted no. Burchard, Cannon, Corwin, Hurlbut, Knapp, Marshall, Martin, Bay and Rice voted aye. Eden absent and not voting. Wisconsin—Barber, Eldredge, Hazleton, McDill, Rusk, Sawyer, and Williams, of Wisconsin, voted aye, Mitchell voting no. Minnesota—Averill and Dunnell, voted aye. Michigan—Begole, Conger, and Field voted aye, the rest of the delegation voting no. Iowa—Donnan and Orr, voted aye, while Cotton, Kassan, McCrary, McDill, and Pratt, voted no. Loughridge absent. Ohio—Danford, Gunckel, Neal, Robinson, Southard, and Woodworth, voted aye. Parsons, absent. The rest in the negative. Of the Indiana delegation, Coburn, Niblack, and Hunter voted aye, the rest of the delegation voting no. In the Missouri delegation, those voting aye were Buckner, Clark, Glover, Hatcher, Havens, and Parker. The rest in the negative. The entire Kansas, delegation voted aye.

LEADING members express the opinion that Congress will not adjourn before July.

Political.

THE Iowa Anti-Monopolists held a State Convention at Des Moines on the 25th of February. Sixty-two counties were represented. Resolutions were adopted favoring a "faithful administration of the laws;" of "political reform;" repudiating the doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils," and instead thereof a "true system of civil service reform;" denouncing a protective tariff as a monopoly, and demanding free iron, steel, salt and lumber; that all corporations are subject to legislative control; favoring a modification of the banking system; opposing all grants of lands to railroads and other corporations; condemning the pretended repeal of the salary-grab as a fraud when not applied to the President as well as to all others concerned; denying the alleged necessity of a State Printer and Binder as "a party organ, supported by public patronage;" denouncing the Credit Mobilier and other National Treasury steals.

THE nomination of Simmons, to be Collector of Boston, has been rejected by the United States Senate.

The Grange.

A DELEGATE convention of the State Grange of Illinois is to be held at Bloomington on the 14th of April.

THE so-called Boston Grange, which was excommunicated by the National Grange, refuses to disband, and has set up an organization of its own.

Foreign.

THE new British Ministry is composed as follows: First Lord of the Treasury, Disraeli; Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Northcote; First Lord of Admiralty, George Ward Hunt; Secretary of State for the Home Department, Richard Asheton Cross; Secretary of State for the Foreign Department, Earl Derby; Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, Earl Carnarvon; Secretary of State for War, Gathorne Hardy; Secretary of State for India, Marquis of Salisbury; Lord High Chancellor, Lord Cairns; Lord of the Privy Seal, Earl Malmesbury; Lord President of the Council, the Duke of Richmond; Lord John Manners is appointed Postmaster-General.... Political disturbances are threatened in Japan.... The French Bonapartists are to be spotted. Duke de Broglie has given orders to Prefects of departments to keep watch of the parties who leave for Chiselhurst on the occasion of the Prince Imperial becoming of age.

THE King of Ashantee is a prisoner in the hands of the British troops.... London papers announce that Gladstone has determined to no longer take an active part in Parliamentary proceedings.... The Pope has caused an urgent request to be sent to all the Bishops to visit Rome, as he desires to see them before he dies.... The insurrection in Japan is becoming formidable.... A Madrid dispatch announces heavy fighting in Biscay, with severe loss on both sides. The Carlists have evacuated Portugalite.... A Havana letter gives details of the recent disturbances in that city, inklings of which have reached us by telegraph. The rioters assembled in large numbers in front of the Captain-General's palace, and demanded, with loud cries, a change of the decrees regarding the draft. The civil guards fired on the mob, killing five and wounding a large number. Volunteers were then stationed at different points in the city, to prevent further disorders, which fact doubtless led to the absurd rumor, which came via Key West, that the city had been taken possession of by rebellious volunteers and Jovellar expelled.

THE latest reports from the famine in India state that 280,000 people are now suffering from want of food, and that, but for the aid of the British authorities, 500,000 would starve to death.... A treaty of peace has been signed by Sir Garnet Wolsely and the King of Ashantee.... A London dispatch states that Sir Michael Hicks Beach has been appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland; Sir Henry Selwin Ibbetson Under-Secretary for the Home Department, and Sir Charles Adderly President of the Board of Trade. Sir John Pakington has been elevated to the Peerage, under the title of Baron Hamilton.... The Queen, at the recommendation of Gladstone, has granted a pension of $1,000 per annum to the children of Dr. Livingstone. Sir Bartle Frere is convinced of the truth of the reported death of the great traveler. The Cameron Expedition will proceed to Ujiji, to obtain the documents and property left by the Doctor.

A TERRIBLE affair is reported from the State of Vera Cruz, Mexico. A quarrel between the townsmen of Quimixtlan and Huascaleca resulted in a fight in which seventeen persons were killed. It is reported that the infuriated Huascalecans afterward went to Quimixtlan and began an indiscriminate massacre, killing children and cutting off the breasts of women.

IT would appear that the reports recently telegraphed across the Atlantic to the effect that the Ashantee war was over, and that the British troops were on the homeward march, were somewhat premature. A London dispatch announces that a great battle has been fought at Accroomba, between the Ashantees and the force under Gen. Sir Garnet Wolseley. The engagement is said to have lasted a whole day, and to have closed with no decided result. The loss of the British troops is given as nearly 300, including many officers. The natives at one time entirely surrounded the British army, but were eventually driven off after desperate fighting. The utmost anxiety is felt in London for the safety of the army.... The German exploring expedition in the Lybian Desert, under Gerhard Rohlfs, the well-known traveler, has reached the famous oasis of Dachel, containing 17,000 inhabitants. Valuable geographical discoveries have been made, and six maps of the country have been taken.

A DISPATCH has been received at the London War Office from Sir Garnet Wolseley, commanding the British forces in Ashantee, dated Coomasie, Feb. 26, in which he states that he had reached that city the day before, after five days' hard fighting, attended with severe loss.

THE TEMPERANCE CRUSADE.

Progress of the Good Work—The Contagion Spreading All Over the Country—The Large Cities Becoming Infected.

The women's crusade against the dramshops is spreading in all directions. The assaulting party is firing regular broadsides of prayer into the saloons, following them up with a raking fire of psalms, sung in long, short and common meter, to suit the occasion, with a few scattering shots in the way of exhortations to the wicked gin-slingers to flee from the wrath to come. The telegraphic dispatches and mail correspondence of the daily papers give reports of the surprising manner in which this singular warfare is extending. It has assumed proportions so formidable that it is no longer a sensation, and must now be discussed, if not as a revolution, at least as a terribly earnest and an apparently effective crusade.

Dr. Dio Lewis has abandoned the field in Ohio and gone to New England to inaugurate the great work in Worcester, Springfield and Boston, but will return about the middle of March to prosecute the war again in the West.

The prohibitionists in New York and Philadelphia are planning a campaign, and in St. Louis and other large cities active preparations are going on for a temperance revival.

The crusade is being vigorously prosecuted in the towns of Ohio with the greatest success. In Xenia a number of saloons have been closed, and all others are expected to capitulate before many days. A saloon-keeper in that town, who had closed his doors against the women and taken refuge in the cellar, emerged from his subterranean retreat the other day, bearing in his hand a white bag in token of surrender. Each victory is made the occasion of a grand jubilee.

At Hillsboro, Ohio, Judge Steele has dissolved the injunction against the praying ladies.

G. W. Miller, proprietor of a saloon at Salem, Ohio, has closed up his doors and emptied all his liquors in the street.

In Dayton, preparations for an active war on the rum-sellers are going forward.

At Terre Haute, Richmond, and other large towns in Indiana, the temperance advocates are marshalling their forces for a vigorous campaign.

An attempt to open the movement in Oshkosh, Wis., has met with poor success.

The war has invaded Omaha, Neb., and prayer-meetings are being held in the saloons of that city.

The contagion has even developed itself as far west as Colorado, and singing and praying bands are at work in Denver, Golden City, and other towns.

In Indianapolis the women are organizing for the good work.

It is reported from Cleveland, Ohio, that 1,500 women of that city are banded together, and will begin a concerted praying raid on the cohorts of King Alcohol in a few days. Three thousand ladies in New York are said to be banded together for a similar purpose.

The Centennial—Message of the President.

The President has sent the following message to Congress in regard to the Centennial Exhibition:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have the honor herewith to submit the report of the Centennial Commissioners, and to add a word in way of recommendation. There have now been international expositions held by three of the great powers of Europe. It seems fitting that the one hundredth anniversary of our Independence should be marked by an event that will display to the world the growth and progress of a nation devoted to freedom and to the pursuit of fame, fortune, and honor by the lowest citizen as well as the highest. A failure in this enterprise would be deplorable. Success can be assured by arousing public opinion to the importance of the occasion. To secure this end, in my judgment, Congressional legislation is necessary to make the exposition both national and international. The benefits to be derived from a successful international exposition are manifold. It will necessarily be accompanied by expenses beyond the receipts from the exposition itself, but they will be compensated for many fold by the commingling of the people from all sections of our own country, by bringing together the people of different nationalities, by bringing into juxtaposition for ready examination our own and foreign skill and progress in manufactures, agriculture, art, science, and civilization. The selection of the site for the Exposition seems to me appropriate from the fact that 100 years before the day fixed for the Exposition the Declaration of Independence, which launched us into the galaxy of nations as an independent people, emanated from the same spot. We have much in our varied climate, soil, mineral products, and skill, of which advantage can be taken by other nationalities to their profit. In return, they will bring to our shores works of their skill, and familiarize our people with them to the mutual advantage of all parties. Let us have a complete success of our Centennial Exposition, or suppress it in its infancy, acknowledging our inability to give it the international character to which our self-esteem aspires.

(Signed) U. S. GRANT.

CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Feb. 20.—Senate.—The bill for the equalization of the currency was again before the Senate, on a motion to reconsider the vote of Thursday, by which the substitute of Cooper was adopted. The motion was carried, and the substitute rejected. The question then recurring on Merrimon's resolution to instruct the Finance Committee to report a bill providing for an expansion of the National Bank circulation to $400,000,000, it was adopted by a vote of 28 to 26.... No other business of importance was transacted.

House.—The day was devoted principally to the consideration of private bills.... The calling up of a bill authorizing the Washington and Point Lookout railroad to extend its line through Washington city produced a good deal of agitation and excitement among members, the Pennsylvania members opposing it bitterly. The discussion was carried on amid great noise and confusion. The House adjourned pending a motion to table the bill.

SATURDAY, Feb. 21.—Senate.—Not in session.

House.—Most of the day was devoted to the consideration of private bills, a number of which were disposed of.... Banning presented a petition to have the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday declared a public holiday.... The bill authorizing the Point Lookout railway to extend its line through Washington was discussed at length, and finally referred to the Committee of the Whole.... Adjourned to Tuesday, 24th.

MONDAY, Feb. 23.—Senate.—The Senate met, and after prayer by the Chaplain, Anthony rose and said that the country was to-day celebrating the birthday of Washington, and it was not customary for the Senate to sit on such a day, unless there was an extraordinary pressure of business. He, therefore, moved that the Senate adjourn. The motion was unanimously carried, and the Senate adjourned.

House.—Not in session.

TUESDAY, Feb. 24.—Senate.—Petitions were presented from citizens of Chicago for and against an expansion of the currency.... The bill to equalize the currency was again before the Senate, and Schurz delivered an elaborate speech against further expansion. He was answered by Morton on behalf of the inflationists.

House.—Bills introduced: by Woodman, to regulate the service of the collection of customs, also to regulate duties on imported wines; by Smith (Pa.), to enable the Mennonites of Russia to effect a settlement on public land; by Smith (Va.), to abolish the offices of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the Commissioner of Customs, etc.; by Packard, yielding to the State of Indiana lands covered by Wolf Lake and Lake George; by Field, to increase the currency and to provide for its inter-conversion with Government bonds, and to abolish the sinking fund; by Barker, to abolish capital punishment; by Burchard, to facilitate the exportation of distilled spirits (passed).... The larger portion of the day was devoted to the consideration of the bill looking to a partial revival of the franking privilege, which went over without action.... Shanks offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Indian Affairs to investigate the status of the Indians in the United States and Territories as to their citizenship under the Constitution. Adopted.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 25.—Senate.—The bill creating a commission to investigate the alcohol and liquor traffic was discussed. Mr. Schurz opposed it, claiming that the Government had an equal right to appoint a commission to consider extravagance in dress or indigestion. Howe and Buckingham spoke in favor of the bill.... Ferry presented a petition from the workingmen of Michigan, asking for the substitution of national bank currency for legal-tenders, and that such currency be made legal-tenders for all debts, public and private.... Wright introduced a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain and certify as to the quantity of land located under military warrants in certain States.... The Senate consumed another day in discussing the currency, the debate being participated in principally by Sherman, Schurz and Morton.... A message from the President in regard to the Centennial Exhibition was read and ordered printed.

House.—Bradley (Mich.), from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill to amend the act of June 10, 1872, for the restoration to market of certain lands in Michigan.... Orth's bill for the issuing and recording of commissions to Postmasters appointed by the President was passed. The object of the bill is to transfer that duty from the State Department to the Patent Office.... The bill to amend the Steamship Passenger act in regard to the publication of lists of immigrants was passed.... Small presented resolutions of the New Hampshire Press Association for the restoration of the law allowing weekly newspapers free transmission through the mails in the county of their publication.... The bill to restore the franking privilege was again up in the House, and furnished the occasion for a sharp discussion, in the course of which the irrepressible Ben Butler availed himself of the opportunity to vent his spleen against the villainous press. He fairly eclipsed all his former efforts in this line.

THURSDAY, Feb. 26.—Senate.—The bill prescribing the form of oath to be taken by Post-office officials was passed.... Schurz presented a petition from Missouri tobacco manufacturers asking for the removal of the duty on stick licorice.... The Senate refused, by a vote of 28 to 23, to take up the Centennial bill.... The Naval Appropriation bill was passed, as amended by the Committee.... The Army Appropriation bill was reported from the Committee, and ordered printed.

House.—The entire day was consumed in considering the bill reviving the franking privilege. The amendment authorizing the Postmaster-General to delay the transmission of documents whenever the welfare of the service shall so require, and it was rejected by an overwhelming majority. Hale's substitute to repeal the law which abolished the franking privilege was rejected—yeas, 80; nays, 190. The vote was then taken on the passage of the original bill, and it was rejected by the close vote of 129 to 131.

Chang and Eng—Singular but Solemn Compact.

Up to the year 1857, the twins lived together quite harmoniously, it is said, when, owing to domestic quarrels, the true cause of which never has transpired, a dissolution of the firm of E. & C. Bunker was agreed upon. Some say it was fighting among the children, others that it was jealousy of the wives about the number of children they had that caused the separation; but be that as it may, Eng purchased an adjoining plantation, upon which he built a house, just one mile distant from the old home, which now became the exclusive property of Chang. In the division of the property the whole of the original plantation fell to Chang, while a large majority of the slaves, being movable property, became Eng's. Hence it was that, when the result of the war brought about the emancipation of the slaves, Eng found himself a much poorer man than his brother, though both of them were then very well off.

Immediately upon the separation the brothers made an agreement, which, like the laws of the Medes and Persians, was unalterable, and which to their very deaths was rigidly observed. This was that every alternate three days were reserved exclusively to each of the brothers to do as he pleased. For instance, the three days that belonged to Eng were spent at his house or anywhere else that Eng might choose to go. During that time Chang was merely an appendage of Eng, having neither the right to go anywhere that Eng did not choose to go, nor the power to attend to any business whatever of a private nature of his own. In the same way, when Chang's three days came, and they were punctual to a moment, they departed at once for his home, where he assumed supreme control of the actions and movements of both, and Eng became the nonentity. So exact were they with this rule that no event, however great in importance, and no stress of weather, no matter how severe, could prevent them starting from the house of one to the house of the other, when the three days of either had expired. It is related of them that this rule caused one to leave his home just as the marriage of his daughter was about to take place, and the other was prevented from attending the funeral of a son by the stringency of this singular compact. They carried it out to the last, for Chang's final three days had expired on the Thursday evening prior to their deaths, and though it was very cold, misty and severe weather, to Eng's house he would go, in accordance with the irrepealable law.

SAD CASE OF MATRIMONIAL INFILICITY.—A young married man living near Columbus, Wis., returned home a few nights ago unexpectedly, and found another young man sharing his wife's bed. He returned the next morning and took away his three-year-old boy, leaving the miserable woman to the fate into which she had fallen. A day or two afterward the mother was discovered in an insane condition about one of the outbuildings of a neighbor, with the shoes of her child in her hand, searching for him under the frantic delusion that he was buried somewhere in the snow. She is still a lunatic.—Exchange.

STARTLING FIGURES.

The Liquor Business of the United States—Enormous Extent of the Trade—The Money Invested and Men Engaged in It—A Powerful Temperance Sermon.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post furnishes that journal a detailed statement of the amount of intoxicating liquors used in the United States. The exhibit is certainly a most startling one, few people having any adequate conception of the enormous extent of the business. He says that he has obtained the figures from official documents, and that he has presented them in the following compact form, so that even the casual reader may see how large, both absolutely and relatively, the traffic in intoxicating liquors is in the United States:

Statistics showing the amount of money spent in the United States for intoxicating liquors during the year 1870, as taken from official records:

Total	$1,483,491,865

Add to this, $90,000,000, the cost of litigations, crimes, prisons, etc., caused in part by intemperance, and we have for a single year the enormous sum of $1,573,491,865.

The cost of flour and meal was	$530,000,000
The cost of cotton goods	115,000,000
The cost of boots and shoes	90,000,000
The cost of clothing	70,000,000
The cost of woolen goods	60,000,000
The cost of newspapers and job printing	40,000,000
Total	$905,000,000

There were 140,000 licensed liquor saloons in the United States, each having (estimated) 40 daily customers, making 5,600,000 drinkers, who, it is estimated, spent their money during the year in the following proportions:

Drinkers.	Spent each.	Amount.
100,000	$1,000	$100,000,000
100,000	900	90,000,000
100,000	800	80,000,000

1,000,000	400	400,000,000
1,000,000	300	300,000,000
1,000,000	200	200,000,000
1,000,000	150	150,000,000
1,000,000	75	75,000,000
5,600,000		$1,575,000,000

The quantity of distilled, fermented and brewed liquors drank was sufficient to fill a canal 4 feet deep, 14 feet wide, and 80 miles long; and if all the drinkers could be placed in procession, five abreast, they would make an army 130 miles long, and if those killed by the intemperate use of spirituous liquors were there also, we should see a suicide at every five miles, and 550 funerals per day; and if all the places where intoxicating liquors are sold were placed in rows, in direct line, they would make a street 100 miles long.

There were 400,000 more persons engaged in the liquor business in the United States than in preaching the gospel and school-teaching; and from the effects of intoxicating drinks, 100,000 are annually sent to prisons, 150,000 to drunkards' graves, and 200,000 children are reduced to want. The total number of persons engaged in the business is 560,000, of which 56,663 are employed in making and selling annually 5,685,633 barrels of beer.

It is estimated that the clergy of the United States costs annually $12,000,000; the lawyers, criminals, prisons, etc., $90,000,000; and intoxicating liquors, as before said, $1,474,000,000.

The State of Pennsylvania spent during the year 1870, for liquors of all kinds, $152,663,495; and for schools and teaching, $5,863,729. She had engaged in the liquor business, 78,800 persons, 16,870 school-teachers, and 24,000 criminals—four-fifths of whom were made so by strong drink.

The city of Philadelphia had 4,160 drinking places, and spent for intoxicating drinks $30,000,000 in one year. Chicago had 2,300 liquor saloons, and spent for intoxicating liquors $14,000,000. Newark had 864 drinking saloons, and spent for strong drinks $4,500,000.

The city of New York had 7,000 licensed drinking saloons, which, if placed in rows in direct lines, would make a street like Broadway thirteen miles long. She spent for intoxicating liquors $60,000,000 during the year 1870, and there were employed in the business 35,000 persons. There were 65,000 arrests for intoxication and disorderly conduct, and 80,000 persons were in institutions under care of the Commissioners of Public Charity.

Borax for Colds.

A writer in the Medical Report cites a number of cases in which borax has proved a most effective remedy in certain forms of colds. He states that in sudden hoarseness or loss of voice in public speakers or singers, from colds, relief for an hour or so, as by magic, may be often obtained by slowly dissolving, and partially swallowing, a lump of borax the size of a garden pea, or about three or four grains, held in the mouth for ten minutes before speaking or singing. This produces a profuse secretion of saliva, or "watering" of the mouth and throat—probably restoring the voice or tone to the dried vocal cords, just as "wetting" brings back the missing notes to a flute, when it is too dry.

Death of a Famous Detective.

Eli Devoe, who died recently at Monmouth, N. J., was one of the best known of New York detectives. At the commencement of the rebellion he entered the service of the Government. When Lincoln started to Washington before his first inauguration, Devoe and Tom Lampson were sent to Baltimore to investigate the rumor that the President would be assassinated in that city. The work was difficult and dangerous, and had to be prosecuted with the utmost secrecy. They managed to mix with the active secessionists, and finally joined a secret society whose intent was to kill Lincoln under the cover of a concerted mob. It had been arranged that the President should be escorted through the streets, and the murder was to have been done while a number of the society attacked and disordered the procession. Devoe and Lampson got the details of the plot as members of the society, and it was upon their information that the expedient of carrying Lincoln through on another train was adopted. When the plot had failed the society looked about for traitors in their midst, and they soon learned that Devoe and Lampson were not residents of Baltimore. This was enough to arouse their suspicions, and the detectives found it necessary to quit so suddenly that their baggage was left behind. They went to Washington, and were followed by a gang of Baltimore roughs, who infested their hotel, and probably intended vengeance of some kind. But here again detective work thwarted any plan that may have been concerted. Another detective, who had gone to Washington as one of the Baltimore gang, found a chance to put Devoe and Lampson on their guard.

Devoe remained in Government employ during the war, at times acting as a spy within the rebel lines, and upon the assassination of Lincoln was one of the many detectives who were put at work to hunt out those concerned in the plot. He arrested Mrs. Surratt, and while at her house detected Paine in the guise of a laborer. The arrest of Paine brought him a large reward.

Two Men Lost Their Lives Through Fear.

It is well-known now that small-pox existed for some weeks in a store on Center street, and committed great ravages in the family circle of the storekeeper. Among the customers who dealt at his store were two men, one a well-to-do storekeeper at Auburn, and the other from Cressona. One day the Auburn man came to this store, bought a stock of goods, and in going out noticed that the doors and windows were closed. He asked the reason of this funeral appearance of things. "Why," said some one, "don't you know that they have small-pox there?" At this intelligence the heart of the Auburn man sank within him, he was at once seized with pains, went home and died of small-pox in three days. The fate of the Cressona man was almost exactly similar. He entered the same store, was informed of the existence of small-pox there, was dreadfully frightened, and went home to die of small-pox.—Pottsville (Pa.) Journal.

CHICAGO manufactories employ over 100,000 men, having an invested capital of $52,000,000, and turn out annually $125,000,000 worth of products.

THE GRANGERS.

What They are Doing—Items from Various Points—Spirit of the Press.

THE farmers are rapidly learning their numerical strength. Their great order of the Patrons of Husbandry now boasts a membership of 780,000. Most of these are voters, and for intelligence and energy are vastly superior to any other tillers of the soil to be found in the world.—Inter-Ocean.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Grangers of Des Moines and Lee counties, Iowa, and Hancock county, Ill., met at Fort Madison, Iowa, recently to discuss the propriety of establishing a grain and implement agency at that point. A proposition was made favoring annexation to the Keokuk agency, which was referred to a committee to report at a future meeting.

THE following resolutions have been adopted by Penn Grange 353, of Guthrie county, Iowa:

WHEREAS, Certain of the so-called Chicago rings have boasted that they could blow up certain granges by a few gifts or half-price sales, and thereby turn them away from those who have stood firm thus far through the fight; therefore, be it

Resolved, by this grange, That we will buy none of their implements of the so-called rings or their agents. Further, that we will not buy any of their half-price, neither use any of their free-gift implements.

VERMONT seems to take kindly to the Grangers. There are now 63 divisions of Patrons of Husbandry in the State, six in Orleans county, ten in Franklin, one in Essex, one in Grand Isle, six in Lamoille, twelve in Caledonia, four in Chittenden, ten in Washington, four in Orange, one in Windsor, five in Rutland, one in Bennington, and two in Windham. The grange at St. Johnsbury Centre disbanded recently, to get rid of the non-agricultural members, and another was organized composed entirely of farmers.

"THE grange is not political," but Grangers have votes, and in Illinois the Farmers' Movement is an organized voting force. In the Sixteenth District a day has already been named (Aug. 27) for a "Farmers' Congressional Nominating Convention" at Vandalia. M. M. Hooton, one of the most active organizers in that district, says:

"We seek reforms that can only be effected by the ballot, and it is nonsense to try to keep intelligent men from discussing these questions in an organization created for the special purpose of reforming these political abuses."

THEY (the Grangers) are compelled to enter the struggle by the constant call of the tax-gatherer. A voice cries out to them from the fumes of every cup of tea or coffee. It sounds in the very squeak of their boots, and groans along the face of the plowshare. The glib click of the reaper and mower has the ring of taxes and tariffs, and comes back in a wail with returns from the sale of the farmers' crops.—Speech of Judge Randall at Morris, Ill.

A LARGE farmers' meeting was held at Earville, Ill., recently, at which speeches were made by Prof. Taylor, of Chicago, and others favorable to the grange cause. Much enthusiasm prevailed. Resolutions were passed in favor of a greenback currency; the abolition of the national banking system; that the Executive shall enforce the laws against railroads refusing to obey, as he would against rioters and other unlawful combinations who violate the law; denouncing the LaSalle County Agricultural Association, and demanding of it the return of $3,000 misappropriated in connection with certain fair ground transaction. The meeting was a success in numbers and in all respects.

IN DeKalb, Ill., a special meeting of the DeKalb County Grange was held recently to consider the subject and take action as to the forming of a stock association at Lyndon, Ill., for the manufacture of agricultural implements. A statement was made that $100,000 would be required to commence operations, and that $10,000 per grange was necessary, and claiming that 50 per cent. can be saved on the manufacture of plows, and $400 on threshing machines. The combination among sewing machine manufacturers and implement makers was denounced, and a spirit of enterprise was manifested. The granges throughout that section are in a healthy condition.

NOW WE don't want to make the kid-glovers too sick at once, but we cannot refrain from saying, in this appropriate place, that Wisconsin elected last fall, and has just now inaugurated, a farmer for Governor of the Badger State. So, then, the producing class is coming to the front, at the East and the West, and the lawyers and the politicians are quietly asked to take back seats. Back seats, gentlemen, if you please. Take your beringged fingers and bestudded linen up into the gallery, and let the honest, horny-handed sons of toil govern awhile. It hurts, we know, gentlemen, and we are extremely sorry that your occupation is gone. What would you say if the next Governor of Indiana should be a genuine farmer?—Indiana Granger.

THE editor of the Nation, whose Western travels have never extended further West than Cincinnati, and whose experience in Western political movements is confined to the part he took in trying to engineer the Greeley and Brown convention in Cincinnati, has expressed the opinion that the farmers' movement has completely failed. And the same week the Nation expressed this opinion the New York Post warned the politicians that the movement was rapidly gaining strength and momentum, and that in time it would sweep away all opposition. There is a great deal more in the farmers' movement than is dreamt of in the philosophy of our Eastern editorial brethren.—St. Louis Democrat.

AT a recent large and enthusiastic meeting of the Patrons of Husbandry, in Menard county, Ill., the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The monopoly manufacturing establishments of this State have refused to sell to the Grangers and farmers' clubs of the State their plows, machinery, etc., except through agents appointed by said manufacturers; and,

WHEREAS, We believe the greatest good to the greatest number is correct in principle; be it therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we favor home industry and our own mechanics by making purchases of them, provided their work shall be as good and as cheap as can be procured elsewhere.

2. That as Patrons we are opposed to the credit system, and as far as possible urge the necessity of accompanying all purchase with the money.

3. That we exercise great caution in purchasing anything of the middlemen and agents in the country, who are making a living, not by hard work, but by too often deceiving the honest purchasers, and that we recommend that the individual members of the order in the country give them the go-by on all occasions.

Class Legislation.

[Extract from the Speech of Judge Randall, at Morris, Ill.

Class legislation is among the crying evils of the times. It is well named as the starting point of grievances in the Decatur Convention. By it capital has been very rapidly and very insidiously stealing from the hands of the many to the few. It has reached far beyond the halls of legislation, and become the corrupter of courts, and filled political parties with debaucheries. It has listened to the grasping intriguer, and has persistently overlooked the cries of the industrious millions for relief. It has opened the avenues through which the scheming and dishonest plunderers can filch from the farmers his crops, and from the laborer his honest earnings. It has kept the farmer and laborer poor, while it has built up the financial, the mercantile, the manufacturing and the transporting interests, until they have been enabled to monopolize the wealth of the country—to make money scarce at their beck—to control the market and bring about those ruinous fluctuations which palsy the arm of industry and paralyze its hopes—to manipulate transportation and commerce in such a manner as to throw all the burdens and all the hazards back upon the industries—to take the just burdens of taxation, in a great measure, from the capital of the country, and cast them upon the overburdened shoulders of labor. The most arrogant demand of the Southern slaveholder, for the extension of his peculiar institution, was not more repugnant to our reason and our manhood than the present demand of the office-holders' party to cling to its corruptions, and grow rich out of the exactions unjustly forced upon the laboring population. I need not detail the manner in which it has been accomplished; but the facts are clearly before the whole country that labor is poorly fed and poorly clothed, while the aristocracy which has gathered around the party in power is rolling in wealth and splendor, and votes to itself double salaries while it laughs the protests of a tax-ridden people to derision and scorn. They look contemptuously upon reasonable complaints, and in the insolent language of the villainous Tweed inquire, "What are you going to do about it?"

This convention and the conventions being held throughout the country are preparing to answer this very insinuating question. First, we are going to organize in the interest of labor. We are going to call the sons of toil together in deliberate and thoughtful counsel. We are going to throw old party prejudices to the four winds of heaven, and unite in a mass to oppose this class legislation, which has filled our country with injustice and misrule, and demand equality of rights and benefits in the administration of this Government. We are going to insist that the Tweeds, and Gages, and Howards, and the other countless horde of public defaulters, be driven from their places of plunder. We are going to denounce with fearless voice the system of high and double salaries. We are going to insist that all those who have taken part in the system of public plunder, whether they be Presidents, Vice-Presidents, members of Congress, or whatever position they may hold, shall take their places back in the ranks of the people, where they will find less opportunity to plunder. We are going to maintain that all transportation lines are public highways, which belong to the world and are liable to the just control of the laws. That the franchises of corporations consist in the right to hold and operate them according to law, and not according to their schemes of personal aggrandizement. We are going to try to stop the domination of rings, in the form of boards of trade, and commission merchants, and warehouse operators, and the other cunningly devised contrivances by which they pilfer from the products of labor from the moment they are started on their way to market. We are going to insist upon an increase of the currency, to be in paper of the Government, based upon its public debt, and made a legal tender, to take the place of bonds bearing interest which the people now have to pay. We are going to insist that the farming interest has at least one-half the right to fix the price upon the necessaries of life which they produce. Thus far we are now pretty well agreed. If the future shall develop other objects claiming our attention, the same determined purpose which has stimulated us to confront these great principles will also enable us to embrace others.

We have organized a party because many of our objects can only be effected by united party action. If we desire to have measures carried out, we must select men with a view to such measures. If we desire reform, we must have men who are earnestly in favor of reform. If we want a reduction of expenses, we cannot depend upon men who have doubled up expenses until they are compelled to tax our tea and coffee. If we desire to stop class legislation, we cannot depend upon men who are placed in power by the action of corrupt and scheming rings, or who lend a patient ear to a tempting lobby. Thus party action becomes a necessity. Old issues belong to the past. The exigencies of the country demand action upon the emergencies of the immediate present, and to these we are required to give attention if we will relieve ourselves of burdens too grievous to be borne. For these reasons we have organized a party or association, and pledged ourselves each to the other to carry out and labor earnestly for the reforms which the interests of the country demand. Already, our efforts have been crowned with a success which has commanded the attention of the whole people. When Jay Cooke was unable to carry his grasping schemes further, it was said the farmers' movement did it. When a large number of other banks became alarmed at Jay Cooke's failure and closed their doors, it was said the farmers' movement did it. When the railroads stopped half their business because the money was locked up in banks, and there was not enough in circulation to pay railroad freights, it was said the farmers' movement did it. When the workshops closed their doors and threw their operatives out of employment, it was said the farmers' movement did it. And, now, let them go a little further, and when pork has gone up to over six dollars a hundred in the face of the panic, and the resolution of the Northwestern Convention, let them acknowledge the farmers' movement did that; and when corn has gone to over fifty cents, let them say the farmers' movement did that; and when the country has refused to be frightened at the bankers' panic, but has proceeded forward with its accustomed business, let them acknowledge the farmers' movement did that; and, as one reform after another follows in our track, let them say the farmers' movement did it, till the country is filled from one end to the other with the beneficent fruits of the farmers' movement.

We are sometimes charged with what is termed communism. It seems to be cast upon us by our opponents, as a term of reproach. I confess I do not fully understand its practical definition. But if it means that destructive desperation to which the down-trodden are sometimes driven by the injustice of tyrannical rule, I do not hesitate to say, it is the very condition in this country, which we are organized to endeavor to prevent. In about two years we shall have outlived a century of our national history. In that space of time we have brought the wilds of a continent to be the abiding place of civilization. Our march has been contested inch by inch by savages, but we have treated them in the main with humanity. We have belted a continent with the iron bands which unite two mighty oceans, and held out the beckoning hand to the commerce of the Indies. We have carried on two wars with the most powerful nations of Europe with victorious results. We have spanned the continent and plowed the depths of the ocean with telegraphs. We have founded institutions of learning that compare favorably with the most enlightened nations. We have made religion as free from governmental control as the air we breathe, and it is wholly beyond the reach of governmental intolerance. We have opened wide marts of commerce and reared great cities which command the admiration of mankind. We have made inter-communication vastly more easy by a system of railroads, scattered broadcast over the land. When the harvests of other lands are scanty, they look to us for bread. We have crushed out a mighty rebellion and sundered forever the chains of African slavery. These are some of the great fruits of a century's industry. Still one question of commanding magnitude remains unadjusted. It is the question of the status of labor and its bearing upon the destinies of the country. Until the question is settled upon a national and just basis, we cannot well hope for immunity from the discontented acts of the oppressed, whether they be acts of one kind of lawlessness ar another. We make no war upon the institutions of society, nor upon the civilization of the age. But pointing to the evils which paralyze the industries on which the world depends for its institutions, its civilization and its bread, with a high reverence for our laws and a patriotic hope for the future of our race, we implore all men to take note of the cloud which is rising, and by a just system to dispel it as the genial rays of the sun dispel the threatening hurricane.

The Aunt.

An aunt is not to be found on every bush. The ignorant may perhaps suppose that the quality of auntness inheres in every sister of a parent. In form, possibly; but in substance, not necessarily by any means. An aunt is a being who can only exist for children. Grown persons cannot (unless they are childlike) have real aunts. For those who can, the aunt is a deligtful personage who has all the merits of a mother, but in a more exalted degree, and none of those defects of harshness, discipline, infliction, peremptoriness, and the like, that so often and sadly mar the natural sweetness of the filio-parental relation. The aunt, you see, can permit, but cannot forbid. She is a beatified mother. And any person claiming to be an aunt, and falling short of these attainments, is an impostor.—Old and New.

THE wealth of France is increased by about 80,000,000 francs by the use of horse-flesh as food.

A Clerical Shot at Gen. Jackson.

John Rankin contributes to the Chicago Interior the following reminiscence of Rev. John Henderson, an old-time preacher of Tennessee:

In those early times, the barbarous practice of fighting duels prevailed to some extent among a class of men who professed to be gentlemen. This horrible barbarity Mr. Henderson depicted in its darkest aspect as fraught with cowardice and murder. It is said that he delivered at Nashville, Tennessee, in the presence of General Jackson, who was a duelist, a discourse in which he stated that a sea captain who had become a preacher, was the means of converting the daughter of an infidel who became very angry, and determined to kill the preacher. For this purpose he concealed himself by a road on which the preacher was to pass; but Providence so directed that he did not go that way. The infidel then sent the preacher a challenge to fight a duel. This the preacher accepted, and hastened to the infidel's home, and found him in bed. Sir, said he to the sea-captain, on a certain day you lay concealed by the wayside to murder me. You knew that it was inconsistent with my calling to fight a duel. But I am determined to fight you immediately in this room and it is my right to choose the weapons of combat. The infidel was seized with consternation and trembling. The preacher drew out his Bible. This, said he, is the weapon with which I mean to fight you. "O," said Mr. Henderson, "Never was there a poor fellow so glad to see a Bible." The design of this narrative was to ridicule duel fighting. It is said that Jackson was so pleased with the boldness and faithfulness of the preacher that he gave him a fine suit of clothes.

The Horse Punished His Master.

A carrier named R——, at no time tender in his treatment to his four-footed servants, returned one night in a state of semi-intoxication from Mermant to Givors. The man's natural barbarity was at this time aggravated by the drink he had taken, and, being dissatisfied with the efforts of one of the horses—a poor hack which had almost served its time—he decided that the animal was no longer worth his feed, and resolved to put an end to it. For that purpose he tied the poor brute to a tree, and, taking a massive lever, used in moving goods, he struck the animal several violent blows on the head, until the unfortunate creature sank to the ground.

The master, thinking the animal was dead, left it on the spot, intending to remove the dead body next day.

The horse, however, recovered his senses a short time after, made his way home, and entered the yard at daybreak. Its arrival was welcomed by the neighing of its companions in the stable, which noise awakened the master, who was now furious at having failed in his cruel purpose. He tied up the animal afresh, and commenced again to shower blows on his head.

This act of brutality was committed in sight of two other horses in the stable; and at length, one of them, a young animal, became so frantic with rage, that it broke its halter, and, rushing on the man, seized him in its jaws, and, after shaking him violently, threw him down, and trampled on him with such fury, that, had not the man's cries brought some persons to his aid, the master would certainly have been killed.—French Paper.

Cable Telegraphy.

We can almost realize the dawn of the era of cheap telegraphing. It is announced that an English company intend to lay a new submarine cable between England and the United States and transmit dispatches at the rate of a shilling a word. The present tariff per word on messages over the cables of the Anglo-American company is $1.03 in gold. There are now fifteen submarine cable companies, and in these enterprises $100,000,000 are invested. Among the projected lines of cable for which companies are forming is one from Scilly, Eng., to St. John, N. F., 2,000 miles; one from Scilly to Halifax, N. S.; one from Scilly to Bermuda, thence direct to New York; and from Bermuda to St. Thomas, and thence to Para, South America; one from Valparaiso, Buenos Ayres, to Lima, Guayaquil, Bonaventura, and the Isthmus of Panama; one from San Diego, Cal., to Japan; one from Mexico to the Fiji Islands, New Caledonia, and Australia; one from Australia to New Zealand, for which the New Zealand Government has just granted a charter; one from Yokohama, Japan, to Shanghai; and one from Aden, on the Red Sea, to Mauritius, and thence to Cape Town, South Africa. Two of the projected Atlantic cables above referred to are those of the French Atlantic Company, capital, £900,000; and the Western Telegraph Company, capital, £1,350,000. These facts show the wonderful growth of a species of enterprise concerning which few people, comparatively, have any knowledge. The business of the Anglo-American Company's lines now amounts to over $12,000 a day. While between 50,000 and 60,000 miles of cable have been laid by foreign capital, not an investment of the kind has been made by the business men of the United States.—Boston Globe.

Bankrupt Law.

"Sambo, what your 'pinion ob de bankrupt law?"

"Tink um fus-rate, Pompey."

"I imply for the appellation myself. Just splain him's principles."

"Why, you see here, now, just len' me dat half dollar you got for white-washing."

Pompey hands him the money, and Sambo deliberately puts it into his pocket.

"Dere den, now, I owes de shoemaker three shilling, and you half a dollar, besides de grogshop bill. Now dis half dollar am all de property I got. I divides him accordin' to de debt."

"Sambo, I takes dat half dollar back." Sambo, with amazement, "You tink dis chile green? You gits yo' share wid de oder creditors."

Sambo was as honest as some others.

THE Indians in Canada, unlike their brethren in this country, are steadily increasing in numbers. According to the census of 1871, there were 13,035, showing an increase of 51 per cent. in the last ten years.

Newspapers Domestically Considered.

Too low an estimate is apt to be set on the domestic value of newspapers. After reading them, and putting ourselves, through their agency, in mental correspondence with the world, they are thrown aside and forgotten. But to suppose their usefulness bounded by their news columns and the waste-bag is a thriftless mistake.

In the first place, there are the household-recipes, to be found in stray corners, often excellent, and deserving a refuge on the fly-leaf of the family cook-book. Then come the pretty verses, the strange and droll stories, the brief biographies and reminiscences which, pasted in a scrap book, are a source of never-ending pleasure, not only to those who do not care for richer intellectual food, but to those who have only odd minutes for reading.

Notwithstanding the squibs jocular journalists have penned on the use of newspapers for bedclothing, we know from experience that these are not to be despised. They may not be as comfortable as your blankets, but certainly they keep out the cold. Two thicknesses of papers are better than a pair of blankets, and in the case of persons who dislike the weight of many bedclothes, they are invaluable. A spread made of a double layer of papers between a covering of calico or chintz, is desirable in every household. The papers should be tacked together with thread, and also basted to the covering to keep them from slipping. An objection has been made on account of the rustling, but if soft papers be chosen the noise will not be annoying, especially should the spread be laid between a blanket and the counterpane.

As a protection to plants against cold, both in and out of doors, nothing is better. If newspapers are pinned up over night at a window between pots and glass, the flowers will not only not be frozen, but will not even get chilled, as they are so liable to be at this season. In the same way, if taken to cover garden-beds, on the frosty nights of early autumn, they will allow the plants to remain safely out-doors some time later than if common.

One of the oddest services to put our journals to is the keeping of ice in summer. An ingenious housekeeper recently discovered that her daily lump of ice would last nearly twice as long when wrapped in newspapers, and placed in any kind of covered box, as when trusted solely to a refrigerator. This is very convenient, since it is possible to have the best and cheapest refrigerator constantly at hand.

To polish all kinds of glass after washing, except table glass, no cloth or flannel is half so good as a newspaper; and for a baker's dozen of other uses, quite foreign to its primal purpose, it is without a rival.—"Home and Society;" Scribner's for March.

A Murderer Hung by Women.

Trinidad, Col., Correspondence of the New York Sun.

About ten days ago, a woman by the name of Molly Howard came here from Los Animas, and took up her residence in a small hut within sight of our post-office. At the same time a man arrived who claimed to come from California. This man was an American. He was lame in one foot, having had his toes frozen, and was only able to wear a boot on one of his feet. He was of sandy complexion, medium height, heavy set, with a very bad face. He lived in a small hut with four or five Mexican men.

On Saturday morning last the town was thrown into a state of great excitement by the report that Molly Howard was found in her house murdered. On entering the house in which the crime was committed, a sickening sight was presented. The poor woman lay across her bed dead, with the left side of her head mashed to a jelly; on the forehead was a gash two inches in length, on her chin two ugly bruises, and on her throat the imprints of finger nails were visible.

The opinion was that the deed was done by Mexicans. The Coroner took charge of the body and impaneled a jury. The stranger referred to was arrested on suspicion, as well as a big Mexican named Pedro Lucero. This man Lucero is a desperate character. The Californian, Lucero, another Mexican, and a negro were all held to await the decision of the Coroner's jury.

The Coroner gave permission to bury the remains, and yesterday (Sunday) the late Molly Howard was taken to her last resting place.

About 9 o'clock Monday morning groups of men with revolvers gathered together. At about 11 the groups concentrated into one large crowd, and proceeded to the Coroner's office. Finding that the inquest was over they wended their way to the office of one of our Justices of the Peace. There they entered the building, and, seizing the American, they once more made their way down the street toward the river, followed by at least 150 persons of both sexes.

At the river side a large cottonwood tree was sought and found, a rope thrown over a projecting limb and fastened around the culprit's neck. He was then asked if he had anything to say, when he confessed to having killed Molly Howard because she owed him one dollar. He was then told he would be given ten minutes to make his peace with his Creator. He replied that he did not want to pray.

A woman by the name of Moline then fastened another knot on the rope around his neck, the word was given, and she, with three other disreputable women, and in the presence of at least 250 persons, Mexican and American, launched the murderer into eternity. He died in about fifteen minutes.

SURGICAL EXAMINATION.—At an examination of the College of Surgeons a candidate was asked by Abernethy: "What would you do if a man were blown up with powder?"

"Wait until he came down," he coolly replied.

"True," replied Abernethy." "And suppose I should kick you for such an impertinent reply, what muscles should I put in motion?"

"The flexors and extensors of my arm; for I should knock you down immediately."

The candidate received his diploma.

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING.

A lady lived in Dumbarton,
  Whose heart was full of kindness,
And when my tale is told, you'll see
  Her eyes were full of blindness.

Her servant came to her one morn,
  And asked to "have the day, marm,"
To visit to her home,
  Which was "five miles away, marm."

The lady took a moment's thought,
  Then cheerfully consented,
Because she always loved to have
  Her servant live contented.

And so the servant homeward went,
  The mistress to the kitchen,
And planned a little joke which she
  Thought "perfectly bewitchin'."

She bustled around with footsteps light
  To get her husband's dinner,
And never dreamed how soon [illegible]
  That husband was a sinner.

She heard his step upon the walk,
  And hid behind the table,
[illegible] silence she sprang upon her spouse
  As still as she was able.

She thought that he surprised would be
  To get such fond caresses
From one enrobed in apron strings
  And pastry-covered dresses.

Alas! imagine her dismay—
  Imagine her great distress—
To have him kiss her lips and ask—
  "Sweet Mary, where's your mistress?"

Tempers of the Siamese Twins.

Whether the same blood circulated through the veins of both or not, certain it is they were different in temperament and disposition. Eng was mild, amiable, gentle in his disposition and pleasing in his manners. Chang was the very reverse, having a very irritable disposition and violent temper, always ready to take offense, and quick to quarrel at the slightest umbrage. Eng will be recollected as the larger of the twins, Chang the smaller. Numerous instances are related (some of which are, of course, exaggerated) of the unhappy domestic consequences of Chang's violent temper. Sometimes at table during their meals he would fly into a passion, spring up, and, seizing the table cloth, would jerk all the plates, dishes and eatables off the table and scatter the fragments all over the room. A favorite way of displaying his temper was to drag a feather bed across the room and pile it on the floor. Repeatedly he fought desperately with Eng—a hand to hand combat, the latter always acting on the defensive. Once Chang succeeded in cutting him very severely in the face, it is said, with a knife, before he was disarmed. Eng being asked what was the matter with his wounded face replied, "it was done one day" all that could be got out of him in regard to the brotherly affray.

ABOUT thirty miles southeast of Dayton, Lyon county, Nevada, has been discovered a mountain which appears to be one mass of copper ore. The sides of the hill are covered with blocks of the ore, and veins seam it in all directions. Some of these veins are from three to five feet in width, and are a solid mass of ore, without any admixture of quartz or other rock.

AUBURN COURIER

THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1874.

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

ANOTHER scene in the contest for women's rights has just been enacted at Worcester, Mass., where the estates of the women who refused to pay taxes, because they were denied the vote, were put up for sale. But one of them was purchased, and that by a friend. Land taxed without representation is about as unsalable as tea was in the same State about 1775.... The Massachusetts Supreme Court has decided that women have an equal right with men to sit on school boards.... The Maine Senate has voted in favor of the abolition of the death penalty.

A FRIGHTFUL accident occurred the other day at Union Dale, Pa. A locomotive leaped the track, going over an embankment seventy-five feet, killing instantly the engineer, the conductor, the fireman, and the brakeman.

A SHOCKING tragedy was recently enacted in New York city. A party of drunken detectives, in pursuit of a man for whom they had a warrant, broke into the house of a reputable citizen named McNamara, who, resisting the outrageous intrusion, was shot down by the intoxicated officers.... The perpetrator of the New York Stock Exchange hoax has been arrested and held to bail. He is a young man by the name of McCoy.

A NEW YORK police spy reports that there are 300 Communists in that city, and that the German and Irish organizations are organizing with the Frenchmen.... The medical commission which conducted the autopsy upon the Siamese Twins, at Philadelphia, report the following as the most important of their discoveries: They found that the two livers, which were supposed to be joined only by blood-vessels, were really one body, the parenchymatous tissue being continuous between them, so that when they were removed from the bodies and placed on the table they formed one mass. The so-called tract of portal continuity is therefore liver tissue. It will be remembered that Chang was said to be possessed of one more pouch than Eng. When the liver was removed, however, an upper hepatic pouch was found, also, proceeding from Eng, so that the band contained four pouches of peritoneum, besides liver tissue. These disclosures show that any attempt during life to separate the twins would, in all probability, have proved fatal.

The West.

Two rabid dogs made a terrible raid through the streets of Chicago, a few days ago creating the wildest consternation. Seventeen persons and sixty canines were bitten before the brutes were dispatched.

THERE has been serious rioting in St. Clair county, Ill., between the striking coal-miners and the negroes who had taken their places in the mines. Gov. Beveridge, at the call of the Sheriff of the county, has sent arms and ammunition to be used in suppressing the rioting.... Hostile Indians recently appeared at Julesburg and Chappell stations, on the Union Pacific railroad, stole several head of horses, and fired into the station-houses.... The National Crop Reporter publishes estimates in relation to the percentage of the hay and potato crops of 1873, in producers' hands Feb. 1, in the States of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Ohio, and Wisconsin.... These States produced last year over 9,000,000 tons of hay, of which there was on hand Feb. 1 a little over 48 per cent., or about 4,500,000 tons. Illinois retains the lightest percentage, a trifle less than 45, and Wisconsin the heaviest, nearly 52. The States named produced last year about 20,000,000 bushels of Irish potatoes. Amount now on hand 10,000,000 bushels.... The prospects for fruit in Southern Illinois and Southwest Missouri are flattering.... The freight war which has for some time been going on between the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads has gradually spread, and fierce battles are now fighting between these two corporations in nearly every city of the Union. The result is a general reduction of rates and a universal rejoicing among the traveling and shipping public. This battle, which has now lasted for several months in the East, has moved westward, until nearly every Western road is on the war-path.

GENERAL SHERMAN is now at Fort Laramie, Wyoming Territory, where he and General Ord are organizing an army to operate against the murderous Sioux. General John E. Smith will be in command of the troops in the field.... Three hundred men went adrift in East Saginaw Bay, Mich., on the morning of Feb. 23, on a cake of ice upon which they had built a fishing village, and which was driven away from the shore by a strong southwest wind. The cheerless craft bore them out into the lake till a change of the wind to the west brought them up to the eastern shore of the bay, where 200 of them managed to escape at different points. About 100 were still on the ice at last account, and their escape from the perils of the breaking ice and the freezing weather can hardly be hoped for.... A call has been issued a for convention of delegates from the Northwestern States to be held at Rock Island, Ill., on March 24, on the subject of cheap transportation.

A DISPATCH from Saginaw Bay of Feb. 24 states that 75 or 100 men were still on the ice-floes, about ten miles from shore. Little apprehension was felt for their safety, as small parties were constantly making their way to shore, although the passage was very perilous, having to be made over broken cakes of ice.

THIRTY-SIX valuable circus horses and other property of Montgomery Queen's circus were consumed by fire at Morris, Ill., last week.... The Government has recovered judgments against the whole batch of Pekin, (Ill.) distillers, the total amount being $315,000.... The Vogel Excise law, which repeals the Graham Liquor law, together with all restrictions upon the sale of liquor on Sundays or election-days, has been passed by the Wisconsin Assembly.... L. M. Haverstick, editor of the Rock Island (Ill.) Union, was recently cowhided by J. P. Cropper for an alleged insult to Mrs. J. P. C.... Some excitement is caused in San Francisco by serious charges against the Mayor and City Treasurer touching their management of the city's financial affairs, and broad hints are thrown out that a big steal has been going on. The Grand Jury will ventilate the matter.

A DETROIT dispatch of Feb. 25 says: "No definite information has been received in regard to the ice-floe at Bay City, but the general opinion is that all have escaped. If any remain, the north wind, which has prevailed to-day, has probably driven them to their former position, thus enabling them to land. There can, therefore, be no doubt of the safety of the men who have not escaped to the west shore." .... Dispatches from Cheyenne report that the military preparations continue. Gen. Sheridan has returned to Chicago, but Gen. Forsyth will remain and accompany the expedition against the Indians.

A LARGE amount of money and bonds, believed to be the treasure stolen from the First National Bank of Quincy, has been unearthed at Nauvoo, Ill.... A fire destroying property to the amount of $45,000 occurred in South Bend, Ind., on the 26th ult. The Singer Sewing Machine Company is the principal loser.... A dispatch from Saginaw Bay announces the glad tidings that all the fishermen adrift on the ice have safely reached the shore.... Cincinnati is enjoying a little Tammany sensation of its own. It has been discovered that Hon. William S. Groesbeck and Mr. Burnett gave each $12,500 to an Alderman to influence the passage of the bill through the Council authorizing the purchase by the city of Burnett Woods Park, owned jointly by the two gentlemen named. The evidence was too palpable to admit of denial, and Groesbeck and Burnett both plead guilty, but hold that they gave the money with the understanding that it was not to be used in an "improper manner." Too thin.

The South.

COL. WYATT C. THOMAS, an old and prominent Arkansas journalist, is dead.

THE temperance crusade has extended to Mississippi, Tennessee, and other parts of the South.... Steve Lowery, the last survivor of the notorious Robinson county (N. C.) band of outlaws, was recently killed by three farmers near Lumberton. The entire community turned out to view the body of the dead bandit, and expressed the wildest joy at such a deliverance. Thus ends the history of the worst, most cruel and bloodthirsty gang that ever infested any country. A reward of $6,200 will be paid the parties concerned.

DAMAGING freshets are reported in various parts of the South. The running of railway trains has been seriously interrupted by the destruction of bridges and culverts.... There is great rejoicing in Robeson and adjacent counties in North Carolina at the death of Steve Lowery, the last of the Scuffletown outlaws, and large numbers of people flocked to Lumberton to view the dead body of the terrible bandit. When shot he carried a rifle, three pistols and a knife.

Washington.

A STRONG movement is being made for the abolition of the tax on leaf tobacco.... The House Committee on Appropriations have reduced the amount of the Indian appropriation bill to about five millions of dollars. The estimates were for about seven millions.

A WASHINGTON correspondent states that the Senate Appropriation Committee will propose the abolition of the postal-car system on railroads, and the repeal of the clause providing for the free delivery of letters—the latter, on the ground that large sums are thus spent for the benefit of residents in a few cities, which the people at large are taxed to pay for.

THE House Commerce Committee have prepared a bill to compel the Chicago and Northwestern railroad to allow the use of the bridge across the Mississippi River at Clinton, Ia., to the Chicago and Dubuque Railroad Company. It will undoubtedly pass.

WE give below an analysis of the vote of Western Congressmen on the proposition to revive the franking privilege: Illinois—Barriere, Clements, Farwell, Fort, Hawley, McNulta, Morrison, Robinson, and Ward voted no. Burchard, Cannon, Corwin, Hurlbut, Knapp, Marshall, Martin, Ray and Rice voted aye. Eden absent and not voting. Wisconsin—Barber, Eldredge, Hazleton, McDill, Rusk, Sawyer, and Williams, of Wisconsin, voted aye, Mitchell voting no. Minnesota—Averill and Dunnell, voted aye. Michigan—Begole, Conger, and Field voted aye, the rest of the delegation voting no. Iowa—Donnan and Orr, voted aye, while Cotton, Kasson, McCrary, McDill, and Pratt, voted no. Loughridge absent. Ohio—Danford, Gunckel, Neal, Robinson, Southard, and Woodworth, voted aye. Parsons, absent. The rest in the negative. Of the Indiana delegation, Coburn, Niblack, and Hunter voted aye, the rest of the delegation voting no. In the Missouri delegation, those voting aye were Buckner, Clark, Glover, Hatcher, Havens, and Parker. The rest in the negative. The entire Kansas delegation voted aye.

LEADING members express the opinion that Congress will not adjourn before July.

Political.

THE Iowa Anti-Monopolists held a State Convention at Des Moines on the 25th of February. Sixty-two counties were represented. Resolutions were adopted favoring a "faithful administration of the laws;" of "political reform;" repudiating the doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils," and instead thereof a "true system of civil service reform;" denouncing a protective tariff as a monopoly, and demanding free iron, steel, salt and lumber; that all corporations are subject to legislative control; favoring a modification of the banking system; opposing all grants of lands to railroads and other corporations; condemning the pretended repeal of the salary-grab as a fraud when not applied to the President as well as to all others concerned; denying the alleged necessity of a State Printer and Binder as "a party organ, supported by public patronage;" denouncing the Credit Mobilier and other National Treasury steals.

THE nomination of Simmons, to be Collector of Boston, has been rejected by the United States Senate.

The Grange.

A DELEGATE convention of the State Grange of Illinois is to be held at Bloomington on the 14th of April.

THE so-called Boston Grange, which was excommunicated by the National Grange, refuses to disband, and has set up an organization of its own.

Foreign.

THE new British Ministry is composed as follows: First Lord of the Treasury, Disraeli; Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Northcote; First Lord of Admiralty, George Ward Hunt; Secretary of State for the Home Department, Richard Assheton Cross; Secretary of State for the Foreign Department, Earl Derby; Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, Earl Carnarvon; Secretary of State for War, Gathorne Hardy; Secretary of State for India, Marquis of Salisbury; Lord High Chancellor, Lord Cairns; Lord of the Privy Seal, Earl Malmesbury; Lord President of the Council, the Duke of Richmond; Lord John Manners is appointed Postmaster-General.... Political disturbances are threatened in Japan.... The French Bonapartists are to be spotted. Duke de Broglie has given orders to Prefects of departments to keep watch of the parties who leave for Chiselhurst on the occasion of the Prince Imperial becoming of age.

THE King of Ashantee is a prisoner in the hands of the British troops.... London papers announce that Gladstone has determined to no longer take an active part in Parliamentary proceedings.... The Pope has caused an urgent request to be sent to all the Bishops to visit Rome, as he desires to see them before he dies.... The insurrection in Japan is becoming formidable.... A Madrid dispatch announces heavy fighting in Biscay, with severe loss on both sides. The Carlists have evacuated Portugalite.... A Havana letter gives details of the recent disturbances in that city, inklings of which have reached us by telegraph. The rioters assembled in large numbers in front of the Captain-General's palace, and demanded, with loud cries, a change of the decrees regarding the draft. The civil guards fired on the mob, killing five and wounding a large number. Volunteers were then stationed at different points in the city, to prevent further disorders, which fact doubtless led to the absurd rumor, which came via Key West, that the city had been taken possession of by rebellious volunteers and Jovellar expelled.

THE latest reports from the famine in India state that 280,000 people are now suffering from want of food, and that, but for the aid of the British authorities, 500,000 would starve to death.... A treaty of peace has been signed by Sir Garnet Wolseley and the King of Ashantee. A London dispatch states that Sir Michael Hicks Beach has been appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland; Sir Henry Selwin Ibbetson Under-Secretary for the Home Department, and Sir Charles Adderly President of the Board of Trade. Sir John Pakington has been elevated to the Peerage, under the title of Baron Hamilton.... The Queen, at the recommendation of Gladstone, has granted a pension of $1,000 per annum to the children of Dr. Livingstone. Sir Bartle Frere is convinced of the truth of the reported death of the great traveler. The Cameron Expedition will proceed to Ujiji, to obtain the documents and property left by the Doctor.

A TERRIBLE affair is reported from the State of Vera Cruz, Mexico. A quarrel between the townsmen of Quimixtlan and Huascaleca resulted in a fight in which seventeen persons were killed. It is reported that the infuriated Huascalecans afterward went to Quimixtlan and began an indiscriminate massacre, killing children and cutting off the breasts of women.

IT would appear that the reports recently telegraphed across the Atlantic to the effect that the Ashantee war was over, and that the British troops were on the homeward march, were somewhat premature. A London dispatch announces that a great battle has been fought at Accroombs, between the Ashantees and the force under Gen. Sir Garnet Wolseley. The engagement is said to have lasted a whole day, and to have closed with no decided result. The loss of the British troops is given as nearly 300, including many officers. The natives at one time entirely surrounded the British army, but were eventually driven off after desperate fighting. The utmost anxiety is felt in London for the safety of the army.... The German exploring expedition in the Lybian Desert, under Gerhard Rohlfs, the well-known traveler, has reached the famous oasis of Dachel, containing 17,000 inhabitants. Valuable geographical discoveries have been made, and six maps of the country have been taken.

A DISPATCH has been received at the London War Office from Sir Garnet Wolseley, commanding the British forces in Ashantee, dated Coomassie, Feb. 26, in which he states that he had reached that city the day before, after five days' hard fighting, attended with severe loss.

THE TEMPERANCE CRUSADE.

Progress of the Good Work—The Contagion Spreading All Over the Country—The Large Cities Becoming Infected.

The women's crusade against the dramshops is spreading in all directions. The assaulting party is firing regular broadsides of prayer into the saloons, following them up with a raking fire of psalms, sung in long, short and common meter, to suit the occasion, with a few scattering shots in the way of exhortations to the wicked gin-slingers to flee from the wrath to come. The telegraphic dispatches and mail correspondence of the daily papers give reports of the surprising manner in which this singular warfare is extending. It has assumed proportions so formidable that it is no longer a sensation, and must now be discussed, if not as a revolution, at least as a terribly earnest and an apparently effective crusade.

Dr. Dio Lewis has abandoned the field in Ohio and gone to New England to inaugurate the great work in Worcester, Springfield and Boston, but will return about the middle of March to prosecute the war again in the West.

The prohibitionists in New York and Philadelphia are planning a campaign, and in St. Louis and other large cities active preparations are going on for a temperance revival.

The crusade is being vigorously prosecuted in the towns of Ohio with the greatest success. In Xenia a number of saloons have been closed, and all others are expected to capitulate before many days. A saloon-keeper in that town, who had closed his doors against the women and taken refuge in the cellar, emerged from his subterranean retreat the other day, bearing in his hand a white bag in token of surrender. Each victory is made the occasion of a grand jubilee.

At Hillsboro, Ohio, Judge Steele has dissolved the injunction against the praying ladies.

G. W. Miller, proprietor of a saloon at Salem, Ohio, has closed up his doors and emptied all his liquors in the street.

In Dayton, preparations for an active war on the rum-sellers are going forward.

At Terre Haute, Richmond, and other large towns in Indiana, the temperance advocates are marshalling their forces for a vigorous campaign.

An attempt to open the movement in Oshkosh, Wis., has met with poor success.

The war has invaded Omaha, Neb., and prayer-meetings are being held in the saloons of that city.

The contagion has even developed itself as far west as Colorado, and singing and praying bands are at work in Denver, Golden City, and other towns.

In Indianapolis the women are organizing for the good work.

It is reported from Cleveland, Ohio, that 1,500 women of that city are banded together, and will begin a concerted praying raid on the cohorts of King Alcohol in a few days. Three thousand ladies in New York are said to be banded together for a similar purpose.

The Centennial—Message of the President.

The President has sent the following message to Congress in regard to the Centennial Exhibition:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have the honor herewith to submit the report of the Centennial Commissioners, and to add a word in way of recommendation. There have now been international expositions held by three of the great powers of Europe. It seems fitting that the one hundredth anniversary of our Independence should be marked by an event that will display to the world the growth and progress of a nation devoted to freedom and to the pursuit of fame, fortune, and honor by the lowest citizen as well as the highest. A failure in this enterprise would be deplorable. Success can be assured by arousing public opinion to the importance of the occasion. To secure this end, in my judgment, Congressional legislation is necessary to make the exposition both national and international. The benefits to be derived from a successful international exposition are manifold. It will necessarily be accompanied by expenses beyond the receipts from the exposition itself, but they will be compensated for many fold by the commingling of the people from all sections of our own country, by bringing together the people of different nationalities, by bringing into juxtaposition for ready examination our own and foreign skill and progress in manufactures, agriculture, art, science, and civilization. The selection of the site for the Exposition seems to me appropriate from the fact that 100 years before the day fixed for the Exposition the Declaration of Independence, which launched us into the galaxy of nations as an independent people, emanated from the same spot. We have much in our varied climate, soil, mineral products, and skill, of which advantage can be taken by other nationalities to their profit. In return, they will bring to our shores works of their skill, and familiarize our people with them to the mutual advantage of all parties. Let us have a complete success of our Centennial Exposition, or suppress it in its infancy, acknowledging our inability to give it the international character to which our self-esteem aspires.

(Signed) U. S. GRANT.

CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Feb. 20.—Senate.—The bill for the equalization of the currency was again before the Senate, on a motion to reconsider the vote of Thursday, by which the substitute of Cooper was adopted. The motion was carried, and the substitute rejected. The question then recurring on Merrimon's resolution to instruct the Finance Committee to report a bill providing for an expansion of the National Bank circulation to $400,000,000, it was adopted by a vote of 28 to 25.... No other business of importance was transacted.

House.—The day was devoted principally to the consideration of private bills.... The calling up of a bill authorizing the Washington and Point Lookout railroad to extend its line through Washington city produced a good deal of agitation and excitement among members, the Pennsylvania members opposing it bitterly. The discussion was carried on amid great noise and confusion. The House adjourned pending a motion to table the bill.

SATURDAY, Feb. 21.—Senate.—Not in session.

House.—Most of the day was devoted to the consideration of private bills, a number of which were disposed of.... Banning presented a petition to have the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday declared a public holiday.... The bill authorizing the Point Lookout railway to extend its line through Washington was discussed at length, and finally referred to the Committee of the Whole.... Adjourned to Tuesday, 24th.

MONDAY, Feb. 23.—Senate.—The Senate met, and after prayer by the Chaplain, Anthony rose and said that the country was to-day celebrating the birthday of Washington, and it was not customary for the Senate to sit on such a day, unless there was an extraordinary pressure of business. He, therefore, moved that the Senate adjourn. The motion was unanimously carried, and the Senate adjourned.

House.—Not in session.

TUESDAY, Feb. 24.—Senate.—Petitions were presented from citizens of Chicago for and against an expansion of the currency.... The bill to equalize the currency was again before the Senate, and Schurz delivered an elaborate speech against further expansion. He was answered by Morton on behalf of the inflationists.

House.—Bills introduced: by Woodman, to regulate the service of the collection of customs, also to regulate duties on imported wines; by Smith (Pa.), to enable the Mennonites of Russia to effect a settlement on public land; by Smith (Va.), to abolish the offices of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the Commissioner of Customs, etc.; by Packard, yielding to the State of Indiana lands covered by Wolf Lake and Lake George; by Field, to increase the currency and to provide for its inter-conversion with Government bonds, and to abolish the sinking fund; by Barker, to abolish capital punishment; by Burchard, to facilitate the exportation of distilled spirits (passed).... The larger portion of the day was devoted to the consideration of the bill looking to a partial revival of the franking privilege, which went over without action.... Shanks offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Indian Affairs to investigate the status of the Indians in the United States and Territories as to their citizenship under the Constitution. Adopted.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 25.—Senate.—The bill creating a commission to investigate the alcohol and liquor traffic was discussed. Mr. Schurz opposed it, claiming that the Government had an equal right to appoint a commission to consider extravagance in dress or indigestion. Howe and Buckingham spoke in favor of the bill.... Ferry presented a petition from the workingmen of Michigan, asking for the substitution of national bank currency for legal-tenders, and that such currency be made legal-tenders for all debts, public and private.... Wright introduced a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain and certify as to the quantity of land located under military warrants in certain States.... The Senate consumed another day in discussing the currency, the debate being participated in principally by Sherman, Schurz and Morton.... A message from the President in regard to the Centennial Exhibition was read and ordered printed.

House.—Bradley (Mich.), from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill to amend the act of June 10, 1872, for the restoration to market of certain lands in Michigan.... Orth's bill for the issuing and recording of commissions to Postmasters appointed by the President was passed. The object of the bill is to transfer that duty from the State Department to the Patent Office.... The bill to amend the Steamship Passenger act in regard to the publication of lists of immigrants was passed.... Small presented resolutions of the New Hampshire Press Association for the restoration of the law allowing weekly newspapers free transmission through the mails in the county of their publication.... The bill to restore the franking privilege was again up in the House, and furnished the occasion for a sharp discussion, in the course of which the irrepressible Ben Butler availed himself of the opportunity to vent his spleen against the villainous press. He fairly eclipsed all his former efforts in this line.

THURSDAY, Feb. 26.—Senate.—The bill prescribing the form of oath to be taken by Post-office officials was passed.... Schurz presented a petition from Missouri tobacco manufacturers asking for the removal of the duty on stick licorice.... The Senate refused, by a vote of 26 to 29, to take up the Centennial bill.... The Naval Appropriation bill was passed, as amended by the Committee.... The Army Appropriation bill was reported from the Committee, and ordered printed.

House.—The entire day was consumed in considering the bill reviving the franking privilege. The amendment authorizing the Postmaster-General to delay the transmission of documents whenever the welfare of the service shall so require, and it was rejected by an overwhelming majority. Hale's substitute to repeal the law which abolished the franking privilege was rejected—yeas, 50; nays, 180. The vote was then taken on the passage of the original bill, and it was rejected by the close vote of 129 to 131.

Chang and Eng—Singular but Solemn Compact.

Up to the year 1857, the twins lived together quite harmoniously, it is said, when, owing to domestic quarrels, the true cause of which never has transpired, a dissolution of the firm of E. & C. Bunker was agreed upon. Some say it was fighting among the children, others that it was jealousy of the wives about the number of children they had that caused the separation; but be that as it may, Eng purchased an adjoining plantation, upon which he built a house, just one mile distant from the old home, which now became the exclusive property of Chang. In the division of the property the whole of the original plantation fell to Chang, while a large majority of the slaves, being movable property, became Eng's. Hence it was that, when the result of the war brought about the emancipation of the slaves, Eng found himself a much poorer man than his brother, though both of them were then very well off.

Immediately upon the separation the brothers made an agreement, which, like the laws of the Medes and Persians, was unalterable, and which to their very deaths was rigidly observed. This was that every alternate three days were reserved exclusively to each of the brothers to do as he pleased. For instance, the three days that belonged to Eng were spent at his house or anywhere else that Eng might choose to go. During that time Chang was merely an appendage of Eng, having neither the right to go anywhere that Eng did not choose to go, nor the power to attend to any business whatever of a private nature of his own. In the same way, when Chang's three days came, and they were punctual to a moment, they departed at once for his home, where he assumed supreme control of the actions and movements of both, and Eng became the nonentity. So exact were they with this rule that no event, however great in importance, and no stress of weather, no matter how severe, could prevent them starting from the house of one to the house of the other, when the three days of either had expired. It is related of them that this rule caused one to leave his home just as the marriage of his daughter was about to take place, and the other was prevented from attending the funeral of a son by the stringency of this singular compact. They carried it out to the last, for Chang's final three days had expired on the Thursday evening prior to their deaths, and though it was very cold, misty and severe weather, to Eng's house he would go, in accordance with the irrepealable law.

SAD CASE OF MATRIMONIAL INFELICITY.—A young married man living near Columbus, Wis., returned home a few nights ago unexpectedly, and found another young man sharing his wife's bed. He returned the next morning and took away his three-year-old boy, leaving the miserable woman to the fate into which she had fallen. A day or two afterward the mother was discovered in an insane condition about one of the outbuildings of a neighbor, with the shoes of her child in her hand, searching for him under the frantic delusion that he was buried somewhere in the snow. She is still a lunatic.—Exchange.

STARTLING FIGURES.

The Liquor Business of the United States—Enormous Extent of the Trade—The Money Invested and Men Engaged in It—A Powerful Temperance Sermon.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post furnishes that journal a detailed statement of the amount of intoxicating liquors used in the United States. The exhibit is certainly a most startling one, few people having any adequate conception of the enormous extent of the business. He says that he has obtained the figures from official documents, and that he has presented them in the following compact form, so that even the casual reader may see how large, both absolutely and relatively, the traffic in intoxicating liquors is in the United States:

Statistics showing the amount of money spent in the United States for intoxicating liquors during the year 1870, as taken from official records:

Imported and domestic distilled spirituous liquors	$1,344,000,000

Total	$1,483,491,865

Add to this, $90,000,000, the cost of litigations, crimes, prisons, etc., caused in part by intemperance, and we have for a single year the enormous sum of $1,573,491,865.

The cost of flour and meal was	$530,000,000
The cost of cotton goods	115,000,000
The cost of boots and shoes	90,000,000
The cost of clothing	70,000,000
The cost of woolen goods	60,000,000
The cost of newspapers and job printing	40,000,000
Total	$905,000,000

There were 140,000 licensed liquor saloons in the United States, each having (estimated) 40 daily customers, making 5,600,000 drinkers, who, it is estimated, spent their money during the year in the following proportions:

Drinkers.	Spent each.	Amount.
100,000	$1,000	$100,000,000
100,000	900	90,000,000
100,000	800	80,000,000
100,000	700	70,000,000
100,000	600	60,000,000
100,000	500	50,000,000
1,000,000	400	400,000,000
1,000,000	300	300,000,000
1,000,000	200	200,000,000
1,000,000	150	150,000,000
1,000,000	75	75,000,000
5,600,000		$1,575,000,000

The quantity of distilled, fermented and brewed liquors drank was sufficient to fill a canal 4 feet deep, 14 feet wide, and 80 miles long; and if all the drinkers could be placed in procession, five abreast, they would make an army 130 miles long, and if those killed by the intemperate use of spirituous liquors were there also, we should see a suicide at every five miles, and 550 funerals per day; and if all the places where intoxicating liquors are sold were placed in rows, in direct line, they would make a street 100 miles long.

There were 400,000 more persons engaged in the liquor business in the United States than in preaching the gospel and school-teaching; and from the effects of intoxicating drinks, 100,000 are annually sent to prisons, 150,000 to drunkards' graves, and 200,000 children are reduced to want. The total number of persons engaged in the business is 560,000, of which 56,663 are employed in making and selling annually 5,685,633 barrels of beer.

It is estimated that the clergy of the United States costs annually $12,000,000; the lawyers, criminals, prisons, etc., $90,000,000; and intoxicating liquors, as before said, $1,474,000,000.

The State of Pennsylvania spent during the year 1870, for liquors of all kinds, $152,663,495; and for schools and teaching, $5,863,729. She had engaged in the liquor business, 78,800 persons, 16,870 school-teachers, and 24,000 criminals—four-fifths of whom were made so by strong drink.

The city of Philadelphia had 4,160 drinking places, and spent for intoxicating drinks $30,000,000 in one year. Chicago had 2,300 liquor saloons, and spent for intoxicating liquors $14,000,000. Newark had 864 drinking saloons, and spent for strong drinks $4,500,000.

The city of New York had 7,000 licensed drinking saloons, which, if placed in rows in direct lines, would make a street like Broadway thirteen miles long. She spent for intoxicating liquors $60,000,000 during the year 1870, and there were employed in the business 35,000 persons. There were 65,000 arrests for intoxication and disorderly conduct, and 80,000 persons were in institutions under care of the Commissioners of Public Charity.

Borax for Colds.

A writer in the Medical Report cites a number of cases in which borax has proved a most effective remedy in certain forms of colds. He states that in sudden hoarseness or loss of voice in public speakers or singers, from colds, relief for an hour or so, as by magic, may be often obtained by slowly dissolving, and partially swallowing, a lump of borax the size of a garden pea, or about three or four grains, held in the mouth for ten minutes before speaking or singing. This produces a profuse secretion of saliva, or "watering" of the mouth and throat—probably restoring the voice or tone to the dried vocal cords, just as "wetting" brings back the missing notes to a flute, when it is too dry.

Death of a Famous Detective.

Eli Devoe, who died recently at Monmouth, N. J., was one of the best known of New York detectives. At the commencement of the rebellion he entered the service of the Government. When Lincoln started to Washington before his first inauguration, Devoe and Tom Lampson were sent to Baltimore to investigate the rumor that the President would be assassinated in that city. The work was difficult and dangerous, and had to be prosecuted with the utmost secrecy. They managed to mix with the active secessionists, and finally joined a secret society whose intent was to kill Lincoln under the cover of a concerted mob. It had been arranged that the President should be escorted through the streets, and the murder was to have been done while a number of the society attacked and disordered the procession. Devoe and Lampson got the details of the plot as members of the society, and it was upon their information that the expedient of hurrying Lincoln through on another train was adopted. When the plot had failed the society looked about for traitors in their midst, and they soon learned that Devoe and Lampson were not residents of Baltimore. This was enough to arouse their suspicions, and the detectives found it necessary to quit so suddenly that their baggage was left behind. They went to Washington, and were followed by a gang of Baltimore roughs, who infested their hotel, and probably intended vengeance of some kind. But here again detective work thwarted any plan that may have been concerted. Another detective, who had gone to Washington as one of the Baltimore gang, found a chance to put Devoe and Lampson on their guard.

Devoe remained in Government employ during the war, at times acting as a spy within the rebel lines, and upon the assassination of Lincoln was one of the many detectives who were put at work to hunt out those concerned in the plot. He arrested Mrs. Surratt, and while at her house detected Paine in the guise of a laborer. The arrest of Paine brought him a large reward.

Two Men Lost Their Lives Through Fear.

It is well-known now that small-pox existed for some weeks in a store on Center street, and committed great ravages in the family circle of the storekeeper. Among the customers who dealt at his store were two men, one a well-to-do storekeeper at Auburn, and the other from Cressona. One day the Auburn man came to this store, bought a stock of goods, and in going out noticed that the doors and windows were closed. He asked the reason of this funeral appearance of things. "Why," said some one, "don't you know that they have small-pox there?" At this intelligence the heart of the Auburn man sank within him, he was at once seized with pains, went home and died of small-pox in three days. The fate of the Cressona man was almost exactly similar. He entered the same store, was informed of the existence of small-pox there, was dreadfully frightened, and went home to die of small-pox.—Pottsville (Pa.) Journal.

CHICAGO manufactories employ over 100,000 men, having an invested capital of $52,000,000, and turn out annually $125,000,000 worth of products.

THE GRANGERS.

What They are Doing—Items from Various Points—Spirit of the Press.

The farmers are rapidly learning their numerical strength. Their great order of the Patrons of Husbandy now boasts a membership of 780,000. Most of these are voters, and for intelligence and energy are vastly superior to any other tillers of the soil to be found in the world.—Inter-Ocean.

Representatives of the Grangers of Des Moines and Lee counties, Iowa, and Hancock county, Ill., met at Fort Madison, Iowa, recently to discuss the propriety of establishing a grain and implement agency at that point. A proposition was made favoring annexation to the Keokuk agency, which was referred to a committee to report at a future meeting.

The following resolutions have been adopted by Penn Grange 353, of Guthrie county, Iowa:

Whereas, Certain of the so-called Chicago rings have boasted that they could blow up certain granges by a few gifts or half-price sales, and thereby turn them away from those who have stood firm thus far through the fight; therefore, be it

Resolved, by this grange, That we will buy none of their implements of the so-called rings or their agents. Further, that we will not buy any of their half-price, neither use any of their free-gift implements.

Vermont seems to take kindly to the Grangers. There are now 63 divisions of Patrons of Husbandry in the State, six in Orleans county, ten in Franklin, one in Essex, one in Grand Isle, six in Lamoille, twelve in Caledonia, four in Chittenden, ten in Washington, four in Orange, one in Windsor, five in Rutland, one in Bennington, and two in Windham. The grange at St. Johnsbury Centre disbanded recently, to get rid of the non-agricultural members, and another was organized composed entirely of farmers.

"The grange is not political," but Grangers have votes, and in Illinois the Farmers' Movement is an organized voting force. In the Sixteenth District a day has already been named (Aug. 27) for a "Farmers' Congressional Nominating Convention" at Vandalia. M. M. Hooton, one of the most active organizers in that district, says:

"We seek reforms that can only be effected by the ballot, and it is nonsense to try to keep intelligent men from discussing these questions in an organization created for the special purpose of reforming these political abuses."

They (the Grangers) are compelled to enter the struggle by the constant call of the tax-gatherer. A voice cries out to them from the fumes of every cup of tea or coffee. It sounds in the very squeak of their boots, and groans along the face of the plowshare. The glib click of the reaper and mower has the ring of taxes and tariffs, and comes back in a wail with returns from the sale of the farmers' crops.—Speech of Judge Randall at Morris, Ill.

A large farmers' meeting was held at Earville, Ill., recently, at which speeches were made by Prof. Taylor, of Chicago, and others favorable to the grange cause. Much enthusiasm prevailed. Resolutions were passed in favor of a greenback currency; the abolition of the national banking system; that the Executive shall enforce the laws against railrords refusing to obey, as he would against rioters and other unlawful combinations who violate the law; denouncing the LaSalle County Agricultural Association, and demanding of it the return of $3,000 misappropriated in connection with certain fair ground transaction. The meeting was a success in numbers and in all respects.

In DeKalb, Ill., a special meeting of the DeKalb County Grange was held recently to consider the subject and take action as to the forming of a stock association at Lyndon, Ill., for the manufacture of agricultural implements. A statement was made that $100,000 would be required to commence operations, and that $10,000 per grange was necessary, and claiming that 50 per cent. can be saved on the manufacture of plows, and $400 on threshing machines. The combination among sewing machine manufacturers and implement makers was denounced, and a spirit of enterprise was manifested. The granges throughout that section are in a healthy condition.

Now we don't want to make the kid-glovers too sick at once, but we cannot refrain from saying, in this appropriate place, that Wisconsin elected last fall, and has just now inaugurated, a farmer for Governor of the Badger State. So, then, the producing class is coming to the front, at the East and the West, and the lawyers and the politicians are quietly asked to take back seats. Back seats, gentlemen, if you please. Take your beringged fingers and bestudded linen up into the gallery, and let the honest, horny-handed sons of toil govern awhile. It hurts, we know, gentlemen, and we are extremely sorry that your occupation is gone. What would you say if the next Governor of Indiana should be a genuine farmer?—Indiana Granger.

The editor of the Nation, whose Western travels have never extended further West than Cincinnati, and whose experience in Western political movements is confined to the part he took in trying to engineer the Greeley and Brown convention in Cincinnati, has expressed the opinion that the farmers' movement has completely failed. And the same week the Nation expressed this opinion the New York Post warned the politicians that the movement was rapidly gaining strength and momentum, and that in time it would sweep away all opposition. There is a great deal more in the farmers' movement than is dreamt of in the philosophy of our Eastern editorial brethren.—St. Louis Democrat.

At a recent large and enthusiastic meeting of the Patrons of Husbandry, in Menard county, Ill., the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The monopoly manufacturing establishments or this State have refused to sell to the Grangers and farmers' clubs of the State their plows, machinery, etc., except through agents appointed by said manufacturers; and,

Whereas, We believe the greatest good to the greatest number is correct in principle; be it therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we favor home industry and our own mechanics by making purchases of them, provided their work shall be as good and as cheap as can be procured elsewhere.

2. That as Patrons we are opposed to the credit system, and as far as possible urge the necessity of accompanying all purchase with the money.

3. That we exercise great caution in purchasing anything of the middlemen and agents in the country, who are making a living, not by hard work, but by too often deceiving the honest purchasers, and that we recommend that the individual members of the order in the country give them the go-by on all occasions.

Class Legislation.

[Extract from the Speech of Judge Randall, at Morris, Ill.

Class legislation is among the crying evils of the times. It is well named as the starting point of grievances in the Decoatur Convention. By it capital has been very rapidly and very insidiously stealing from the hands of the many to the few. It has reached far beyond the halls of legislation, and become the corrupter of courts, and filled political parties with debaucheries. It has listened to the grasping intriguer, and has persistently overlooked the cries of the industrious millions for relief. It has opened the avenues through which the scheming and dishonest plunderers can filch from the farmers his crops, and from the laborer his honest earnings. It has kept the farmer and laborer poor, while it has built up the financial, the mercantile, the manufacturing and the transporting interests, until they have been enabled to monopolize the wealth of the country—to make money scarce at their beck—to control the market and bring about those ruinous fluctuations which palsy the arm of industry and paralyze its hopes—to manipulate transportation and commerce in such a manner as to throw all the burdens and all the hazards back upon the industries—to take the just burdens of taxation, in a great measure, from the capital of the country, and cast them upon the overburdened shoulders of labor. The most arrogant demand of the Southern slaveholder, for the extension of his peculiar institution, was not more repugnant to our reason and our manhood than the present demand of the office-holders' party to cling to its corruptions, and grow rich out of the exactions unjustly forced upon the laboring population. I need not detail the manner in which it has been accomplished; but the facts are clearly before the whole country that labor is poorly fed and poorly clothed, while the aristocracy which has gathered around the party in power is rolling in wealth and splendor, and votes to itself double salaries while it laughs the protests of a tax-ridden people to derision and scorn. They look contemptuously upon reasonable complaints, and in the insolent language of the villainous Tweed inquire, "What are you going to do about it?"

This convention and the conventions being held throughout the country are preparing to answer this very insinuating question. First, we are going to organize in the interest of labor. We are going to call the sons of toil together in deliberate and thoughtful counsel. We are going to throw old party prejudices to the four winds of heaven, and unite in a mass to oppose this class legislation, which has filled our country with injustice and misrule, and demand equality of rights and benefits in the administration of this Government. We are going to insist that the Tweeds, and Gages, and Howards, and the other countless horde of public defaulters, be driven from their places of plunder. We are going to denounce with fearless voice the system of high and double salaries. We are going to insist that all those who have taken part in the system of public plunder, whether they be Presidents, Vice-Presidents, members of Congress, or whatever position they may hold, shall take their places back in the ranks of the people, where they will find less opportunity to plunder. We are going to maintain that all transportation lines are public highways, which belong to the world and are liable to the just control of the laws. That the franchises of corporations consist in the right to hold and operate them according to law, and not according to their schemes of personal aggrandizement. We are going to try to stop the domination of rings, in the form of boards of trade, and commission merchants, and warehouse operators, and the other cunningly devised contrivances by which they pilfer from the products of labor from the moment they are started on their way to market. We are going to insist upon an increase of the currency, to be in paper of the Government, based upon its public debt, and made a legal tender, to take the place of bonds bearing interest which the people now have to pay. We are going to insist that the farming interest has at least one-half the right to fix the price upon the necessaries of life which they produce. Thus far we are now pretty well agreed. If the future shall develop other objects claiming our attention, the same determined purpose which has stimulated us to confront these great principles will also enable us to embrace others.

We have organized a party because many of our objects can only be effected by united party action. If we desire to have measures carried out, we must select men with a wiew to such measures. If we desire reform, we must have men who are earnestly in favor of reform. If we want a reduction of expenses, we cannot depend upon men who have doubled up expenses until they are compelled to tax our tea and coffee. If we desire to stop class legislation, we cannot depend upon men who are placed in power by the action of corrupt and scheming rings, or who lend a patient ear to a tempting lobby. Thus party action becomes a necessity. Old issues belong to the past. The exigencies of the country demand action upon the emergencies of the immediate present, and to these we are required to give attention if we will relieve ourselves of burdens too grievous to be borne. For these reasons we have organized a party or association, and pledged ourselves each to the other to carry out and labor earnestly for the reforms which the interests of the country demand. Already our efforts have been crowned with a success which has commanded the attention of the whole people. When Jay Cooke was unable to carry his grasping schemes further, it was said the farmers' movement did it. When a large number of other banks became alarmed at Jay Cooke's failure and closed their doors, it was said the farmers' movement did it. When the railroads stopped half their business because the money was locked up in banks, and there was not enough in circulation to pay railroad freights, it was said the farmers' movement did it. When the workshops closed their doors and threw their operatives out of employment, it was said the farmers' movement did it. And, now, let them go a little further, and when pork has gone up to over six dollars a hundred in the face of the panic, and the resolution of the Northwestern Convention, let them acknowledge the farmers' movement did that; and when corn has gone to over fifty cents, let them say the farmers' movement did that; and when the country has refused to be frightened at the bankers' panic, but has proceeded forward with its accustomed business, let them acknowledge the farmers' movement did that; and, as one reform after another follows in our track, let them say the farmers' movement did it, till the country is filled from one end to the other with the beneficent fruits of the farmers' movement.

We are sometimes charged with what is termed communism. It seems to be cast upon us by our opponents, as a term of reproach. I confess I do not fully understand its practical definition. But if it means that destructive desperation to which the down-trodden are sometimes driven by the injustice of tyrannical rule, I do not hesitate to say, it is the very condition in this country, which we are organized to endeavor to prevent. In about two years we shall have outlived a century of our national history. In that space of time we have brought the wilds of a continent to be the abiding place of civilization. Our march has been contested inch by inch by savages, but we have treated them in the main with humanity. We have belted a continent with the iron bands which unite two mighty oceans, and held out the beckoning hand to the commerce of the Indies. We have carried on two wars with the most powerful nations of Europe with victorious results. We have spanned the continent and plowed the depths of the ocean with telegraphs. We have founded institutions of learning that compare favorably with the most enlightened nations. We have made religion as free from governmental control as the air we breathe, and it is wholly beyond the reach of governmental intolerance. We have opened wide marts of commerce and reared great cities which command the admiration of mankind. We have made inter-communication vastly more easy by a system of railroads, scattered broadcast over the land. When the harvests of other lands are scanty, they look to us for bread. We have crushed out a mighty rebellion and sundered forever the chains of African slavery. These are some of the great fruits of a century's industry. Still one question of commanding magnitude remains unadjusted. It is the question of the status of labor and its bearing upon the destinies of the country. Until the question is settled upon a national and just basis, we cannot well hope for immunity from the discontented acts of the oppressed, whether they be acts of one kind of lawlessness ar another. We make no war upon the institutions of society, nor upon the civilization of the age. But pointing to the evils which paralyze the industries on which the world depends for its institutions, its civilization and its bread, with a high reverence for our laws and a patriotic hope for the future of our race, we implore all men to take note of the cloud which is rising, and by a just system to dispel it as the genial rays of the sun dispel the threatening hurricane.

The Aunt.

An aunt is not to be found on every bush. The ignorant may perhaps suppose that the quality of auntness inheres in every sister of a parent. In form, possibly; but in substance, not necessarily by any means. An aunt is a being who can only exist for children. Grown persons cannot (unless they are childlike) have real aunts. For those who can, the aunt is a delightful personage who has all the merits of a mother, but in a more exalted degree, and none of those defects of harshness, discipline, infliction, peremptoriness, and the like, that so often and sadly mar the natural sweetness of the filio-parental relation. The aunt, you see, can permit, but cannot forbid. She is a beatified mother. And any person claiming to be an aunt, and falling short of these attainments, is an impostor.—Old and New.

A Clerical Shot at Gen. Jackson.

John Rankin contributes to the Chicago Interior the following reminiscence of Rev. John Henderson, an old-time preacher of Tennessee:

In those early times, the barbarous practice of fighting duels prevailed to some extent among a class of men who professed to be gentlemen. This horrible barbarity Mr. Henderson depicted in its darkest aspect as fraught with cowardice and murder. It is said that he delivered at Nashville, Tennessee, in the presence of General Jackson, who was a duelist, a discourse in which he stated that a sea captain who had become a preacher, was the means of converting the daughter of an infidel, who became very angry, and determined to kill the preacher. For this purpose he concealed himself by a road on which the preacher was to pass; but Providence so directed that he did not go that way. The infidel then sent the preacher a challenge to fight a duel. This the preacher accepted, and hastened to the infidel's home, and found him in bed. Sir, said he to the sea-captain, on a certain day you lay concealed by the wayside to murder me. You knew that it was inconsistant with my calling to fight a duel. But I am determined to fight you immediately in this room and it is my right to choose the weapons of combat. The infidel was seized with consternation and trembling. The preacher drew out his Bible. This, said he, is the weapon with which I mean to fight you. "O," said Mr. Henderson, "Never was there a poor fellow so glad to see a Bible." The design of this narrative was to ridicule duel fighting. It is said that Jackson was so pleased with the boldness and faithfulness of the preacher that he gave him a fine suit of clothes.

The Horse Punished His Master.

A carrier named R——, at no time tender in his treatment to his four-footed servants, returned one night in a state of semi-intoxication from Mermant to Givors. The man's natural barbarity was at this time aggravated by the drink he had taken, and, being dissatisfied with the efforts of one of the horses—a poor hack which had almost served its time—he decided that the animal was no longer worth his feed, and resolved to put an end to it. For that purpose he tied the poor brute to a tree, and, taking a massive lever, used in moving goods, he struck the animal several violent blows on the head, until the unfortunate creature sank to the ground.

The master, thinking the animal was dead, left it on the spot, intending to remove the dead body next day.

The horse, however, recovered his senses a short time after, made his way home, and entered the yard at daybreak. Its arrival was welcomed by the neighing of its companions in the stable, which noise awakened the master, who was now furious at having failed in his cruel purpose. He tied up the animal afresh, and commenced again to shower blows on his head.

This act of brutality was committed in sight of two other horses in the stable; and at length, one of them, a young animal, became so frantic with rage, that it broke its halter, and, rushing on the man, seized him in its jaws, and, after shaking him violently, threw him down, and trampled on him with such fury, that, had not the man's cries brought some persons to his aid, the master would certainly have been killed.—French Paper.

Cable Telegraphy.

We can almost realize the dawn of the era of cheap telegraphing. It is announced that an English company intend to lay a new submarine cable between England and the United States and transmit dispatches at the rate of a shilling a word. The present tariff per word on messages over the cables of the Anglo-American company is $1.03 in gold. There are now fifteen submarine cable companies, and in these enterprises $100,000,000 are invested. Among the projected lines of cable for which companies are forming is one from Scilly, Eng., to St. John, N. F., 2,000 miles; one from Scilly to Halifax, N. S.; one from Scilly to Bermuda, thence direct to New York; and from Bermuda to St. Thomas, and thence to Para, South America; one from Valparaiso, Buenos Ayres, to Lima, Guayaquil, Bonaventura, and the Isthmus of Panama; one from San Diego, Cal., to Japan; one from Mexico to the Fiji Islands, New Caledonia, and Australia; one from Australia to New Zealand, for which the New Zealand Government has just granted a charter; one from Yokohama, Japan, to Shanghai; and one from Aden, on the Red Sea, to Mauritius, and thence to Cape Town, South Africa. Two of the projected Atlantic cables above referred to are those of the French Atlantic Company, capital, £900,000; and the Western Telegraph Company, capital, £1,350,000. These facts show the wonderful growth of a species of enterprise concerning which few people, comparatively, have any knowledge. The business of the Anglo-American Company's lines now amounts to over $12,000 a day. While between 50,000 and 60,000 miles of cable have been laid by foreign capital, not an investment of the kind has been made by the business men of the United States.—Boston Globe.

Bankrupt Law.

"Sambo, what your 'pinion ob de bankrupt law?"

"Tink um fus-rate, Pompey."

"I imply for the appellation myself. Just splain him's principles."

"Why, you see here, now, just len' me dat half dollar you got for white-washing."

Pompey hands him the money, and Sambo deliberately puts it into his pocket.

"Dere den, now, I owes de shoemaker three shilling, and you half a dollar, besides de grogshop bill. Now dis half dollar am all de property I got. I divides him accordin' to de debt."

"Sambo, I takes dat half dollar back."

Sambo, with amazement, "You tink dis chile green? You gits yo' share wid de oder creditors."

Sambo was as honest as some others.

The Indians in Canada, unlike their brethren in this country, are steadily increasing in numbers. According to the census of 1871, there were 13,035, showing an increase of 51 per cent. in the last ten years.

Newspapers Domestically Considered.

Too low an estimate is apt to be set on the domestic value of newspapers. After reading them, and putting ourselves, through their agency, in mental correspondence with the world, they are thrown aside and forgotten. But to suppose their usefulness bounded by their news columns and the waste-bag is a thriftless mistake.

In the first place, there are the household recipes, to be found in stray corners, often excellent, and deserving a refuge on the fly-leaf of the family cookbook. Then come the pretty verses, the strange and droll stories, the brief biographies and reminiscences which, pasted in a scrap-book, are a source of never-ending pleasure, not only to those who do not care for richer intellectual food, but to those who have only odd minutes for reading.

Notwithstanding the squibs jocular journalists have penned on the use of newspapers for bedclothing, we know from experience that these are not to be despised. They may not be as comfortable as your blankets, but certainly they keep out the cold. Two thicknesses of papers are better than a pair of blankets, and in the case of persons who dislike the weight of many bedclothes, they are invaluable. A spread made of a double layer of papers between a covering of calico or chintz, is desirable in every household. The papers should be tacked together with thread, and also basted to the covering to keep them from slipping. An objection has been made on account of the rustling, but if soft papers be chosen the noise will not be annoying, especially should the spread be laid between a blanket and the counterpane.

As a protection to plants against cold, both in and out of doors, nothing is better. If newspapers are pinned up over night at a window between pots and glass, the flowers will not only not be frozen, but will not even get chilled, as they are so liable to be at this season. In the same way, if taken to cover garden-beds, on the frosty nights of early autumn, they will allow the plants to remain safely out-doors some time later than if common.

One of the oddest services to put our journals to is the keeping of ice in summer. An ingenious housekeeper recently discovered that her daily lump of ice would last nearly twice as long when wrapped in newspapers, and placed in any kind of covered box, as when trusted solely to a refrigerator. This is very convenient, since it is possible to have the best and cheapest refrigerator constantly at hand.

To polish all kinds of glass after washing, except table glass, no cloth or flannel is half so good as a newspaper; and for a baker's dozen of other uses, quite foreign to its primal purpose, it is without a rival.—"Home and Society;" Scribner's for March.

A Murderer Hung by Women.

Trinidad, Col., Correspondence of the New York Sun.

About ten days ago, a woman by the name of Molly Howard came here from Los Animas, and took up her residence in a small hut within sight of our post-office. At the same time a man arrived who claimed to come from California. This man was an American. He was lame in one foot, having had his toes frozen, and was only able to wear a boot on one of his feet. He was of sandy complexion, medium height, heavy set, with a very bad face. He lived in a small hut with four or five Mexican men.

On Saturday morning last the town was thrown into a state of great excitement by the report that Molly Howard was found in her house murdered. On entering the house in which the crime was committed, a sickening sight was presented: The poor woman lay across her bed dead, with the left side of her head mashed to a jelly; on the forehead was a gash two inches in length, on her chin two ugly bruises, and on her throat the imprints of finger nails were visible.

The opinion was that the deed was done by Mexicans. The Coroner took charge of the body and impaneled a jury. The stranger referred to was arrested on suspicion, as well as a big Mexican named Pedro Lucero. This man Lucero is a desperate character. The Californian, Lucero, another Mexican, and a negro were all held to await the decision of the Coroner's jury.

The Coroner gave permission to bury the remains, and yesterday (Sunday) the late Molly Howard was taken to her last resting place.

About 9 o'clock Monday morning groups of men with revolvers gathered together. At about 11 the groups concentrated into one large crowd, and proceeded to the Coroner's office. Finding that the inquest was over they wended their way to the office of one of our Justices of the Peace. There they entered the building, and, seizing the American, they once more made their way down the street toward the river, followed by at least 150 persons of both sexes.

At the river side a large cottonwood tree was sought and found, a rope thrown over a projecting limb and fastened around the culprit's neck. He was then asked if he had anything to say, when he confessed to having killed Molly Howard because she owed him one dollar. He was then told he would be given ten minutes to make his peace with his Creator. He replied that he did not want to pray.

A woman by the name of Moline then fastened another knot on the rope around his neck, the word was given, and she, with three other disreputable women, and in the presence of at least 250 persons, Mexican and American, launched the murderer into eternity. He died in about fifteen minutes.

Surgical Examination.—At an examination of the College of Surgeons a candidate was asked by Abernethy: "What would you do if a man were blown up with powder?"

"Wait until he came down," he coolly replied.

"True," replied Abernethy. "And suppose I should kick you for such an impertinent reply, what muscles should I put in motion?"

"The flexors and extensors of my arm; for I should knock you down immediately."

The candidate received his diploma.

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING.

A lady lived in Dumbarton,
 Whose heart was full of kindness,
And when my tale is told, you'll see
 Her eyes were full of blindness.

Her servant came to her one morn,
 And asked to "have the day, marm,"
To visit to her home,
 Which was "five miles away, marm."

The lady took a moment's thought,
 Then cheerfully consented,
Because she always loved to have
 Her servant live contented.

And so the servant homeward went,
 The mistress to the kitchen,
And planned a little joke which she
 Thought "perfectly bewitchin'."

She bustled around with footsteps light
 To get her husdand's dinner,
And never dreamed how soon she'd find
 That husband was a sinner.

She heard his step upon the walk,
 And hid behind the table,
From whence she [illegible]
 As still as she was able.

She thought that he surprised would be
 To get such fond caresses
From one enrobed in apron strings
 And pastry-covered dresses.

Alas! imagine her dismay—
 Imagine her great distress—
To have him kiss her lips and ask—
 "Sweet Mary, where's your mistress?"

Tempers of the Siamese Twins.

Whether the same blood circulated through the veins of both or not, certain it is they were different in temperament and disposition. Eng was mild, amiable, gentle in his disposition and pleasing in his manners. Chang was the very reverse, having a very irritable disposition and violent temper, always ready to take offense, and quick to quarrel at the slightest umbrage. Eng will be recollected as the larger of the twins, Chang the smaller. Numerous instances are related (some of which are, of course, exaggerated) of the unhappy domestic consequences of Chang's violent temper. Sometimes at table during their meals he would fly into a passion, spring up, and, seizing the table cloth, would jerk all the plates, dishes and eatables off the table and scatter the fragments all over the room. A favorite way of displaying his temper was to drag a feather bed across the room and pile it on the floor. Repeatedly he fought desperately with Eng—a hand to hand combat, the latter always acting on the defensive. Once Chang succeeded in cutting him very severely in the face, it is said, with a knife, before he was disarmed. Eng being asked what was the matter with his wounded face replied, "it was done one day" all that could be got out of him in regard to the brotherly affray.

About thirty miles southeast of Dayton, Lyon county, Nevada, has been discovered a mountain which appears to be one mass of copper ore. The sides of the hill are covered with blocks of the ore, and veins seam it in all directions. Some of these veins are from three to five feet in width, and are a solid mass of ore, without any admixture of quartz or other rock.

A New Trial Granted.

Old Ginguzzle was the terror of the junior bar. Any of us would as lief have faced the master we believed him to serve, as encounter Old Gin, as we called him, in the trial of a case.

There wasn't a quibble he wasn't up to, nor a trick he couldn't stoop to. Then his manner of treating a youthful opponent—supercilious is no name for it—it was like administering a spanking in open court. It was no use appealing to the judge. Old Gin bullied him as much as he did the rest of us. It was only the jury he took pains to be polite to, and how he did bamboozle them.

Old Gin rode the circuit and the deuce of it was, you could never tell when he would be rung on you. You case might be called for a trial; a square fight with one for whom you felt yourself fully a match, when at the last moment, Old Gin, just retained on the other side, would haul up his chair, and begin to stare you out of countenance. I had a pet case—it was a suit for slander—and Pope Fallowbrain, not a legal giant, but the youthful author of much unpublished poetry, was employed to conduct the defence. I was confident of a victory—if only Old Gin kept his finger out out of the pie. I thought once of securing him on my side; but I knew he would take all the credit to himself, and I had no wish to be shorn of my laurels.

When my case was reached, much to my relief, Old Gin was not on hand. It was early in the term, and residing in another county, he had not made his appearance yet.

I announced myself ready; but much to my disgust, Mr. Fallowbrain asked for a day's postponement. His client, he said had lately employed Mr. Ginguzzle, who was expected that evening and the defence would be ready to go on to-morrow. I protested against the delay, and insisted that the unexplained absence of one counsel, when another was present—especially one as competent as my learned friend—was no ground for adjourning a trial.

The judge knew I was right, but he was too much afraid of Old Gin to say so. He knew what a rumpus the old fellow would raise when he came, if the case was forced on in his absence. The trial, accordingly, was set down for the following day, then to go on peremptorily.

I left the court house much chagrined. I think I could have heard with composure of an accident on the train Old Gin was coming on, if nothing more had happened than breaking the old sinner's neck.

It was in this state of mind that I met my friend, Sam Pokefun, the best fellow at the bar, only a little too much inclined to a practical joke.

I explained the situation to Sam.

'If Old Gin could be put out of the way for a day it would be all right, would it?' he asked.

'Of course it would,' I answered. 'The judge knows the case should have gone on to-day, and has ordered it to proceed to-morrow, peremptorily.'

'I have an idea,' said Sam, and he proceeded to unfold it. What it was the reader will see in the sequel.

Old Gin had a failing—not an only one—he drank like a fish, only his beverage was different. His natural inclination was for Bourbon whisky, and for moistening purposes, he seldom used anything else. For how much of it he could furnish inward storage was a disputed point, which nobody cared to go to the expense of settling by actual experiment.

On Old Gin's arrival that evening, Sam and I invited him to a little entertainment to be given at Sam's room, after supper. It was a strictly private affair—none but the three of us to be present, and the supply of Bourbon to be unlimited Old Gin highly appreciated such attentions from his juniors, and it was wonderful how agreeably convivial he could make himself at their expence.

On this occasion he fairly outshone himself.

'He holds as much as a bonded ware-house,' said Sam, aside, the fourth time the demijohn was sent out to be filled.

By drinking sparingly ourselves, and keeping Old Gin's glass constantly replenished, we managed to put him to bed boozier than he had ever been known to be before.

It was well we all stopped at the same house, or the question of transportation might have presented difficulties.

Next morning Sam and I were up betimes, and taking a live water-snake, which a boy had caught for us the evening before, and which had been kept over night in a box, we slipped it into one of Old Gin's boots left before the door, bending down the top so as to prevent the escape of the reptile, which, it is needless to add, was quite harmless.

We then entered Sam's room, near by, and waited.

At length we heard Old Gin's door open, and a moment after there came an uproar that afforded ample excuse for our rushing into his room, and, in affected terror, demanding what was the matter.

'Matter?' roared Old Gin, rushing after the snake with the poker, and knocking over everything in his way. 'Just see what I have found in my boot!'—making a furious blow, which the snake dodged.

'See what?' asked Sam.

'Why, that confounded snake!'—making another ineffectual stroke.

'Snake?—I see no snake,' replied Sam, looking directly at it.

Old Gin turned pale.

'You don't mean to tell me there's no snake there? he stammered.

'None that I can see,' returned Sam.

'Then boys, I've got em!' screamed Old Gin. 'Run for a doctor!—quick!—quick!

'You don't mean you've got the delirium tremens?' said Sam, looking frightened.

'Genuine jimjams!' gasped Old Gin—'for Heaven's sake run for a doctor!'

Meantime the snake had disappeared under the bed, a circumstance which only served to heighten Old Gin's alarm, as it convinced him that his former impressions had all been delusive.

Leaving Sam to take care of the patient I hastened to call in Dr. Probang, to whom the case was stated.

The doctor was a devout believer in active remedies and plenty of them. His first step was to throw Old Gin into as deep a sleep as opium could put him in; the next was to shave his head and blister it. This last we would have prevented if we could, for we had no wish to injure the old wretch; but the doctor pooh-poohed our remonstrances, and he knew his own business.

When court opened Old Gin wasn't there. Fallowbrain was nervous. He asked a moment's indulgence while he crossed the street to the hotel and inquired after his associate. He was met at the door by the doctor who refused him admittance as well as any information touching the condition of his patient.

Poor Fallowbrain was mystified. He hurried back to the court-house, and begged another day's delay.

I insisted that if suitors would persist in employing counsel of too convivial habits, it was but fair that they should take the consequences, and concluded by reminding the court that the case had been set down for that day peremptorily.

The judge said it must go on; and the result was a victory quite as brilliant as I had anticipated.

My triumph was short-lived though. For two days Old Gin didn't show himself. On the third, he came into court, with his head swathed, looking very pale and as mad as a mod'e.

The snake, it appears, after some hours grew tired of his hiding place, and crawling forth, was discovered and killed by the doctor.

Of course the cat was out of the bag. Old Gin had a good head for circumstantial evidence, and was not slow to work up the case.

He moved for a new trial on a long affidavit, minutely setting forth the circumstances of the conspiracy of which he had been the victim—the body of the snake, in a bottle of spirits, being attached as an exhibit.

The motion was granted, and when the case came on the next time, I lost it.

The Dollar We Don't Spend.

We have to calculate pretty close at our house, you know; and the whole family are called into council when any important expenditure is to be made. Well, the other night we were considering the small remnant of the quarter's salary, and Mrs. Dobbs was trying to reckon how it could be made to cover everything. There was a new dress, and a new coat for me, and a new carpet for the best parlor, and a new hat for our (at present) unmarried daughter, besides a great many other things, with which I may not occupy your valuable space. The main point was the new dress, and Mrs. Dobbs was thinking of this shade, and scrutinizing that pattern, wishing she could buy them all, doubting if she could buy any of them; and our faces grew longer as the salary grew shorter. Presently, with one of my happy inspirations, I said to her:

'Mrs. Dobbs, there is no dollar that does you so much good as the one you don't spend.'

She looked at me a little perplexed and presently she said, 'Why, doctor, I don't understand you.'

So I said, 'The handsomest dress is the one you don't buy.'

'Oh yes, that's true. The best dress I ever had was the silk that Mrs. Largehead gave me, when she came from Philadelphia. She bought it at Homer & Colladay's; it couldn't have cost less than—'

'Mrs. Dobbs,' said I, interrupting her, 'the handsomest and every way the best dress is the one you don't have.'

She was more puzzled than ever, and I was forced to explain.

'Mrs. Dobbs,' said I, 'all the dresses you ever bought have worn out, haven't they?'

'Yes,' said she, very promptly, 'all of them. I haven't a decent thing to my name. There is my bombazine—'

'Wait a moment,' I said, for I was mortally afraid to have her get up that topic, 'and did you ever buy a dress, ever have a dress any way, that you didn't have some misgivings over; that you didn't see some defects in; that you didn't rather wish that you had bought the other?'

'I believe you are right,' she said thoughtfully.

'But,' said I, 'the dress that you don't buy has no faults; you are never tired of it; it never grows old; never fades; never wears out; or, if you want to change, how easily the change is made!'

'Why, yes,' said Mrs. Dobbs; 'I never thought of that before.'

'And so,' said I, 'of your dollar. You never spent a dollar in your life, that you didn't feel at least a doubt as to whether you had spent it wisely. You wished you had bought something else. But the wish was vain; you couldn't make a change. The dollar that you spend you can't spend but once, but the dollar that you don't spend you can spend a hundred times. You can buy a hundred things with it every time you go out. If you are dissatisfied with any of your purchases, you can go back and begin all over. And so,' I continued, 'the dollar that you don't spend does you a great deal more good than the dollar that you do spend; and, better than all, it brings with it no regrets, no misgivings.'

Mrs. Dobbs looked as though she didn't know just how to answer me, but at the same time as though she wasn't quite convinced. Presently she said:

'Well, doctor, I don't know that I see through it all: but no doubt you are right, for you are a great deal wiser than I am. And so we will go on that principle. I will take the dollar that we do spend, and you shall have the one we don't spend, which is, as you have showed, so much the better of the two.'

Truth Stranger Than Fiction.

A new phase is announced of the astonishing trial of Mrs. Waite, at Portland, Maine, on the charge of bigamy. The charge was preferred, it will be remembered, by John Waller, who claimed that the defendant was his wife, and that she had deserted him and his two children. He named marks upon her body by which she could be identified. Mrs. Waite bore these marks upon her person, and the children of Mr. Waller swore to her identity. In spite of this evidence, Mrs Waite maintained the most remarkable composure, and convinced the many spectators present at the trial that she was either a most wonderful actress or the victim of a not less wonderful combination of circumstances. The last move is the publication of a letter from the true Mrs. Waller, who is known by the aliases of Kate Waller and Catherine McKenzie This person claims that she was married to John Waller, May 28, 1862 and that her children were born Feb. 24, 1863, and Sept. 2, 1864; that she left him four years ago, because he abused her; that she has a scar on her arm where he cut her with an ax, and another in her temple where he struck her with a block of wood. She adds that she will have her children before long, if she has to steal them. If the letter is genuine and the true wife of John Waller produced and placed on the witness stand, the reality will surpass in interest many of the creations of fiction.

A lady in Poughkeepsie found a little girl in the street crying bitterly, and asked her where she was going, she was so small to be out alone. "Down town to find papa." "What is your father's name?" inquired the lady. "His name is papa." "But what does your mother call him?" "She calls him papa." "What do you want of your papa?" "I only want to kiss him." Just then a sister of the child, who was searching for her, came and took possession of the little runaway, and told the pitiful story that the child's father, whom it dearly loved, had died recently, and she being tired of waiting, had gone out to look for him.

AGASSIZ.

BY JAMES T. FIELDS.

Once in the leafy prime of Spring,
When blossoms whitened every thorn,
I wandered through the Vale of Orbe
Where Agassiz was born.

The birds in boyhood he had known
Went flitting through the air of May,
And happy songs he loved to hear
Made all the landscape gay.

I saw the streamlet from the hills
Run laughing through the valleys green,
And as I watched it run, I said,
"This his dear eyes have seen!"

Far cliffs of ice his feet had climbed
That day outspoke of him to me;
The avalanches seemed to sound
The name of Agassiz!

And, standing on the mountain crag
Where loosened waters rush and foam,
I felt, that though on Cambridge side,
He made that spot my home.

And looking round me as I mused,
I knew no pang of fear, or care,
Or homesick weariness, because
Once Agassiz stood there!

I walked beneath no alien skies,
No foreign heights I came to tread,
For everywhere I looked, I saw
His grand, beloved head.

His smile was stamped on every tree,
The glacier shone to gild his name,
And every image in the lake
Reflected back his fame.

Great keeper of the magic keys
That could unlock the guarded gates,
Where Science like a Monarch stands,
And sacred Knowledge waits—

Thine ashes rest on Charles' banks,
Thy memory all the world contains,
For thou couldst bind in human love
All hearts in golden chains!

Thine was the heaven-born spell that sets
Our warm and deep affections free—
Who knew thee best must love thee best,
And longest mourn for thee!

—Scribner's for March.

THE DOUBLE DANGER.

Among the earliest settter of Woodstock, a beautiful town in the Green Mountain State, was a man by the name of Silas Sloey, who had left his early home near the sea, and following the windings of the new Connecticut, had at last hitched upon a place in the wilderness, where he erected his cabin, and then commenced an onslaught upon the giants of the forest that reared their heads in stately grandeur about him, but gave way beneath his relentless strokes, and in a couple of years he had quite an open space encircling his cabin. During this time he had lived alone, but when the second autumn came another journey was undertaken to that old home by the sea, and when he returned a young wife bore him company, to share with him the joys and privations incident to a pioneer.

Three years came and went, and the clearing had greatly enlarged its borders, although no arm but his own labored within its bound. The trees that at first had come close up to the cabin, had now retreated to a respectable distance, and the ground they had once occupied was now usurped by flourishing crops that cheered the heart of the settler, and encouraged him to still greater exertion.

The three years spent in the forest by the young couple had been those of peace and contentment. A son was born to them at the commencement of the second year of their married life, and who was, at the time of the adventure we are about to relate transpired, nearly two years of age, and as bright a little fellow as ever cheered the hearts of parents, whose very life seemed bound up in that of their child.

The nearest neighbors of the Sloeys were more than three miles away through the forest, so it was seldom that they saw others than themselves. The settler was too much occupied with his work to pay much attention to making visits, and the distance was so great that it was not safe for his wife to go alone, as the forest swarmed with wild beasts, which rendered the night hideous with their cries. Bears and panthers abounded, but the wolves were most to be dreaded and proved the greatest annoyance; for often they would gather around the cabin at early dusk and keep up their horrid cries until the early gray of the dawn sent them howling into the dim aisles of the forest and up the dark ravines among the mountains, where shadows almost like those of night lurked all through the day.

One day, late in October, business called the settler to the nearest settlement of importance in that section, which chanced to be about eight miles distant; and he set out early in the morning, telling his wife she need not look for him before nightfall, as it was very uncertain what time he would accomplish his business, and it might be that he would not be at home till late in the night, but come he would before he slept, unless some unforeseen event interposed to prevent. Bending over his child that was sleeping in the bed he kissed it, and then having bestowed the same mark of affection upon his wife, he bade her be careful not to stir from the cabin or to allow the child to wander from her sight for fear that some harm might come to them from the wild beasts. With this caution, which she promised readily to observe, he threw his rifle over his shoulder and took his way across the clearing, and his wife watched him from the doorway until the forest thicket hid him from her sight.

The morning had given promise of a beautiful day, which assurance was well kept until a little past meridian, when the wind changed to the eastward, and dark clouds began to obscure the sky to the south and east, giving strong indications that a storm was nigh at hand. Busy with her work and the care of her boy, Mrs. Sloey did not notice the approaching storm until near nightfall, when the sudden darkness that seemed all at once to throw a deep gloom about the cabin reminded her that the night and storm were close at hand, and going to the doorway she gazed anxiously toward that point in the forest whence she expected to get the first sight of her husband.

Although her gaze was long and earnest, it was not rewarded by a glimpse of her husband; then with a glance at the dark clouds that seemed to hem the little clearing in as with a hugh pall, she tried to calculate how long it would be before the rain would begin to fall, and to guess the distance her husband might be away, and the chance he had of reaching home before the storm.

Standing in the doorway the gloom seemed to her to deepen every moment, while the wind that had been sighing dismally in the forest died away, leaving everything almost as still as death.

The kettle singing on the hearth recalled her to the fact that she had commenced preparing supper, and turning away from the door, she approached the rude stone fire-place, and after paying due attention to what was cooking there she approached the bed upon which her boy was sleeping, and found the air of the fast deepening night appeared to strike him where he lay. Not caring to close the door, as she wished to catch the first sound of her husband's footsteps on his return, she bethought herself of a quilt that was in the loft, which she could spread upon the bed without disturbing her little son.

Listening for a moment, to make sure no footsteps were approaching, she ascended the rude ladder, and felt her way along in the darkness—the loft was unprovided with windows—to the spot where she supposed the object of her search to be lying, but it was not there. Either she or her husband had moved it, and groping her way about in the darkness, she, after a few moments' delay, succeeding in finding it, and taking it on her arm, she approached the ladder and was about to descend when she caught sight of an object in the room that seemed to turn her blood to ice, and for a moment rendered her incapable of thought or action.

Standing in the center of the room with its head unturned, its fierce eyes glaring around in every direction, its long red tongue partly protruding from its half-opened mouth, in which the white fangs were visible, was a huge, lank wolf, that despite the timidity of its race, had ventured in through the open door in search of food attracted by the oder of the meat that was cooking upon the fire; as it had been prowling about the cabin, as was frequently the case at this season of the year.

For a minute, Mrs Sloey was so paralyzed with horror that for her life or her child's she could not have moved or utter a word, and the wolf also remained stationery, snuffing the air, and then moved cautiously toward the fire, to the momentary relief of the mother, as she saw that he was farther from the bed upon which her boy was sleeping, yet whom it seemed as if no power on earth could save.

Slowly and shyly the wolf approached the fire, sniffing the air as it did so, but not fancying the strong light thrown out by the embers, or the heat that as it approached began to be rather uncomfortable; and as the monster would dart back a new pang of horror would assail the heart of the mother, who, with feelings that cannot be described, was watching any motion on which depended the life of her child.

Suddenly one of those wild fitful guests of wind that sometimes precede a storm, came whirling down the chimney, and scattered sparks about the room, to the visible terror and disgust of the wolf, who sidled toward the door, and just as Mrs. Sloey was experiencing a delightful hope that the monster would go away, the fierce gust slammed the door to with a loud bang, and the heart of the mother sank within her as she saw that the wolf was a prisoner in the cabin.

Horror stricken at the situation of affairs, Mr. Sloey watched, with a sinking heart, the movements of the wolf, who, finding himself thus caged, began to move anxiously about the room no longer seeking so much for food as for a chance to escape; but, at this moment, what was the horror of the mother to see her boy awakened, no doubt by the noise made by the slamming of the door, raise up in bed and call her to come to him.

At the sound of the child's voice the wolf paused near the center of the room, and fixed its eyes upon the little fellow, who, all unconscious of danger, was calling for his mother. The red tongue still protruded, and the white teeth glistened in the fire light, as the monster, half fearing to spring, crept nearer the bed to take a better look at his prey.

Half frenzied with the terrible danger of her child, the mother determined to sacrifice her own life, if need be, for that of her boy. A plan had suggested itself to her, a mere hope as it were, and she grasped it with all the eagerness that only those so situated can know.

Unfolding the quilt and laying it across her arm, she prepared to descend the ladder. The wolf was almost at its foot, and the bed but a short distance away. The monster saw her coming, and withdrew his gaze from the child, and fixed it upon his new victim.

When half way down the ladder, the wolf made a spring at her; this was the moment for her to execute her hastily-formed plan, and throwing the quilt, she enveloped the wolf in its folds, who not fancying this covering, commenced backing toward the other side of the cabin, striving to get rid of it, but in vain. Now was her moment for action; and springing to the bed, she clasped her child in her arms and sprang up the ladder, unharmed by the wolf, who was still struggling in vain endeavors to rid itself from the quilt. With one hand she threw the ladder back into the room, and then a cry of thankfulness fell from her lips at the success that had attended her efforts to save her child.

The boy not knowing the meaning of this behavior on the part of the mother, and somewhat frightened withal, began to cry; and while she tried to hush him in silence again, she did not take her eyes from the wolf, who, completely blindfolded, was spinning about the room in the most eccentric manner.

It was more by its subsequent action than the fortunate throwing of the quilt by Mr. Sloey that the wolf became entangled so hopelessly in it. At first she watched its actions with satisfaction, but as each circle brought the wolf nearer the fire a new terror took possession of her heart. Should it blunder therein, as he seemed fated to do, would not the cabin be set on fire thereby and a death as horrible as the one from which she had just rescued her child be their fate. Trembling with fear she watched every motion, and at last that which she had feared occured.

Each circle, as the wolf frantically endeavored to free itself from the covering, had brought it nearer to the fire-place, under the mass of glowing embers. A howl of rage and pain followed as it sprang out again upon the floor, its covering a sheet of fire. Another bound and it landed upon the bed, where, by a frantic effort, it threw off its fiery cover, and uttering yelps of pain it sprang again to the floor and rushed around the room for a chance to escape.

The bed was all afire in a moment, and Mrs. Sloely uttered a cry of despair as the flames caught in every direction and a dense volume of smoke rolled up through the aperture in the loft.

"Father in heaven, must we perish?" exclaimed the mother, as she pressed the child to her breast. "Husband! husband! why do you not come and save your wife and child from this horrible fate?"

No answer to the frantic ejaculation came to the ear of the distracted woman save the crackling of the flames as they caught upon the dry wood of the cabin, and sent their forked tongues up to the spot where she stood, while her ears were filled with the sharp cry of the wolf as it ranged round and round in its vain endeavors to escape, while ever and anon the flames would catch upon the fur, where it was already scorched off in its first contact with the fire, causing it to utter a howl of agony.

Although death stared her in the face, Mrs. Sloely was not a woman to give up so long as there was a chance for life left to her. As we have already said, there were no windows in the loft, so that avenue of escape was denied her. The roof was covered with hewn plank fastened to the ridge-pole and the top log of the sides by means of stout wooden pins. To remove one or more of these was her only chance of escape, but to do this with her own unaided hands seemed to be impossible. Half choked by the smoke and her child clinging to her and crying with all its power, she felt about her to find some instrument to aid her in the accomplishment of her purpose; but all she could find was a stout stick of wood that her husband had placed there to season for an axhelve. Inserting this with all her strength between the log and one of the planks, she essayed with all her strength to raise it from its place, but without success. Finding this one immovable, she tried another, and another, with like result.

Hotter and more stifling grew the air about her, louder crackled the flames below, and fiercer became the cries of the imprisoned wolf, while the cries of her child rang above all, and rendered her well nigh desperate. Hope was fast leaving her. But one more plank remained untried, and she had gone the length of the front side of the cabin. With the energy born of despair she inserted the stick, and pried upward with all her strength, and to her great joy it moved slowly and the welcome fresh air of heaven came pouring in upon them.

Inspired by hope, she attempted to start another one by its side, but, with all her strength, she found it impossible, and yet the aperture was not large enough to admit her passing through, and again the pangs of despair seized hold upon her heart.

The heat was becoming terrible, and the opening she had made in the roof seemed only an outlet for the smoke, which, as it poured out, well nigh stifled her. Clasping her child, she thrust him through the opening, and, holding him on the roof for a moment, she was about to let him slide to the ground, at the risk of dashing the life from his body, when the sound of rapid footsteps were heard, and the next moment the well-known voice of her husband sounded like music in her ears, as he came across the clearing, and by the light of the flames, that had begun to break out in several places, saw his child and the head of his wife on the roof.

"Quick, husband, for the love of God!" shouted the mother, as she still retained a hold upon her child. And in hardly more time than it takes to tell it, he was upon the roof, and with his strong arms had torn up another plank, and sprang to the ground with his child, and in a moment more his wife was by his side, with a heart overflowing with joy at their escape.

The cabin was burned to the ground with all its contents, including the author of all the mischief. A new one was erected, and therein, in after years, the story we have narrated was often rehearsed to those that claimed their hospitality.

Light Without Matches.—To obtain light instantly without the use of matches and without the danger of setting things on fire, take an oblong phial of the whitest and clearest glass; put into it a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea, upon which pour some olive oil, heated to the boiling point, filling the phial about one-third full, and then seal the phial hermetically. To use it, remove the cork and allow the air to enter the phial, and then recork it. The whole empty space in the bottle will then become luminous, and the light obtained will be equal to that of a lamp. As soon as the light grows weak its power can be increased by opening the phial and allowing a fresh supply of air to enter. In winter it is sometimes necessary to heat the phial between the hands to increase the fluidity of the oil. Thus prepared, the phial may be used for six months. This contrivance is now used by the watchmen of Paris in all magazines where explosive or inflammable materials are stored.

Glass from Granite.—The Baltic Journal reports that there exists near several cities of Finland a kind of granite, called there Cupacivi, of which the composition is this: Silica, 74 per cent.; feldspar, 12; oxide of iron, 3; lime, 1; alkalies, with traces of magnesia, 9. This being evidently a good compound to make glass, the first experiment was consequently made by melting 500 parts granite and 200 parts limestone, and a white glass was obtained. The second experiment was made with 20 granite, 150 lime, and 75 of soda. This glass was more fusible, and at the same time harder. Both kinds were blown without difficulty, at a bright red heat, while a dark glass was made by the addition of 70 parts of sulphate of lime or potash, and 7 parts of carbon.

What is Milk?—Milk, according to an Eastern savant, is 87 per cent. water (when the milkman don't adulterate it), and the balance is butter, cheese and sugar. It was astonishing that while containing so much water it was so nutritious that it would alone sustain the life of man from the hour of his birth to the hour of his death, no matter how long the time intervening. He spoke next of the specific gravity of milk, showing that cream was about as much lighter than water as water was lighter than milk, and hence the better the milk the less its specific gravity. Then he considered the causes of some of the taints and odors of milk. Unlike any other animal food, this came at regular intervals and measured quantities; and it came loaded with germs of its own destruction. It had the animal odor, and this was the worst thing to be contended with. It could be got rid of, however, by a simple process, which he explained, of allowing the milk to cone through a strainer and become exposed to the influence of the air. There were other taints arising from putrefaction in vessels not thoroughly cleansed, and he advised all the milk producers to throw away their wooden pails and procure tin ones, selecting those that had the fewest corners and sharp angles.

Fire.

According to Pliny, fire was a long time unknown to some of the ancient Egyptians, and when a celebrated astronomer showed it to them, they were absolutely in raptures. The Persians, Phœnicians, Greeks, and several other nations, acknowledged that their ancestors were once without the use of fire, and the Chinese confess the same of their progenitors. Pompanion, Mola, Plutarch and other ancient writers speak of nations which, at the time when they wrote, knew not the use of fire, or had just learned it. Facts of the same kind are also attested by modern nations. The inhabitants of the Marian Islands, which were discovered in 1551, had no idea of fire. Never was astonishment greater than theirs when they saw it on the desert in one of their islands. At first they believed it was some kind of animal that fixed to and fed upon wood.

Patent Medicines.—That there are some good patent medicines no intelligent man dare for a moment deny; and pre-eminent is the great California hero medicine, Vinegar Bitters, discovered by Dr. J. Walker, a prominent physician of San Francisco. This medicine, although called bitters, is not to be classed among the vile "fancy drinks" recommended and sold over the bar by rum-venders, but is a combination of pure herbalistic extracts, known to possess sterling medicinal qualities, and is compounded without the use in any shape of spirits. Its action upon the internal system is not stimulating to the extent that alcoholic poison is, but it at once attacks blood-impurities, and by removing the original cause destroys the germs of disease and invites returning health. Its action upon the stomach and liver renders it [illegible] certain specific in the most stubborn cases of dyspepsia, and in truth imparts new life and vigor to the whole system. It is one of the best medicines ever invented. 32

A Warning to Litigants.—A suit just closed in Windsor, Vt., illustrated the comparative values of success and victory. Some time ago two broods of turkeys belonging to different farmers were mixed, and a quarrel sprang up on an attempt at re-division. The matter was taken to court, and after two years' trial has resulted in the success of the plaintiff, whereby he was awarded $7.50. The victory, however, involved an expense in lawyer's fees of $200 or more. The turkeys were worth $5.

Deafness Caused by Catarrh.

Catarrh not unfrequently produces deafness. Mr. Levi Springer, of Nettle Lake, (P. O.), Williams Co., O., formerly of Durban's Corners, O., has been cured of deafness of fourteen years' standing, by using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. He was so deaf he could not hear a person talk when seated by his side, and can now hear the church bells ring two miles distant—so he writes.

A MARKED CASE OF DEAFNESS CURED.

Dickersonville, Niag. Co., N. Y. Feb. 22, 1871.

About one year ago I caught a severe cold in the head, which terminated in a severe form of Catarrh. During the time ulcerations occurred in the nasal passages, and I became wholly deaf in one ear, with partial deafness in the other. The inflammation had involved all the delicate structures of the ears, and I was in immediate danger of permanent deafness. The discharge became profuse and fetid, both into my throat and from my ears. In this condition I called on Dr. Pierce for aid, who prescribed his Golden Medical Discovery and Catarrh Remedy, and under their use have rapidly recovered. My hearing is restored, and my Catarrh is entirely well.

John Smith.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to Ayer's Cherry Pictorial as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—*N. Among the magazines for March there comes none brighter or better than the Milwaukee Monthly. Excellent stories, sketches and poems, followed by an illustrated fashion department; suggestions on house furnishing; an article on the toilet and how to look pretty; and fine editorials, make up an extremely interesting book. In the April number will be published the first of a series of articles of house plans, accompanied with careful estimates as to cost of building in brick or wood, and hints on and cost of furnishing. WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil and Lime.—The friends of persons who have been restored from confirmed consumption by the use of this original preparation, and the grateful parties themselves, have, by recommending it and acknowledging its wonderful efficacy, given the article a vast popularity in New England. The Cod Liver Oil is, in this combination, robbed of its unpleasant taste, and is rendered doubly effective in being coupled with the lime, which is itself a restorative principle, supplying nature with just the agent and assistance required to heal and reform the diseased lungs. A. B. Wilbor, Boston, is the proprietor. Sold by all druggists.

A Lesson for Americans.

Mr. Joseph Medill, ex-Mayor of Chicago, writing from Paris to the Tribune, of the former city, speaks of the economy of the French. He says:

"But that in which the French more particularly excel is economy. Compared with these French people the Americans are wasteful, improvident, and extravagant. It seems to me they live on just about one-half what the Americans do. They have a knack, so to speak, of making a little go a great way, and of extracting subsistence or comfort from things Americans would throw away or never notice.

It may be instructive to point out a few of the matters to which reference is here made. In the first place, not an ounce of food is wasted in harvesting or preparing for market. In the next place, not an ounce more of vegetable flesh, fish, or fowl, groceries or liquids, than is really needed, ever goes into the pot or kettle, or is placed on the table. The wife of every French family knows to a nicety what quantity of each kind of food is the least that will suffice to make a comfortable meal, and not a particle more than that is cooked or served. There are no slop-buckets full of broken victuals left on the table after breakfast or dinner, to be thrown on the street or manure-heap, or flung to the dogs or swine, as in America. No pieces of bread or meat or vegetables are thrown away; such quantities are not bought as to become stale or spoiled in the cellar or pantry. Servants are never permitted to waste or steal food for poor relations, as in America. The lady of the house looks after the marketing, her kitchen, and her pantry with sharp eyes and unflagging care.

The economy in the consumption of fuel for cooking and house-warming is immense as compared with that in our wasteful country. One reason, of course, is that wood and coal in France are scarce and dear. They cost at least double the price paid therefor in the United States; but the domestic consumption is not one-quarter as much. Paris contains between four and five times the population of Chicago; but, I find that the fuel consumed in it is less than in Chicago. It is true that the climate is much warmer for six months of the year in Paris than in Chicago; but after making the due allowance for that it still remains true that only one-third to two-fifths as much fuel is consumed per capita in Paris as in Chicago; and, as far as my observation and inquiries extend, the same proportion holds good throughout all France."

Use of Cats' Whiskers.

Every one has observed the whiskers of a cat; but few, perhaps, dream that they serve any valuable end. The following passage will prove the contrary:

"Every one must have observed what are usually called the whiskers on a cat's upper lip. The use of these in a state of nature is very important. They are organs of touch. They are attached to a bed of close glands under the skin, and each of these long and stiff hairs is connected with the nerves of the lip. The slightest contact of these whiskers with any surrounding object, is thus felt most distinctly by the animal, although the hairs are themselves insensible. They stand out on each side in the lion, as well as in the common cat; so that, from point to point, they are equal to the width of the animals body. If we imagine, therefore, a lion stealing through a covert of wood, in an imperfect light, we shall at once see the use of these long hairs. They indicate to him, through the nicest feeling, any obstacle which may present itself to the passage of this body; they prevent the rustle of boughs and leaves, which would give warning to his pray, if he were to attempt to pass through too close a bush; and thus, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, and the fur upon which he treads (the retractile claws never coming in contact with the ground), they enable him to move toward his victim with a stillness greater even than that of the snake, who creeps along the grass, and is not perceived till he is coiled round his pray.

Effects of Worry.

A writer in Chambers' Journal says: That the effects of worry are more to be dreaded than those of simple hard work, is evident from noting the class of persons who suffer most from the effects of mental overstrain. The case-book of the physician shows that it is the speculator, the betting man, the railway manager, the great merchant, the superintendent of large manufactories or commercial works, who most frequently exhibit the symptoms of cerebral exhaustion. Mental cares accompanied by suppressed emotion, occupations liable to great vicissitudes of fortune, and those which involve the bearing on the mind of a multiplicity of intricate details, eventually break down the lives of the strongest. In estimating what may be called the staying powers of different minds under hard work, it is always necessary to take early training into account. A young man, cast suddenly into a position involving great care and responsibility, will break down; whereas, had he been gradually habituated to this position, he would have performed its duties without difficulty. It is probably for this reason that the professional classes generally suffer less from the effects of overstrain than others. They have had a long course of preliminary training, and their work comes to them by degrees; therefore, when it does come in excessive quantity it finds them prepared for it. Those, on the other hand, who suddenly vault into a position requiring severe mental toil generally die before their time.

Children's Rights.

If a child wants a light to go to sleep by, give it one. The sort of Spartan firmness which walks off and takes away the candle, and shuts all the doors between the household cheer and warmth and the pleasant stir of the evening mirth, and leaves a little son or daughter to hide its head under the bed-clothes, and get to sleep as best it can, is not at all admirable. It is after the pattern of Giant Despair, where grim delight, confided to Diffidence, his wife, over the miseries of his wretched prisoners, always seemed most inimitable—a perfect picture of the meanness of disposition. Not that the dear mother means to be cruel when she tries this or that hardening process, and treats human nature as if it were clay to be molded into any shape she may please. Very likely she has no idea whatever of the injury and suffering she causes, or perhaps her heart aches; but she perseveres; thinking she is doing right.

A Plea for the House-Dog.

A correspondent of the Maine Farmer speaks these good words for the house-dog: "What hard-working farmer, on returning at night to rest his weary limbs, does not feel that he is more safe from burglars, and his stock, fowls and orchards more secure from thieves and midnight prowlers, both two and four-legged, if he has a good, faithful dog about his premises? What good housewife—and all such prefer leaving their hard day's work on the clothes-line during the dews of night—does not feel that her clothes are more safe if Bose is in the yard? When the little ones are off berrying, fishing, or wandering in the woods, what parent does not feel less anxious if Bose is with them? When you are absent from home over-night, do you not feel that home is more secure if Bose guards the premises—and who greets your return with a more cheerful welcome than he? From the earliest period of history the dog has been the faithful companion of man, and is the only species of the brute creation that will forsake its own species and follow him. A dog may be taught to be useful in many ways, even to the saving of human life. You can easily learn a dog to go into the water and bring out a stick, your hat or coat, and by filling a suit of your boy's clothes with straw, and throwing it into the river, your dog will bring it out; and if your little boy should accidentally fall into the water, Bose would soon safely land him on the shore.

A Bug Exterminator.

Hot alum water is a recent suggestion as an insecticide. It will destroy red and black ants, cockroaches, spiders, chintz-bug, and all crawling pests which infest our houses. Take two pounds of alum and dissolve it in three or four quarts of boiling water; let it stand on the fire until the alum disappears; then apply it with a brush while nearly boiling hot, to every joint and crevice in your closets, bedsteads, pantry-shelves, and the like. Brush the crevices in the floor of the skirting or mop-boards, if you suspect that they harbor vermin. If, in whitewashing a ceiling, plenty of alum is added to the lime, it will also serve to keep insects at a distance. Cockroaches will flee the paint which has been washed in cool alum water. Sugar barrels and boxes can be freed from ants by drawing a wide chalk-mark just around the edge of the top of them. The mark must be unbroken or they will creep over it, but a continuous chalk-line half an inch in width will set their depreciation at naught.—Scientific American.

Blind Tom.

This wonderful musical prodigy was born a slave in Georgia. He was one of a large family, but his blindness and apparent idiocy secured him many liberties not usually accorded to slaves. The first evidence he gave of his wonderful genius for music was when he was about seven. He had always displayed remarkable fondness for the playing of his master's young daughters, and was allowed free access to the parlors when company was not present. On one occasion, and during the absence of the family from the rooms, wonderful melody was heard proceeding thence, which, on investigation, proved to be the poor black boy, who was in an ecstacy of delight at the sound his own uncultured touch was producing. From that time he had unlimited freedom and was always called into requisition when visitors were present. From that hour to the present his career has been one of undimmed triumph. He is one of the most remarkable phenomena of the age.

In appearance he is fleshy, heavy-featured, with protruding lips, and quite black. He is totally blind and is very docile. He is strongly attached to his protectors, as they are to him.

A Case of Nerve.

The best exhibition of nerve lately heard of is that of Merritt Brindle, of Odessa, who some weeks ago came to a doctor of this city and wanted a finger amputated. It seems that, in skinning some animal, he cut his finger and poisoned the wound at the same time; that dry gangrene set in, and he amputated the finger at the joint with a jack-knife. This did not arrest the process of decomposition, and his hand presented a terrible appearance. The doctor told him the better way was to cure the disease before performing the operation, and if he would place himself under his charge, with security for pay, he would fix him all right. Brindle went away without making any arrangement. Yesterday he was in town again with his wound all healed. It seems he went home on the previous occasion, and tore the flesh from the finger by running it in a vice, and then sawed off the bone with a hand-saw. It's a rough, home-made job, but it don't cost a cent. Ionia (Mich.) Sentinel.

A Novel Wedding.

A little difficulty about the consummation of a wedding in Clayton county, Iowa, and how it was overcome, is thus described in a Western paper: When the gusts had all assembled to witness a marriage ceremony, it was discovered that the Justice of the Peace, who was to officiate in making the twain one, resided in another (Fayette) county, and therefore could not legally solemnize the marriage. Thereupon the bride and bridegroom, accompanied by the guests, adjourned to a neighboring corn-field, which was in Fayette county, and there, amid the rustling stalks and the wondering cattle, the knot was tied. The wedding party then returned to the house and banqueted. This corn-field wedding was a fitting prelude to the future of the husband and wife, who, from such sowing, ought certainly to reap a goodly harvest of farmer lads and agricultural lasses.—Exchange.

CHEAPEST AND BEST
Advertising Medium in the World!
Advertisers throughout the country are requested to note this fact, that they can have an advertisement inserted in 1400 newspapers "for less than the actual cost of setting the type 1400 times." For instance, here is an advertisement of two lines:

IF YOU wish to advertise in any paper besides this, write A. J. AIKENS, Chicago.

The cost of inserting this two-line advertisement in the 1400 newspapers would be but $28, or two cents for each newspaper in which it is inserted. Besides this great cheapness in price, you also save the considerable time and expense involved in corresponding with 1400 newspapers. If you should send your order direct to each newspaper—being $14 less than the postage. These facts prove the unparalleled cheapness of my plan of advertising.

The newspapers of these lists are weeklies, and they circulate in all of the States of the Union. All the leading and shrewdest advertisers in the country are regular advertisers in these papers, and have tested and proved their value and cheapness as advertising mediums. Such as—
A. T. Stewart & Co., J. & P. Coats,

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
For Diseases of the THROAT AND LUNGS,
SUCH AS
Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvelous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues, never equaled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well founded, if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

VINEGAR BITTERS
VEGETABLE
PURELY
DR WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

The Auburn Courier
Thursday, March 12th, 1874

Millard Fillmore, 13th President of the United States died at his residence in Buffalo, last Sunday.

Philadelphia is in trouble over her Centennial job. The Radical ring managers in that City have an unpleasant odor about them which compels decent people to give them a wide berth. They only want about $10,000,000, from Congress.

It takes the Senate an unconscionably long time to determine whether or not to inflate the currency, it displays no procrastination in dealing with the currency on hand. One day last week it consumed an hour in deciding whether or not to consider the Naval Appropriation bill, which, when taken up, was passed in fifteen minutes. As the appropriations amount to $18,000,000, this was at the rate of $1,200,000 a minute which is sufficiently rapid.

One of the most remarkable trials in history, that in which Sir Roger Tichborne has figured for the last two years, has at last closed. One of the surprising things about it is, that it should have any termination at all. But after one hundred and eighty days of a trial which must have exhausted a king's ransom, the claimant has been convicted of the charge of perjury and sentenced to fourteen years penal servitude. This is a just finale of a stupendous fraud, no doubt, but what of the estate?

Durell, of Louisiana, Busteed, of Mississippi, Storey, of Arkansas, and the Judge for the district of Florida, all four United States Judges, are to be tried by Congress for corruption in office. It will only be when the impartial pen of the historian records the infamies of the carpet bag governments of the South, that a just appreciation can be had of the wrongs perpetrated upon that people, in the name of loyalty and reconstruction. The truth will out. When hate an prejudice die away, it will be a fearful record for the Radical party to shoulder.

The Republican Legislature of Kansas has impeached Republican State Treasurer Hayes for alleged corruption and other gross misdemeanors. This is what we like to see. Let each party take the lead in exposing its own rogues, for they can do it with much more effect than if it comes from political antagonists. It is remarkable that Kansas, which is one of the youngest of the States, having been in the Union but a dozen years or so has had a larger number of rascals in office than almost any other, New York and Pennsylvania with their five and six times more inhabitants not excepted. It has been the very paradise of knaves.

The Auburn Courier wants to know "how it can be that in the populous State of Maryland, the deficit in the postoffice department should be among the largest in the States?" That's not a hard conundrum to guess. "My Maryland" is strongly Democratic. Give us another.—Kendallville Standard.

Then, on the same principle, we are to judge that the "irregularities" of the postmaster at Kendallville, are to be accounted for from the fact that that place is Republican.

But Myers wants another. Here it is. Ought not Grant to be censured as much as a Congressman for taking his share of the salary-grab. We have put this question several times to the above paper, but it has failed to answer.

When the people walk up to the County Treasurers office to perform the cheerful task of paying their taxes they should remember that the last Republican Legislature increased the State taxes from five cents to twenty on the hundred dollars. The Democrats had no difficulty in keeping the machinery of the State Government in motion with five cents on the hundred dollars, and with this small sum they had money left in the Treasury, but the Republicans, true to their practice all over the country, found it convenient to make the levy twenty cents on the hundred. Look at your receipts and see if we don't tell the truth. Besides this they nearly doubled the amount of taxable property; but to keep the people from condemning them they adroitly arranged for the payment of the tax in two installments so that the masses may be deceived in the amount they pay, and thus fail to hold the authors of the tax to a rigid accountability.

Pioneer Sketches

of

DeKALB COUNTY

NUMBER TWO.

During the spring of 1836 Wesley Park settled where Auburn now is, and laid out the town. Settlers began to push through the woods into various parts of the country, and the county was organized.

The settlements, of which we wrote in our last, were in Concord and Newville Townships. These, with Stafford, were then embraced in what was called "De Kalb Township." In the year 1836 several settlers located in Stafford, (we shall mention some of them presently.) Before proceeding to give incidents, perhaps it might be well, (as suggested by a friend,) to give some of the physical features of the three Congressional Townships, then embraced in one civil Township. Concord is intersected, very nearly diagonally from the North-east to the South-west corners, by the little St. Joseph river. The township is six miles square, embracing, of course, thirty-six sections of land. Along the river are rich bottoms from forty to eighty rods wide. Back of these are fertile, well timbered uplands—intermixed, occasionally, with some poorer oak timbered tracts, but all good wheat land. The river affords good Mill privileges, and, at present, there are two grist and two saw mills erected thereon. Bear Creek also runs down from the North-west corner of the township, through the centre, into the river. On it a saw mill was erected near the centre of the township; and another on the "twenty-six mile creek," at the North-east corner. Taking all its natural advantages, perhaps Concord may be regarded as about the best township in the county.

Newville is a fractional township, six miles long, and perhaps two and a half wide. The St. Joseph River runs diagonally across the North-west corner. The lands are much the same as in Concord and might be divided into the rich river lands. The oak timbered, wheat lands about the centre of the Township, and the beech and sugar timbered lands at the south end.

Stafford is a fractional Township also and has the river above mentioned, running across the South-east corner, and "Big run," a considerable creek, across the North-end, from West to East. On the river and creek the lands are quite fertile. Between the two they are variable, but none too poor for wheat, when properly cultivated. John Webster was one of the earliest settlers in the bounds of the Township. He bought some hundreds of acres of very rich land on the river near the Ohio State line, and, in 1836, settled on it. He was a somewhat eccentric man; an ardent devotee of wealth; careless on religious subjects; and yet a good citizen and neighbor. He was very useful in supplying the early settlers with corn, potatoes, &c., at very reasonable rates for the times; and, of later years by erecting a good Saw and Grist mill on his premises. He, and all his sons, have since left their valuable earthly possessions, and have gone to the "spirit land." His brother, Hazzard Webster, was also an early settler, respected by those that knew him. He died of late years in California. Jacob Gunsenhouser, John Rose and Rufus Coats Esq., were also early settlers in this Township; all good christian men, and highly respected citizens. S. W. Hackley, was also an early settler, died honored by those who knew him.

Many difficulties had to be encountered in getting into the country, at that early day, If the emigrant came with wagons, he had to cut and make his own road. If by the river he sometimes met with a "shipwreck;" and instance of which we will now relate.

Judge Widney was from Central Pennsylvania, and came by canal to the Aleghany Mountains; over the mountains by steam, ascending and descending those inclined planes; then again by canal to Pittsburgh; down the Ohio river by steamboat to Cincinnati; then by canal to Dayton Ohio; thence by wagons through (not over) that horrible, HORRIBLE "Black swamp" to Fort Wayne, From thence he and his wife passed up the Indian trail on horseback along the St. Joseph river, while the family, in the care of John P. Widney and wife, embarked in the perogue of Judge Walden and Thomas Gorrell, who were down for some provisions. The craft was "poled" safely (though the load was heavy,) until they reached a ripple in the river, near David Butlers, when the bow of the boat being turned by the rapid current, the water struck the side, and capsized the concern. Down went the Perogue, leaving crew and passengers small and great floundering in water waist deep to a common sized man; and the goods floating down the river in sublime confusion. Some of the larger children succeeded in paddling ashore, while the then wife of John P. Widney, (now sleeping in the Auburn grave yard,) seized his present wife, then a child of five years old, and upheld her in the water until the men succeeded in helping all ashore.

CURED PERMANENTLY.

Kenton, Ohio, Jan. 27, 1869—This is to certify that my son was cured of Epileptic Fits by Dr. S. Clay Todd, and has not had a fit or symptom for 3 years. ZACHEUS CESSNA

Refers to Mr. Robert Pollock, Van Wert, O., cured of Epileptic Fits in two months.

Mr. Gustave Werin, Nashville, Tenn—Cured in 2 months of Epileptic Fits of 6 years standing, after having been treated unsuccessfully by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe.

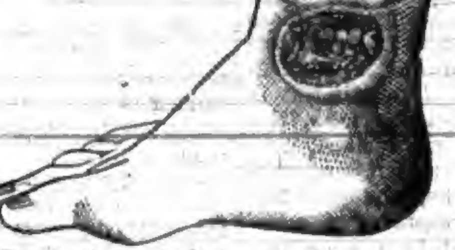
CAUSES—Excessive or insufficinet food or drink, too rich or too poor quality of food, bad drinking water, and the influence of sudden change of temperature, bad habits, &c.

SYMPTOMS—Hard pains in the stomach or around or under the heart; a disposition to vomit; warm salt water rising to the mouth with effort; diarrhœa and dysentery or obstinate constipation and tardy digestion; the stomach bloating; dizziness of the head; heaviness; loss of memory; the pulse quickened and irregular, sometimes palpitation of the heart; muscular agitation, or twitching convulsions, which become more frequent and severe, and finally end in insanity.

HOME TESTIMONIALS.

Aboit tp., Allen Co Ind. Mar. 8th, 1873—I hereby certify that I was afflicted with fever sore for nearly 3 years We employed what we thought the best physicians of Ft. Wayne without any benefit; and for over two years I could not walk, and my whole system was affected. At this stage of the disease I consulted Dr. S. Clay Todd, and, I am glad to say, under his treatment I became perfectly well in four months, and thanks to a Kind Providence, and the skill of Dr. S. Clay Todd, I am no longer a cripple



I was 61 years old when cured. All who have such a disease should employ Dr Todd at once.

MRS. LYDIA KNEPPER six miles west of Fort Wayne.

Ft Wayne, Ind. Feb. 15 1873.—I hereby certify that Dr. Todd cured our infant daughter of a large scrofulous tumor on the right under jaw in two weeks without lancing. She has been perfectly well ever since. Cured Aug. 14, 1872.

MISS HARRIET BROWN Wife of Mr Harrison Brown, 5 miles west of Fort Wayne.

Fort Wayne, Sep. 17, 1872.—For the benefit of those who think consumption incurable, I will make a statement of my cure: On the 12th of last March I was taken with the Lung Fever, or as the doctor called it, Pleuro-Pneumonia. I was attended by one of whom I considered the most eminent physicians of this city 3½ months, during which time he employed 5 other physicians as council. For 3 weeks I though I was getting better, when an abscess began to form in my left lung, and the physicians pronounced it quick consumption, from this time I failed rapidly, and raised from a pint to a quart of phlegm and matter each day, and had night sweats; by the 26th of June I had got so weak I could not lift a glass of water to my mouth, and was confined to bed. At this time some ladies in the neighborhood persuaded my wife to employ Dr. Todd, and I am free to say I improved steadily from the time I began taking his medicines, and in 10 weeks I was able to walk 2 miles, and felt as well as I ever did, now I walk from 3 to 4 miles each day, and neither cough nor spit. I have no pain and think my lung is healed perfectly.

JOHN A. MILLER,

SHE PRAYED FOR DEATH.

Two years and four months I lay upon my back in the most abject suffering every night I thought I would not live until morning and every morning that I would not live until night, and prayed for death to relieve me from my misery. We employed ten (10) physicians the most eminent of Fort Wayne, and other cities, without any benefit. When we heard of the wonderful cures of Dr. S. Clay Todd of this city we employed him, and thanks to a kind Providence and the skill of Dr. Todd. I am now able to attend to my household duties. I would advise all who think their case past help, to apply to Dr. S. Clay Todd at once. Mrs. DAVID BIRLEY, 109 E. Holeman St. Fort Wayne, Ind.

Sixty thousand ties are wanted by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, along the line at this place, for which they will pay from 30 to 40 cents, amounting to over $30,000 more than a good wheat crop for the same locality.

The Press talks to us about crawling through a small hole. The smallness of any hole can never equal the hole Charles Washington went through to escape explaining why he substituted the word wheat in the place of the word grain in our item. The pressure was so great that he pulled the hole in after him.

We learn that an attack on the women's crusade, at Waterloo, is intended. They [illegible] their armor for the fight— [illegible] gentlemen have been selected, because of their utter harmlessness where women are concerned, to join the procession. The names of our friends Lockhart, Boyer and Barns have been suggested. Correct.

The question of moving the county seat of Noble County is being agitated. Kendallville wants it and so does Ligonier.— We think it well located where it is, at the enterprising town of Albion, the geographical center. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad will let our neighbor out on that question with flying colors.

The beautiful spectacular Oratorio of "Belshazzar," King of Babylon, will be rendered with full chorus and orchestra at the Opera House in Fort Wayne, for three evenings next week, commencing March 17th. Mr. Butterfield, the author, will have direction of the piece, and it promises to be a grand affair.

Treasurer Ensley reports taxes coming in very slowly. The probabilities are that a greater portion of the taxes will remain unpaid when the time expires, April 20th. It would require the Treasurer's force almost day and night to take in and receipt for the taxes yet unpaid. Some will find it very annoying in the last days to find the office full and ahead of them, compelling them to wait for room when they could have had prompt attention a few days before.

Reub Williams says he exchanges with forty papers that are like the COURIER.— Then we say he exchanges with forty papers that are equally as good as the Indianian, with all its bloviating about its being such a splendid paper. But Reub stretched it one when he named forty as the number. The house we patronize publishes only thirty-nine of these papers and Reub must have included his own to make the forty, because he would not tell a lie. Now, Reuby, we guess you will leave us alone.

TIES WANTED.

Those who have had fears as to their not getting the money for ties for the Baltimore & Ohio road, will be glad to learn that a sufficient sum has been deposited with J. L. Davis, to meet present demands and more will be forthcoming when needed. So there is no danger of your not getting the cash down, as soon as your ties are on the line. Those intending to get out ties for this road should do so at once They will be needed in a few weeks, as track laying will commence early in the spring.

O. D. Willett, Esq. the enterprising marble dealer, of Kendallville, has been taking some heavy orders in this vicinity. Splendid monuments for John Somers, C. Cool, C. S. Hare and other deceased persons are to be erected this season, besides a large number of smaller ones for other parties. Mr. W. is doing this work at the lowest figures, and he has every facility for doing a first-class job. There is a great difference in the workmanship in this business and Mr. Willett seems to be taking the lead in the new and superior styles now being erected. Orders for tomb-stones, monuments, etc., will receive prompt attention at his hands, at the lowest prices.

The Fort Wayne Journal says the most satisfactory progress is being made for the grandest re-union of the ex-soldiers of the Union army ever held in Northern Ind.— Hundreds from the adjoining counties have signified their determination to attend. Reduced rates have been obtained on all the railroads leading to our city, the most eminent speakers have been secured and every preparation will be made to accommodate all soldiers and citizens from a distance, who will attend. The gentlemen having the matter in charge are among our most energetic and enterprising citizens, and what they cannot accomplish is not worth attempting by any other persons. A general invitation to attend the re-union is cordially extended to soldiers and citizens from this and surrounding counties.

Coffee A Sugar.

The celebrated Fruit House, at Fort Wayne is now selling this brand of sugar at 10 cents per pound, a late reduction of one half cent. It is by these popular prices that Capt White keeps up the popularity of his establishment, and we know of no one who deserves the large patronage he is receiving so well. A visit to the Fruit House will give you a good idea of a Donny Brook Fair.

Building Contractors.

The time will soon be here when the initiatory steps will be taken by many of our citizens, both in town and country, to erect houses, barns, and other buildings to meet the growing wants of the people. From the general preparation notice able in every locality, we believe a great many dwellings will be erected this year in Auburn and not a few in the country adjoining. The next important step after having decided to build is to engage a competent, experienced and wide-a-wake contractor to do the work. We have a goodly number of these in our midst, and a few that are not so good. It is important that the best be secured, and we can refer with safety to Mr.

THOMAS BALDOCK,

as one who possesses superior qualifications in this line of business. He has labored long and patiently, and what he knows has been acquired by a practical application of figures and facts to his own avocation. Mr. Baldock stands in the front rank as a carpenter, joiner and contractor and has of late years erected some very fine residences, and he can refer to them with pride as the best evidence of his workmanship. He has drawings on hand for several houses to be erected the coming season, and has engaged a large corps of hands to meet the demand made upon him this year.

Those who desire to have a house built without the great annoyance of having to watch over its progress, will find Baldock their man He will contract to build according to specifications, and deliver the keys to the owners without their having been once annoyed by its erection. He engages the best of hands, directs the work in person, endeavoring to give the utmost satisfaction We would advise those who want a house put up to employ good workmen. Cheap hands are generally a curse to all who employ them. Economy properly applied does not mean that the cheapest is the best, but vica versa, the best is the cheapest. A person investing $1000 in a building, ought to have the benefit of his money, not in a cheap,showy edifice but in a substantial, well proportioned and neatly built house, one of those that never fail to attract the eye of the passer-by, and win his favorable comment.

Mr. Baldock has done some very neat work in town, among which may be found the exquisitely beautiful office in the Odd Fellows' building, which all pronounce to be the best in town. These little things are like straws to the wind, and indicate who may be relied upon for a first-class job of work, at a reasonable figure. Never contract with a man to build you a house for less than it is worth. Many will be sure to find it out, and try to get even by doing poor work, especially if they are poor workmen. Engage a square, honest fair-minded man, at a reasonable compensation, and you will find things in the end as you expected. We believe the general impression as to Mr. Baldock, accords to him these traits of character. He is a gentleman possessed of much energy and perseverance, and will push all his enterprises to a speedy completion. Then he is an agreeable fellow to have around you full of humor, and good nature, he is always smiling and pleasant to everybody, and that is a feature in a man that we especially commend.

PROCLAMATION!

—OF—

JOHN HEBEL,

To all Whom it may Concern.

KNOW YE, That I have obtained a license from the Commissioners Court and am permitted to retail intoxicating liquors at my saloon in the town of Auburn. To the wife who has a drunkard for a husband, or a friend who is unfortunately dissipated, I say emphatically give me notice in person of such case or cases in which you are interested, and all such shall be excluded from my bar. Let mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers do likewise and their request will be regarded and always consider. It a great favor by so doing; this is simply the sum and substance of the whole matter. I am permitted to sell whiskey and other intoxicating liquors, and I want it distinctly understood that I have no desire to sell to drunkards and minors, or to the poor and destitute. I much prefer that they save their money and apply it where it legitimately belongs—to their families. There are gentlemen of honor and men of money, who sport, and who can afford it; with such only I desire to exchange. To this class our bar is open, and none others need apply. For gentlemen of our style I have a splendid saloon, and have constantly on hand a full stock of all kinds of wines and liquors, and the general favorite drinks, including lager beer, California, cata vine—extra fine, and universally acknowledged as healthy, and for the promotion of health. To those who wish to trade with me and can afford it, come and I will endeavor to treat you gentlemanly and courteously. Pay your cash, choose your drinks, and go about your business, and it's your business, and nobody else's business.

JOHN HEBEL.

THE Eastern railroad freight sheds in Boston have been burned. Loss, $120,000.

The West.

CHRISTOPHER RAFFERTY, who murdered Policeman O'Meara in Chicago, on the 5th of August, 1872, suffered the extreme penalty of the law at Waukegan, Ill., on Friday, the 27th ult. Rafferty, although a poor laboring man, [illegible], and, before the commission of the crime for which he has suffered an ignominous death, apparently almost friendless, had enlisted the sympathies of a number of friends, who exerted almost superhuman efforts and expended money without stint to save his neck from the halter. He was thrice tried and thrice sentenced to death. All attempts to secure a fourth trial having failed, Gov. Beveridge was besieged by friends of the condemned criminal, armed with petitions and letters praying for a commutation of the death sentence. They labored in vain. The Governor sternly refused to interfere, being fully convinced that Rafferty deserved death for the awful crime which he committed under such atrocious circumstances.

MR. ROYAL BUCK, of Red Willow, Neb., writes a letter denying that he has been killed, by the Indians, as reported, and denouncing the report of Indian depredation in his section as base fabrications; says no savages have been seen or heard thereabouts for months, and that all these scares are gotten up to turn emigration away.

It provides the machinery by which the United States District Courts may recover the jurisdiction in these, and, in fact, all civil and criminal cases which has been usurped in the Probate Courts, and limits the evidence necessary for conviction of polygamy to simple proof that the man and women live together avowedly as husband and wives. The bill provides that the wife or children of a drunkard may recover damages from the owner of the building in which the husband or father has procured his liquor; by Cannon, for the admission of Utah; by Butler, to revive the franking privilege; under its provisions all newspapers regularly printed, and not advertising sheets simply, shall go free of postage through the mails in the county where they are published, but shall not be delivered under the free-delivery system....A motion by Tyner to suspend the rules and pass the bill authorizing weekly newspapers to be sent by mail within the county of their publication, and exchanges between publishers, to be transmitted in mails free of postage, was defeated....The bill was passed extending to unnaturalized, enlisted men of the marine corps the same privileges, as to obtaining citizenship, as unnaturalized enlisted men now have. ....Sibleck offered a resolution, which was referred to the Ways and Means Committee, declaring it to be the sense of the House that any scheme for the improvement of the finances will be unsatisfactory and incomplete which shall not embrace a revision of the tariff in the interest of revenue, and for the emancipation of commerce from all unnecessary restrictions, and instructing the Committee of Ways and Means to enter upon and proceed with such a revision of the tariff....The bill abolishing the tax on matches and bank checks was under discussion in Committee of the Whole. Ellis H. Roberts replied to Dawes' retrenchment speech delivered some days ago.

TUESDAY, March 3.—Senate.—The Chaplain, in his opening prayer, invoked Providence to rebuke the giant demon Slander, now stalking forth and casting a shadow over all the earth, and that the hand of the the willful detractor, as it wrote, might be paralyzed....Fenton presented a petition of business men of New York city, representing $900,000,000, against a further inflation of the currency....The Centennial bill was again the bone of contention in the Senate. Several Senators aired their views, in which a strong sentiment adverse to a Government appropriation was developed, Scott (Pa.) alone championing the subsidy scheme.

House.—The bill amending the Homestead laws was passed....McCrary addressed the House in support of his bill to regulate inter-State railroads. The bill, he said, was simply declaratory of the common law in its prohibition of extortion and discrimination, and required nothing of the railroads that the common law did not require. He repeated his previous arguments about the powers of Congress over commerce between the States, and said that the building of a national road ought to be considered only as a last resource. Even if there were such a road, and if all had been done that were possible in improving the Mississippi and other water routes, such control of the railroads of the country as that proposed by his bill would still be necessary.

WEDNESDAY, March 4.—Senate.—A number of petitions and resolutions were presented and referred....The Liquor Traffic bill was again discussed without action....The Committee on Indian Affairs reported adversely on the claims of the citizens of Kansas for losses by Indian depredations, as set forth in the report of the Commission created by the Kansas Legislature in '71....Carpenter addressed the Senate in support of his bill for a new election in Louisiana. ..The Centennial bill was under discussion when the Senate adjourned.

House.—The Indian Appropriation bill was reported from the Appropriation Committee and referred to the Committee of the Whole....A memorial was presented from citizens of New York representing over $470,000,000 capital against an increase of currency....McCrary's Transportation bill was discussed, Arthur opposing it on constitutional grounds. Hurlbut spoke in favor of the measure.

THURSDAY, March 5.—Senate.—Wright presented a memorial from the Iowa Legislature for an increase in the volume of currency....The bill to amend the act to encourage the growth of timber on the Western prairies was passed....Dorsey introduced a bill to create the Territory of Oklahoma. ....Bogy introduced a bill for the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi river....The Liquor Commission bill was again discussed by the Senate. An amendment was adopted providing that the Commission it will establish shall not be wholly composed of prohibitionists or the advocates of total abstinence.

House.—Shanks called up his motion to reconsider the vote rejecting the bill for the free distribution of public documents. Cotton moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table. Rejected—yeas 102, nayes 124. The bill was then further considered. A motion was made to recommit the Butler bill, with unimportant modifications and instructions. Rejected—yeas, 45; nays, 183. The question then recurred on the passage of the bill as originally reported, and the bill was rejected—yeas, 111; nays, 120....The Virgina contested election case of Davis vs. Thomas was decided in favor of the latter. ....The remainder of the day was consumed by the House in considering the Legislative Appropriation bill.

It is Healthy to Marry?

The statistics of all countries show that marriage is promotive of longevity. Married people of both sexes live longer, because they are ordinarily more happy and prudently behaved than even bachelors and spinsters. Moral and sanitary science combine in demanding that wedlock shall be encouraged. It happens, however, that in all old settled communities there is a large preponderance of women. The female sex is less able than the male, to fight unaided the battle of life, and its miseries, in the event of failure are greater. The excess of unmarried women should be diminished, if philanthropy and sound political economy are capable of grappling with the evil. There are two ways of solving the difficulty. One is an equlization of the sexes by means of the aided emigration of surplus women to new settlements. Governor Slade's down east schoolmistresses married so rapidly after going West that their successors were put under $2,000 bonds to remain single for three years. In many cases this proved no obstacle to impetuous wooers, who paid the pecuniary forfeit that they might be united to the objects of their affection. The same thing is going on every day in New Zealand.—Hearth and Home.

The Last Census.

The total population of the country is about thirty-eight and a quarter millions.

Total number of deaths in the current census year, 492,263, or about 1,349 per diem.

March seems to be the most fatal month, leading all others by about 1,000.

March, April and May form the most fatal quarter, exceeding any other three consecutive months by over 13,000.

The births number 1,100,475, or about 3,000 per diem.

The blind number about 20,000.

The deaf and dumb about 16,000.

The idiotic about 24,000.

The insane about 37,000, nearly one-third of whom are of foreign birth.

Persons over 80 years of age number about 150,000.

Persons over 90 years of age number about 7,000.

Persons over 100 years of age number about 3,500.

Of those over 80 years, the females outnumber the males by about 12,000.

Of those over 90 years, the females are in excess by about 1,200.

Of those over 100 years, the females exceed the males by about 1,000.

Feeding at Washington Parties.

At 12 o'clock the doors of the supper-room are opened, and then the jam beggars description. You may take your choice, to be pushed or to push, and in either case to see plates of oysters, salads, and creams, with threatening spoons and forks, bristling through mid-air, glancing by your nose, or swimming down your back. I was never sure that we were not a civilized people till I contemplated my compatriots in the Washington supper room on a "festive occasion." There I have seen dignitaries whom the public believe to have enough to eat at home pushing toward a supper table as a cannibal might to his feast; and ladies renowed as "delicate," with piled-up plates of pickles, salads, fruits, and creams, cramming at a rate that would make a perfectly healthy woman sick abed for a week.—Washington Letter.

Ethics of Draw-Poker.

(Washington Letter.)

Ben Holliday, who is now here living in widowed quarters and looking after his railroads, is said to have raised the largest hands at poker known among gaming capitalists.

"He won fifty thousand dollars from me," said William Sharon; "but I was sick that day and had to let him take it. He can't beat me when I am feeling well."

It is very easy to corrupt public men at the poker-table, for a large percentage of them play—nearly as many, I should judge, as in the old days of slavery. Poker has arisen with the Northwestern domination, and the ease with which it is learned, the reckless chances it invites, and the rapid popularity it attains in every circle, make it an especial game for large operators who loiter on the threshold of politics. Make a public man poor and replace the money as a gift; or permit him to win and suppose he has wronged you, and he will try to work off the obligation with a might which he almost imputes righteous. These great, brawny operators know such things, and honor in the chief places is no barrier to their circumventing. The table, the fine and rapid woman, worldly talk with brilliancy in its delusiveness, the confidence that follows the wine-cup, and the cool study of a man over five cards when he bets beyond his measure—these are the steps by which hard men capture better ones. Bribery is seldom direct, wounding the feelings or pride of the recipient. It is extended, like the love which precedes ruin. It says:

"My friend, I admire you. To see you poor with your talents is a reproach to our country that you illustrate. I never yet met a man I could get so close to. If you ever feel the wolf too close to the door, I hope you will not wrong your friend be silence."

And it is done.

The Baptists.

The Baptist Year Book shows the following condition of the Baptists of the United States for 1873, as compared with 1872:

	1873.	1872.

Number of churches	20,260	19,720
Number of ministers	12,596	11,892

Total membership	1,633,839	1,588,231

About 350 associations failed to send their minutes. Allowing for the baptisms in these non-reporting associations, and remembering that 540 associations return 70,000 baptisms, it would certainly be safe to put the total number at 90,000 or upward.

B. B.

The lower House of Congress was engaged on Thursday in talking about the franking privilege. The saintly Butler had a chance to shy a stone at the press, and that was glory enough for one day. He said the country newspapers were sick of the abolition of the franking privilege, as he thought they would be. Nothing would please Butler so well as to have the press displeased. He hates the newspapers as the idolatrous King of Israel hated the prophets of Jehovah. He slanders the country press. A few of them might be willing to revive the whole thing for the sake of the postage on their own country circulation; but the great majority of the journals of the land, whether published in city or country, much prefer the present arrangement to a revival of the franking system. Gen. Butler knows that, if he knows anything about the matter.—Chicago Journal.

Triumph of American Pianos.

George Steck & Co., of New York, Receive the Gold Medal at the Vienna Exposition.

The Imperial Commission at Vienna have decided the question of merit in piano-forte manufacture by awarding the only Gold Medal within their gift to Messrs. George Steck & Co., of N. Y. This is a magnificent testimonial to the wonderful beauties of tone and workmanship in the Steck instruments, and will unquestionably add to their already well-established prestige. N. Y. Tribune.

The official letter is as follows:

VIENNA, Dec. 15, 1873.

"GEO. STECK, Esq.—SIR: I have the pleasure of informing you that I this day received from the Baron Schwarz-Sanborn a Gold Medal awarded to you for the Pianos exhibited by you at the Vienna Exposition."

A PROFESSOR OF FELONY.—A Professor of Felony was recently arrested in Cincinnati. His name was John Carney, and a manuscript was found on him entitled a "Lecture on Thieves," with a schedule of prices for 100 lessons, as follows: For highwaymen, $15; robbers, $20; footpads, $9; pickpockets, $90; shop-lifters, $200; panel thieves, $150; burglars, $500; confidence men, $1,000; garroters, $50; till-tappers, $25; counter-hoppers, $12; hotel thieves, $6; train robbers, $5,000. The Professor also proposed to show clerks the way to rob their employers and square it up on their books."

WHAT is the reason, says Punch, that many a young man goes about, especially at the balls and parties, with a single eye-glass stuck in his eyes? If he were short-sighted he would use a double one. It is not defective vision that he is afflicted with, but mental deficiency. Consciousness of folly makes him afraid of looking foolish, and the muscular contortions of countenance which attend the effort to retain the eye-glass in the orbit enable him to disguise his naturally vacant expression with a grimace.

Champion Wrestling-Match.

The San Francisco papers give full accounts of the wrestling-match between McLaughlin, of Detroit, and Whalen, of California, for $4,000 and the championship, which was recently contested in the Golden City in the presence of an immense and excited audience. The Call says:

The rival athletes have met, and California's champion went down before the superior prowess of the man from the East, or, as he is facetiously termed, "The Foreigner."

The agreement set forth that the match was to be for $2,000 a side, collar and elbow grips, falls best two in three, the contestants to wear short coats, light costume, and canvas shoes. The men were then introduced, and the disparity in size became at once apparent. McLaughlin looked a very giant in his white tights, beneath which the muscles played at every movement. Beside the gigantic frame of "The Foreigner" "Corduroy's" form seemed almost like that of a tall, slim boy. The two men were greeted with terrific shouts, which were continued for some time.

The noise having subsided, the men stepped forward, and after the preliminary hand-shaking the grip was taken, and the struggle commenced at precisely 9 o'clock. Whalen evidently perceived the great advantage of weight possessed by his opponent, and stood upon the defensive, endeavoring to draw out "The Foreigner's" tactics. The latter pressed "Corduroy" with apparently too great display and surplus movement, making frequent feints that seemed entirely unnecessary. Whalen remained perfectly cool, and it seemed as though the contest would become protracted, when, quick as a flash, McLaughlin lifted Whalen clear off the floor and threw him fair upon his back at the rear of the stage, and then, without changing his hold, lifted the fallen "Corduroy" upon his feet with but little effort. The fall was from right to left, perfectly clear and fair, and accomplished in four minutes and a half.

At 9:12 o'clock the men again stood breast to breast upon the boards. Both men maneuvered for some time, McLaughlin feinting with the right and left. Whalen had changed his tactics somewhat, and, while remaining on the defensive, dragged his opponent over the floor, watching every opportunity to arrive at the right moment. Finding that "Corduroy" seemed determined to draw him toward the sides of the stage, McLaughlin drove him clear back to the reporters' tables, and by mere main force threw him upon them. Cries of "Foul, foul," rang out from every portion of the house, and a storm of hisses was hurled at the scheming "Foreigner," whose evident object in throwing "Corduroy" among the itemizers was to worry him and render him less cool. Suddenly, and before the audience had a single warning, Whalen was again upon his back, in almost the same place as before, having been thrown by exactly the same process of lifting by main strength and throwing square and fair.

A Young Pompeii in California.

California boasts of a Pompeii on a small scale. It is the town of Meadow Lake, on the Sierra Nevada range, 8,000 feet above the level of the sea. The spot on which it is situated is full of gold, and in 1865 there was a great rush thither, 1,200,000 feet of the land being taken up in the summer of that year. By spring of the next year the Californians had become perfectly wild over the golden prospects of the region, and during May and June not less than 4,000 people found their way up there, and real estate went up like a kite, 60x80-foot lots bringing from $1,500 to $2,500. A stock board was formed, and the bulls and bears made the wilderness hideous with bidding for the stocks of the various companies. Over $3,000,000 was rocks, which never yielded more than $100,000, though they were full of gold, and a town of 600 houses was built. The trouble was with the ore, in which there were some substances that would not yield to the usual processes, and, in addition, the snow was not unfrequently twenty-five feet on a level, terrible storms being common as late as June. All at once the people saw that nature had played an awful practical joke on them, and they abandoned the town so precipitately that a recent visitor there, walking on snow shoes through the streets, on a level with the second stories, looking into the windows, saw the furniture standing just as the occupants had last used it.

Kill or Cure.

It is stated that an Irishman called upon a New York disciple of Æsculapius, and informed him that his wife was sick and required medical aid. The M. D. was willing to give his attention to the case, but desired the man to pay in advance or enter into an agreement to pay when his services were no longer needed.

"An' it'll kill or cure for twenty dollars?" said Pat.

"Yes."

Pat was satisfied, and left the M. D. to perform the contract. The woman died, and in due time the doctor presented his bill. Pat looked at it for a moment, and then asked:

"An' did ye cure her?"

"No," answered the physician.

"An' did ye kill her?"

This was a poser, and the M. D. discovered that Pat had caught him. The bill has not yet been settled.

THERE are yet 1,200,000,000 acres of public lands in the country that are unsurveyed, but after deducting swamp lands, deserts, mountains, railway and other grants, it is estimated that the whole amount of arable lands available for settlement cannot exceed 350 of 400 millions of acres. Last year nearly four millions of acres were taken by homestead settlers, and the estimate is that before a century elapses, all the arable lands of the country will be absorbed.

IT is found that hard water is more healthful than soft. The body needs some of the salts held in solution in hard water, and suffers if they are not supplied in some way. In England, the counties where hard water abounds are more healthy than those where soft water is used. Soft water acts on leaden pipes more powerfully than hard, and induces danger.

THE PLOW QUESTION.

"Plowholder" writes to the Chicago Tribune from Dwight: On the 29th of December, the granges of Livingston county held a meeting at Odell, and then elected a County Purchasing Agent. They also appointed a Subordinate Agent for each grange in the county, to co-operate with the County Agent. On the 20th of January we held a meeting of all the Purchasing Agents in the county, and were then informed of the following facts, which clearly show that the Plow-Ring which resolved so vehemently "not to sell to farmers, except through their agents," and bound themselves by a $3,000 bond, is "busted:"

The facts are substantially as follow: A short time ago, one of the members of this Plow-Ring came to Pontiac, and, as usual, went to their regular customers to make arrangements with them for the sale of their plows for the coming season. Much to the surprise of the plow-manufacturer, the middleman refused to buy his plows. "Why is this thus?" the manufacturer asked. The middleman answered: "The Grangers in this county have such a complete system for purchasing their own plows, independent of you, that I could not sell a single one; and you had better go and see the County Purchasing Agent, and very soon opened negotiations with him, with the following results: "We want to sell our plows to you." "But," replied the Purchasing Agent, "I thought you were under bonds not to sell to farmers except through your agents." "So we are; and are you not an agent, and the largest agent in the county?" "Yes." "Very well, there is our list of prices, and they are the same as we sell to our regular agents; and, as I consider you are a regular one, I shall make you our agent for Livingston county."

Now, we are able to buy a $22 plow for $16.30.

—The following proclamation of the Patrons of the Seventh (Ill.) Congressional District is being indorsed by the granges all over Illinois:

We, the farmers of the Seventh Congressional District, in mass convention assembled, having learned through the papers and other reliable sources, that 23 prominent firms manufacturing agricultural implements in this and adjoining States, are making efforts to monopolize the selling of farm implements and machinery, by entering into a formal and binding contract not to sell agricultural machinery of any kind to farmers at less than their retail prices; and whereas we acknowledge their right, as American citizens, to legally and peacefully measure their strength with the class of citizens from whose liberal and continued patronage they have accumulated their enormous wealth and power; now, therefore, we, the farmers of the Seventh Congressional District, believing that the power which creates can destroy, do hereby notify and warn those 23 firms boldly striving to force the agricultural classes of the West to buy their wares at their own prices, that we will give them twenty days from this date to recede from this, their unwise warfare against their former patrons. And we further declare that such of said 23 firms as stubbornly refuse to heed this warning, and fail to notify in writing within twenty days, the President of the nearest farmers' club, or the Master of the nearest grange, that they will sell to us for cash, and wholesale rates and discounts, we will hereafter fight them with their own weapons, viz.: Combination, and pledging ourselves not to buy of them or their agents, hereafter, at any price, however cheap; and we respectfully ask every farmers' club to pass this or similar resolutions for their guidance; and recommend that they be rigidly adhere to and enforced, for the good and general benefit of the producer.

MACON COUNTY.

Iowa.

PLATFORM OF THE ANTI-MONOPOLISTS.

The following is the platform unanimously adopted by the Anti-Monopolists of Iowa, in convention at Des Moines:

In order to define our position, we, in convention assembled, submit to a candid public as a basis of our political action, the following resolutions:

First—That the primary object of a free republican government is the proper protection of persons and property, and that fewer and simpler laws faithfully administered will best secure this end.

Second—That we are in favor of political reform, and to that end we demand honesty, economy, and purity in official life.

Third—That we repudiate the doctrine that "To the victor belong the spoils," but instead thereof we are in favor of a true system of civil-service reform, making honesty and capacity the only valid claims for public employment.

Fourth—That in a protective tariff we recognize a monopoly, and we are therefore opposed to it, and that we demand free iron, steel, salt, lumber, and woolen fabrics, and that a tariff on importations is justifiable for revenue purposes only.

Fifth—That all corporations are subject to legislative control; that those created by Congress should be restricted and controlled by Congress, and that those under State laws should be subject to the control of the State creating them; that while we recognize the value of railroads, and will in all proper ways encourage their construction, yet while enjoying valuable franchises, they should bear their full burden of taxation, and receive on the capital invested no more than a just and lawful interest, and should charge only a just and equitable rate for transportation and travel.

Sixth—That we favor such modifications of our banking system as will extend its benefits to the whole people, and thus destroy a monopoly now enjoyed by a favored few.

Seventh—That we are opposed to all grants of lands to railroads or other corporations, and believe that what is left of the public domain should be held sacred for the actual settler.

Eighth—That the pretended repeal of the Back Salary law, after the appropriation of the grab, both before and after services performed by many members of Congress, and the failure to apply to the President, is a gross fraud upon the public, and nothing short of an unqualified repeal will satisfy the demands of the people.

Ninth—That we deny the alleged necessity of a State Printer and Binder, or any party organ supported by public patronage, and demand that all public work, both State and county, be let by contract to the lowest responsible bidder.

Tenth—That the election of over sixty members of the General Assembly, with an incomplete organization, is a complete demonstration of the justice of our cause, and a promise of its early triumph in the State and nation.

Eleventh—That in the Tammany steal, the Credit Mobilier, the Congressional salary swindle, and official embezzlements, and the hundreds of other combinations, steals, frauds, and swindles by which the Democratic and Republican legislators, Congressmen, and officeholders have enriched themselves, defrauded the country, and impoverished the people, we find the necessity of independent action and the importance of united effort, and cordially invite all men, of whatever calling, business, trade, or vocation, regardless of past political views, to join us in removing the evils that so seriously affect us all.

THE PATRONS IN MUSCATINE COUNTY.

A letter from Muscatine says: "As the farmers' movement in this State started from this place, and we have generally tried to keep up to the spirit of the age, our present position is pretty well in advance of most other points. The grange movement is well supported in this county, and carried forward with a good deal of spirit. We have, I believe, three co-operative stores in this county, all doing well, and talk of starting others. We have organized a Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and are organizing an Agricultural-Implement Manufactory with a capital of $50,000. The Patrons are gaining ground all the time. Many that held back at first are now coming into the Grange. We hold a good many open granges, which are generally very well attended; and, as the aims and objects of the Patrons are laid before the public, they learn that it is a common interest, and readily fall into the movement. Our greatest need is a good class of papers to advocate our cause, as most of the local press do not look on the movement with much favor, as they are fearful of losing the advertising patronage, or are hired tools of the Government. Papers of an independent character are what we need, and should be more generally patronized."

"NOW, BY ST. PAUL, THE WORK GOES BRAVELY ON."

Extract from a letter to the Western Rural from Watertown, Mich.:

One thing which the masses of the people have long stood in need of is emancipation. I mean emancipation from the thraldom of party; and I now have a strong hope that it is coming. The Patrons of Hubandry are taking root and gaining strength on every hand—and of them it may be said in the language of Shakespeare,

Hang out our banners on the outward walls,
The cry is, "Still they come."

We have no granges in this vicinity as yet, but we can view the movement in the distance and exclaim—

Now, by Saint Paul, the work goes bravely on.

Let the farmers be united and harmonious. Let them conquer that jealousy which they have so long cherished for one another. Let them feel and know that their unity of interests demands unity of action. When they commence breaking the idols, let them not smite one and spare another—but, if railroad monopolies are to come down, let tariff monopolies and manufacturing combinations share the same fate.

Nor should they stop here. They should neither give sleep to their eyes nor slumber to their eyelids until they have cleansed the Augean Stables of our national capital, and every Mobilier man and salary stealer has shared the fate of Tweed. Let the rulers of the people be made to understand that they can't pull the wool over the eyes of the farmers the ninety-ninth time, and have it all hushed up and overlooked for the sake of "our party." Let them know that honesty and integrity, though dressed in homespun, will be appreciated in high places as well as low. Let parents teach their children, and priests their congregations the truth of that old-fashioned motto, "An honest man's the noblest work of God."

THE ORDER GROWING.

THE GRANGERS VS. PLOW-MAKERS.

Resolved, That we will let those plow-firms known as the "Black List" sell their plows to their agents, and let their agents use them; and we will not purchase from their agents or them either.

Missouri.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

The following is the declaration of principles adopted by the Missouri State Grange, recently in session at Boonville:

First—That we fully indorse and approve the declaration of principles adopted at the late meeting of the National Grange at St. Louis.

Second—That, as cultivators of the soil, we have been too long governed and controlled by the great moneyed power of the land, and by "rings" who are against us, simply because we have been ignorant of our own strength in our defense, or have wasted it wrangling with each other.

Third—That, as retrenchment and reform is our motto, as true Patrons we should begin at home, and while we demand, as we have the right to, that our legislators and rulers shall be economical in the expenditure of public money, let us not be prodigal in the expenditure of our private means. While we condemn the extravagance of public officials and complain of wrongs inflicted upon us by those whom we have intrusted with power, let us not still further wrong ourselves and families by living above our income, and involving ourselves in debt, thus sacrificing peace, comfort and independence at the shrine of fashion and show.

Fourth—That we invite the hearty support and co-operation of the sisters of our order in our reformatory movement; that woman's true position is the God-given and Divinely sanctioned one of a helpmeet to man; therefore her place is by her side. Here is a high and noble position, and, if rightly improved, will rear to her memory monuments more durable than marble, and leave an inheritance to those that will come after her more to be prized than wealth and honors.

Fifth—That in a republican government all power is vested in the hands of the people, and in ours a majority of the people belong to the producing classes; yet the power and strength of these classes have been used by a less numerous and more unscrupulous class for the advancement of their own selfish purposes.

Sixth—That, although ours is not a political organization, and especially ignores political or partisan questions, yet we call upon our representatives in Congress and State Legislature to listen to the appeal of more than 100,000 Patrons of Missouri to economize the resources of the Government, and to stop the currents of extravagance and corruption, which have brought us to the very verge of bankruptcy and ruin.

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting of Grangers in Sterling, Johnson county:

WHEREAS, Certain manufacturers of farming implements, known as the "Black List," did, in convention at Chicago, "resolve that they would sell no plows to Farmers' clubs or granges except at retail prices;" therefore,

Nebraska.

THE PLOW MONOPOLY.

Resolved, That we, the members of Sterling Grange, will purchase no plows or other agricultural implements of said manufacturers until they will sell to us at wholesale prices.

THE YEOMANRY MOVING.

The Kansas farmers are moving. A meeting was held in Topeka, on the 20th of February, to take the initial steps toward the organization of a new political party. It was called under the auspices of the Farmers' Co-operative Society, and the President of that society presided. A committee reported a declaration of principles, the leading features of which were denunciation of the national banking system, favoring a tariff for revenue only, a general indictment of existing parties, and favoring an entirely new party. An Executive Committee of one from each judicial district was appointed to call a State convention, and take all necessary steps to perfect the new organization.

MEETING OF THE STATE GRANGE.

The State Grange of Colorado Patrons of Husbandry has had a very interesting session at Boulder City. A full organization was perfected, with J. Q. Tenney as Worthy Master. The amendments proposed by the National Grange to its constitution were adopted. It was decided to establish a Co-operative Association similar to those in vogue in the Western States, and thus enable farmers to buy implements and other articles at something approximating cost. It is to be a stock association, divided into 1,000 shares at $25 each, and will be mutual in its character.

Miscellaneous.

GOOD AS WHEAT.

The following are the words of a famous Granger song entitled "Good as Wheat." The song is by "Old Rye," and there is many a Granger who, if he ever hears the song once, will take a "little Old Rye" in his'n.

Oh! what is all this noise about,
And all this great commotion?
The quivering leaves are on the breeze
Like ships upon the ocean.
The gathering storm has broke at last,
The tide is rising higher,
While plowman bold has taken hold;
The prairies are on fire.

CHORUS—

Then plow and sow, and reap and mow,
And raise the corn to fill the barn,
While on to camp and field we tramp,
"Good as wheat" for the Grangers.

The soil is ours, we till the land,
And we are the true producers;
No middle man can thwart our plan,
We scorn our wild traducers;
Our hands are seared with honest toil,
While skies are bright above us,
And conscience clear we onward steer,
While aiding those who love us.

CHORUS—

Then fill our ranks with honest hearts,
With steady handed yeomen,
While men of place with Janus face
We hold among our foemen;
Monopolies must surely fall
Before our gathering forces.
Our purpose true will lead us through
Despite their wicked courses.

THE GRANGERS' DEMAND—AN OPEN LETTER.

To Transportation Companies, Common Carriers, Manufacturers, Patentees, Middlemen, etc:

GENTLEMEN; We, the Grangers, extend to you the right hand of friendship, and assure you that we are, in point of fact, your best friends. We simply ask that we may live, without which you cannot thrive; and, vice versa, we desire that you may live, that we may thrive. We believe that our best interests are inseperable from yours. We wish to see you stand in that one relation only which, by any sound theory of political economy, you can ever hold toward us, as we believe. And, to that end, we demand, in the name of liberty, justice, and the the laboring men of the whole nation, that you shall cease to be the arrogant, aggressive, extortionate masters of the people, and become their thrifty, well-kept, and well-paid servants. And we assure you that, at whatever cost it may be, we will ultimately accept of nothing less.

ELGIN, ILL. E. RAYMOND.

A GRANGE STRAW.

The influence of the Grangers in favor of cheap transportation seems to be fell at least by the railroad monopolies. The price per carload of cattle from Chicago to New York is said to have been reduced from $135 to $80, Buffalo to Albany from $50 to $35, Buffalo to New York from $80 to $45. It is evident that the Grangers are gradually becoming a power in the land.

THE RIGHTS OF MOSQUITOES.—A tender-hearted little girl came in from the woods, and showed a face covered with mosquito-bites. "Why did you not drive them away?" said the mother. "They would not go," said the child. "Why did you not kill them?" "It would not have been right," was the answer. "But I have seen you kill them at home," urged the surprised mother. "Yes, mamma," argued the child, firmly, "if they come into my house and bite me, I kill them; but if I go into the woods, that is their house, and I have no right to kill them."

Disraeli's Victory.

The change of Government through which Great Britain is now passing, although attended by many picturesque and exciting circumstances, is not likely to be followed by any important or far-reaching consequences. The Liberal party has suffered a great defeat. The Liberal leader has been reduced, perhaps permanently, to the ranks. But it is difficult to see in what the liberal tendencies of England have met with any serious check. The questions upon which this canvass was conducted had little deep political significance. Mr. Gladstone went before the country standing upon the surplus in the Treasury and promising the abolition of the income tax. He asked from the people a repetition of the vote of confidence in his Government which he had recently received from the House of Commons, and the voters failed to give it. This puts the Conservatives for the time being into power, but they do not assume the responsibilities of the administration burdened with any commitments or definite policy. Thousands of people voted against the Liberal candidates merely because they were tired of Mr. Gladstone. Ordinary human nature is so constituted that the contemplation of high moral excellence excites an emotion not entirely devoid of fatigue. Mr. Gladstone was too serious and too irreproachable to serve forever as a popular leader in a free nation. But his defeat does not prove that the party which has overthrown him has won a permanent victory. They defeated him once before, within a year. But the accidental character of the defeat was so evident that Mr. Disraeli expressly refused to take up the reins he had struck from the hands of the great Liberal. He knew that he could not govern with the present Parliament, and he was clearly not ready to appeal to the country. When Parliament was dissolved the act was denounced as a trick of Gladstone's, and the general feeling of resentment against him no doubt contributed somewhat to his defeat.—New York Tribune.

Religious Items.

THE Baptists in New Hampshire have eighty-five churches, containing an aggregate membership of 8,096.

THE General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South is to convene in Louisville, Ky., in May next.

THE church choirs in Boston are said to cost the sum of $142,000 annually, a sum sufficient to comfortably support 100 missionaries.

THE church property in the city of New York is valued at $48,000,000. The church buildings of the various denominations number 359.

THE statistics of the Texas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church show a net increase for the last year of 716 members and eleven churches.

THE Baptist Missionary Union is now in the last quarter of the financial year, and unless $168,000 are raised before April 1, the treasury will be in debt.

THE salaries of the Bishops in the Methodist Episcopal Church aggregate the sum of $50,000 per annum, with the addition of about $5,000 for traveling expenses.

THE Baptists of Chicago have issued a circular to "The Baptists of the World," appealing for help to restore their churches and colleges, destroyed by the fire. The denominational property destroyed by the conflagration is estimated at $329,000.

REV. DR. STRATTON, of the Methodist Church, has been talking temperance statistics on the largest scale. Clergymen cost $12,000,000 yearly; criminals, $40,000,000 (rather a low estimate if we include rings); lawyers, $80,000,000; intoxicating drinks, $700,000,000. The city of New York invests $65,000,000 in manufactures, $90,000,000 in seventy-one banks, and $200,000,000 in the liquor business.

A Scene in the Women's War.

Among the many heart-touching incidents of the women's temperance movement reported in the daily papers from scores of towns in Ohio, we cut the following from a recent letter in the Cincinnati Gazette, representing a scene in Hillsboro: "Turning a corner on last Saturday afternoon, I came unexpectedly upon some fifty women kneeling on the pavement and stone steps before this door. A daughter of a former Governor of Ohio was leading in prayer. Surrounding her were the mothers, wives and daughters of former Congressmen and legislators, of our lawyers, physicians, bankers, ministers and leading men of all kinds. Indeed, there were gathered there representatives from nearly every household in the town. The day was bitterly cold. A piercing north wind swept the streets, piercing us all to the bone. The plaintive, tender, earnest tones of that pleading wife and mother arose on the blast, and were carried to every heart within their reach. Passers-by uncovered their heads, for the place whereon they trod was holy ground. They eyes of hardened men filled with tears, and many turned away, saying they could not bear to look on such a sight. Then the voice of prayer was hushed, the women arose and began to sing softly a sweet hymn—some old familiar words and tune—such as our mothers sang to us in childhood's days. We thought, can mortal man resist such efforts? The effect upon the spectators is indescribable. No sneer is heard—scarcely a light word is spoken. The spirit of devotion is abroad, and those who would scorn to pray themselves, yet feel that here is something which they must at least respect."

Another Prayer Gauge.

It is related that in a certain town in the northern part of Maine the people were holding a meeting, when the pastor remarked that if any present had relatives or friends in distant lands prayers would be offered in their behalf. No sooner was the sentence complete than a simple-looking individual arose and thus addressed the pastor: "I would like you to pray for my brother. He went two weeks ago, and I haven't heard from him since. I don't know jest where he is, but you need not pray below Bangor."

The Women's Crusade.

When the women of Ohio began their assault upon the liquor shops, almost everybody supposed the movement would be nothing more than the fleeting excitement of an hour. The ladies would parade the street, and assemble in the churches, and sing hymns, and raise their voices in prayer; would carry about the pledge for signatures, and thrust the pencil into trembling and beery hands; would keep little towns and villages in turmoil for a few days, and exact all sorts of impossible promises from unwilling sinners; but we were not to expect a practical result from such extraordinary and irregular proceedings. Even if the women were stout enough of heart to withstand the jeers, and insults, and brutal remaks that would certainly assail them, and vigorous enough in body to endure the long watch of prayer, hour after hour, day after day, from early morn till the night was far spent, the time must soon come when the spiritual excitement that inspired the crusade would die away, to be followed by the inevitable reaction. But two months have now passed, and the women are more earnest than ever. Driven out of the bar-rooms they kneel in the muddy streets; which may be cleaner after all than sanded floors bestrewn with the refuse of conviviality. They mind neither the cold winds nor the pelting rain. All manner of engines of defense have been brought up against them without avail. Here an unregenerate saloon-keepers throws snuff into the midst of the praying band. There an irate ruffian assaults them with a poker. Vulgar caricatures are displayed in the shop windows. Coarse jests are heard as the crusaders march through the streets. The law is invoked to prevent trespass upon private premises and interference with legal occupations; and in this part of the defense it is important to notice that the wholesale liquor dealers are helping the rum-shop keepers with money. Nevertheless the crusade goes on, and the roll of victory lengthens every day.

It is apparent that we have all underrated the strength of a woman's enthusiasm and devotion. The generous and Christian impulses are something more than outbursts of sentiment; they are important forces in the government of society. If the Ohio temperance movement can be guided with reasonable discretion, it may regenerate the whole region. It will not, of course, destroy intemperance, and probably it will not permanently check the sale of liquor; but it may make drinking more disreputable, and save thousands of men whose case is not yet hopeless.—New York Tribune.

A Lunatic Ball.

In the recent annual ball at the Lunatic Asylum at New Haven, Ct., twenty couples took the floor, ranged in two lines, facing each other, and stood still in profound silence waiting the music. In this party the strangeness of the performers was most apparent. The men wore a look upon their faces of such resolution as one would expect on that of a brave man brought face to face with some terrible danger. The women were more wandering in their glances; but nearly all were serious, too. The music burst forth, and a simultaneous movement followed; all sorts of movements, some cultivated steps, but for the most part a mere violent shuffling exercise. Directly they all seemed to have forgotten that they had partners, and settled down into dancing. There was some peculiarity about every individual, but in every one was observable a sort of ecstacy. One girl, with wild, dark eyes, and her black hair hanging loosely around her neck, would occasionally pause, as if trying to recollect where she had acted such a part in other scenes, but, glancing at the company all engaged around her, she would resume her motions. Some of them kept their gaze fixed on the ceiling, turning neither to the right nor to the left; others kept a watch upon their feet, which, to their bewildered minds, were perhaps going sadly astray. Very soon the organization lost shape; the original partners had wandered hopelessly away from each other. But, with instinctive gallantry on one side, and gentle acquiescence on the other, the men swung and twirled whichever lady happened to be within reach at the moment when they thought the music indicated "swing your partner."

The Siamese Twins—Two Distinct Organizations.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, in giving an account of the autopsy of the Siamese twins, says: The livers of the twain were upon opposite sides, and laid in close connection. By the natural law of homologous union the positions of the hearts are the same. Their apexes incline toward each other, but, unlike the livers, they could never have been one and the same, or, of course, both would have died in the same hour. The heart of Eng is upon the right side, and the heart of Chang is upon the left; hence that of one is strangely and abnormally placed. Fluid injected into the heart, of one failed to find its way to the heart of the other, as was the case when the livers, located near the bond of union, were operated upon. This is the last fact which establishes the individuality of each. In life their sympathies, passions, emotions, inclinations, and personal habits were decidedly and sadly estrained, and this circumstance alone, without any keen anatomical scrutiny, would have shown the individualty of their heart and brain. Two individuals brought from different extremes of the world could have passed through the number of years allotted to the twins with less disagreement and conflict than these two incongruous, unsympathetic children, forced constantly to bear each other's burdens and complaints.

PARSON BROWNLOW.—This noted Senator attracts considerable attention from the Senate galleries. He never speaks, nor moves, nor calls a page, nor smiles, nor talks to his neighbor. Attendants carry him to his seat at 12 and back to his solitary home at 5. There he sits during the long hours, silent and ghost-like, twitching perpetually with a terrible palsy.

THE GHOST THAT JIM SAW.

([illegible])

Why, as to that—said the engineer—
Ghosts ain't things we are apt to fear,
Spirits don't fool with levers much,
And throttle-valves don't take to such;
And as for Jim—
What happened to him
Was one-half fact and the other half whim!

Running one night on the line, he saw;
A house—as plain as the moral law—
Just by the moonlit bank, and thence
Came a drunken man with no more sense
Than to drop on the rail,
Flat as a bail,
As Jim drove by with the midnight mail.

Down went the patents. Steam reversed.
Too late! for there came a "thud." Jim cursed,
As his fireman, there in the cab with him,
Kinder stared in the face of Jim,
And says, "What now?"
Says Jim, "What now!
I've just run over a man—that's how!"

The fireman stared at Jim. They ran
Back, but they never found house nor man—
Nary a shadow within a mile.
Jim turned pale, but he tried to smile,
Then on he tore,
Ten miles or more,
In quicker time than he'd made afore.

Would you believe it!—the very next night
Up rose that house in the moonlit glare;
Out comes the chap and drops as before.
Down goes the brakes, and the rest encore—
And so, in fact,
Each night that act
Occurred, till folks swore Jim was cracked.

Humph! Let me see; it's a year now, most,
That I met Jim, East, and said, "How's your ghost?"
"Gone," says Jim; "and more, it's plain
That ghost don't trouble me again;
I thought I shook
That ghost when I took
A place on an Eastern line—but look:

What should I meet the first trip out,
But that very house that we talked about,
And that self-same man! "Well," says I, "I guess
It's time to stop this yer foolishness,"
So I crammed on steam,
When there came a scream
From my fireman—and that broke my dream—

"You've killed somebody!" Says I, "Not much;
I've been thar often and thar ain't no such,
And now I'll prove it." Back we ran,
And darn my skin—but thar was a man
On the rail, dead,
Smashed in the head—
Now I call that meanness!" That's all Jim said.

A Novel Theater.

A visitor of the Chinese theater, in San Francisco, does not seem to be particularly charmed by the Mongolian drama. He says: "Battle scenes are stock ingredient of the Chinese drama, and are conducted on a principle totally at variance with all our modern ideas of warfare. It is no uncommon feat for the hero to dismiss his army, and, single-handed, conquer the enemy, merely using his soldiers as a pursuing force. The stage, which is limited, in that the orchestra occupy nearly the whole of it, is merely a platform flanked by the walls of the house, lit up by some four or five footlights and two attenuated gas-pipes pendant on either side of the house, which terminate in numerous gas jets far more useful than ornamental. In the rear a screen, festooned, with spears, armor musical instruments, and diabolical characters, serves as a partition to veil the dressing-rooms and green room from the eye of the casual observer, and two curtained doors are the means of exit and entrance. It has never been our misfortune to hear the overture, if one be played, but judging by the descriptive music and singing during the progress of the play, which would make an excellent accompaniment for wandering minstrel cats, nothing has been lost."

THE VACANT CHAIR.

A Southwestern Sketch.

BY S. M. A. C.

It all happened, when I was younger than at present, at the McFadden's party. They were neighbors of my Cousin Ned, to whom I was paying a visit. McFadden, pere had a store and religion; to each of which he was equally and separately devoted. He never mixed the Bible with his business. It might have seemed to him profanation; I don't know about that. People said his future state would depend upon where death found him; if in the store for once the devil would get his due; while if at church or class not Lucifer and all his angels could keep him out of Heaven. But then people are so malicious.

I hate a purposeless digression, and have given these facts as essential to a proper understanding of what follows. If I had not, how could you realize what a party at McFadden's meant? The bare mention of dancing gave them the horrors, and cards were worse than the abomination of desolation. They did play the brain exhausting game of dominoes, and Miss McFadden was, in virtue of her city education, too intellectual for "Snap," "Oats, Peas, Beans, and Barley," "Steal Partners or anything of that kind. Miss McFadden wasn't by any means sole daughter of the house and heart. "On the contrary quite the reverse," she was one of eight, whereof seven still withered on the parent stem. I merely mention the fact, without in any way connecting it with the other fact that one with eligible masculine connections, near or remote, was an object of interest to the McFadden family—or, at least, I suppose so, from the fervent inquiries after my brotrer Will's health and my Cousin Jack's whereabouts.

It was a sit-down conversation party. We were the last comers, and on entering the parlor an apprehensive shiver shot down my spine. Twenty-one chairs made a huge semicircle about a blazing fire, and eighteen of them were filled by women. I don't know if there was a paralyzing influence about the place, but it was evident that none had gone further than was necessary to reach a seat, for the unoccupied ones were the length of semicircle from the door, which subjected cousin Fan and me to a raking cross-fire of eyes ere we, too, fell into position—a circumstance which pleased me much, as my dress and hair were thoroughly comme il faut, and, besides of a style new to that region.

Cousin Fan took the chair besides the last woman and I had the one next to hers, which left between me and the jam the vacant chair whose strange eventful history I propose to relate.

After the stir of our entrance had subsided I looked about with interest. The gentlemen twenty-five in number —were mainly gathered in disconsolate, shivering groups in the outer corners of the room. Some half a dozen intrepid souls, moved by chivilrous devotion, or the cold, were inside the charmed circle, painfully stooping, or more painfully kneeling, or most painfully—their boots were tight—"squatting," beside as many women, whose faces of delight made a strong contrast with the listless ennui of their less fortunate neighbors. I thought, if those who are well know are thus beauless, I, a total stranger, can only expect to look on in this Vienna; but hardly had this reflection shaped when Cousin Ned leaned over me and presented "his friend, Mr. Long, one of our solid men." Now, I am rather proud of my distingue style of receiving strangers, but I defy the Graces themselves to make a respectable obeisance over the back of a rocking-chair; and I was conscious that the bob of my head on this occasion was totally unworthy that distinguished member.

Mr. Long was not long at all, being exactly five feet two inches high; but his solidity could not be questioned. His head might have served as a model for all cabbage of the flat Dutch persuasion; his nose was of the snubbiest, his fingers stubby, and he had a general overfed look of having been melted and run into his clothes. In character he was affirmative, even of negatives, and bore witness with equal heartiness were you accused of being an angel or fool. He managed to squeeze through the circle, and the vacant chair received its first occupant.

"We've had a beautiful day," he said.

"Splendid," I answered, with enthusiasm.

"It will rain about to-morrow."

"Oh, I hope not."

"Ned's your cousin, ain't he?"

"My mother's nephew."

"You don't live about here?"

"No; Kent is my county."

"Anywhere close to Belleville?"

"Seven miles out on the Columbus road."

"How pretty the girls look to-night."

"Lamplight becomes most women."

"Ours are pretty all the time."

"I'm glad to hear it."

"Do you play?—on the piano, I mean."

"All my music is in my soul. My hearers, not myself, are 'saddest when I sing.'"

"Ah! I—I didn't quite hear——"

"It's not worth repeating."

"Do you know I have heard of you—a heap?"

"Indeed! What? Nothing ill, I hope."

"No. Mighty good, all of it."

"Time's up, Tom," said Ned, the inexorable. "Do your best, Bob, and don't let the grass grow under your feet. There are others coming."

Mr. Breeze's name was a striking example of the eternal fitness of things. He was dressed in a full suit of light gray, was very short and slight with abundant hair and beard the color and texture of corn-silk; with an air and manners generally suggestive of gossamers. He spoke in a way that had the effect of a combined lisp, drawl, and stutter without really being either. With a profound bow he seated himself and said:

"I have envied Ned his relatives, Miss Gay, since he told me you was one of the number."

"You do me proud," I murmured with a mock obeisance.

"Now don't laugh at me you quite chill my enthusiasm."

"Oh, well, you can warm it in tomorrow's sunshine"——"Or the light of your eyes," I would have answered in his place but he didn't seem to think of it—and perhaps, too, he had a regard for truth; so instead he said:

"The weather is beautiful."

"Lovely," I answered, thinking the while what great minds I had fallen among, if, as I've been told they—the great minds—have a knack of running in the same channels.

"It will not last."

"So says Mr. Long. Au contrarie, Mr. Lee says it will; and I never risk my reputation by decision where such doctors disagree."

"I have heard from Colonel Blanton that you never commit yourself."

"Colonel Blanton spoke, then, of what he did not know."

"Now, Miss Gay, don't deny flirting with the Colonel. It has given you quite a celebrity hereabout."

"I wonder how people hear so much. Colonel Blanton, indeed! I would as soon think of flirting with my grandfather."

"He! he! I must tell him that. Come, the piano is vacant; pray give us some music."

"I don't play anything—not even second fiddle."

"You don't? I am surprised. You have the eyes of a born musician. Don't you dance?"

Whenever I can. I think the sight of this company's inaction is enough to convert to its advocacy its stoutest opponents."

"Our host would not agree with you. Is yours a dancing neighborhood?"

"Very much so."

"You live near Bellville?"

"Not very. But I am there a good deal."

"I'm told it is a charming town."

"I find it so."

"I must pay Kent a visit some time. Your post-office is ——"

"Echo."

"What a romantic name! Is there any story about it?"

"None but an echo between two hills that repeats every noise."

"The noise, I repeat, is—'Get out of that chair, Bob,'" said Cousin Ned, at my elbow. "Mr. Heywood, Miss Gay. Sit down, Frank; your'e elected for the next fifteen minutes."

Mr. Heywood was born a politician and lawyer, consequently he did his best to look both, with a success far from remarkable. For three generations his father held offices of trust, profit, and honor in the gift of the people. Undeniably they were popular men. Nearly one fourth of the county were made up of Heywood Smiths, or John Heywood Joneses, or Frank Heywood Browns. Mr. Frank Heywood was tall and slim, with a faultless evening suit, and an air that aimed to be judicial, and succeeded exactly in being owlish. He was one of the courageous few I have mentioned as talking to the ladies, and had made the circuit with the patience of a martyr and the impartiality of death itself; for each—however long or short, fat or thin—he saw might some day influence a vote, and the future great man builded secure from the foundation. He opened the campaign with parliamentary caution: "Miss Gay, I trust you will pardon a remark that you have doubtless heard many times to-night—that is, what a very pleasant party we are enjoying."

I looked at him keenly, but no "sarkaszum" was in his eye. Evidently he meant what he said, if he did not feel it, so I answered readily, "I have have heard it before, but from its present source it does not need the charm of novelty. Furthermore, in the outset of our acquaintance, let me take the initiative by telling you that I have heard of you, that you are very intelligent, and I want you to prove it by not asking me where I live or making a remark on the weather."

"I will do it, certainly. In such a scene, and such a presence, I never resort to geographical or meterological observations. Is it all in my eyes, or do the ladies look more than usually charming to-night?"

"A stranger cannot decide. Bishop Berkeley to the contrary notwithstanding, I always believe my eyes."

"If you were a lawyer you would soon lose faith in them. Circumstancial evidence is the hardest sort to deal with, and the most unreliable."

"I wish I could be one. The whereases and the wherefores, and law terms generally, have a facination for me."

"I presume they would lose it when you had to study them out. We have to learn the meaning and origin of them all. For instance, the word "compound" comes from com, and—and—something else."

Immensely instructed, I was about to reply, when the crowd marched out to supper, and my distinguished escort proved himself no mean adept in the art of attendance. Gentle Heywood! If I had the grace of suffrage I would vote for you early and often, in recompense of the care that held my plate and replenished my cup, and made me the most envied woman around the festive board.

After supper I regained my corner, and, with ever varied sameness, the play went on. Back and forth the gamut I have noted ran the conversation. Up to the twelfth man I made desperate efforts to vary it, but then I grew callous, and answered by rote while watching the crowd; or wicked, and genealogically puzzling answers as that he was my "grandfather's son once removed," or that "we had the same great grandfathers," and stated the number of miles I lived from Belleville with startling recklessness as to the facts in the case, or disclaimed a residence in Kent County or any knowledge of any post-office.

It was two o'clock. The nineteenth man had gone to get me a drink of water. Cousin Ned and Fan were just opposite, and I was trying to catch their eyes to sign "go home." Did you ever learn to know what people say from the motion of the lips? I saw Fan say, "I'm tired enough, but let's stay awhile on Nelly's account. She seems to be enjoying. How did you manage it Ned? There are prettier and richer girls here, yet our little cousin is, undeniably, the belle of the evening."

Dear honest old Ned! I know your gray eyes twinkled, though I could not see it, as you answered, and, in answering, gave unwittingly my vanity its severest blow. "I haven't managed at all. The vacant chair did the business. Any of those half frozen fellows was glad enough, by talking to her, to get a chance to warm his nose and toes."

We stayed an hour longer and the whole twenty-five were duly presented.

Ned tried hard to make me believe I was dreaming, and swore his friends were mightily struck with his piqant cousin; but my faith in eyesight is not to be staggered, and to this day Fan and I laugh when we meet, over popularity and propinquity, as exemplified in the vacant chair.—Weekly Graphic.

A Republican father said to his Republican son—Republican son ten years old—"my darling, you should sign the pledge. You should be a great man, honored and esteemed, and the only way to accomplish this is to sign the pledge and never drink a drop." This was good advice, but Republican son commenced thinking—the little heathen couldn't help it. "Papa," said the darling little Republican son, "didn't you vote for Grant." "You bet, my angel—he is loyal, but why this interrogation?" "Nothing, dad, only I want to know whether you want me to take him for my pattern, in order to arrive at glory and greatness."

Joe flew up in a h—ll of a rage to find two lines to fill out this page.

THE OLD-FOGY MAN.

He was a queer old-fogy man,
And loved old-fogy ways;
And railed against the reckless speed
Of these fast modern days.
He once would travel leisurely,
And stop his friends to hail;
But now they rushed him through by steam,
And rode him on a rail.

That good old coach was fast enough
For prudent folk to go;
Impatient men now laugh at it,
And say 'twas rather slow;
And so they rush upon the train,
And speed like thought away,
Until a smash-up breaks their bones;
He thinks it doesn't pay.

He loved old housewives' spinning wheels;
The music of their hum
Was far more dear to his old ear
Than grand-piano thrum.
But oh! he sighs, those wheels are gone
Since Whitney made his gin;
No more we hear their thrifty hum—
No more the sisters spin!

The rosy girls of olden time,
Sunburnt, were firmer made
Than these, the late tender shoots
That grow up in the shade;
They did their mother's heavy work,
And eased her weary hands;
And sometimes, too, if brothers failed
Could help to do a man's.

Their dresses, made with easy fit,
Gave not a pain beneath;
Their hearts had ample room to beat,
Their lungs had room to breathe—
Unlike our present girls, with waists
Too much compressed and slight,
Who, if they do not dissipate,
Are very often tight.

They let not Fashion dwarf their forms,
But grew to comely size,
And health shone ever on their brows
And sparkled from their eyes;
They thanked kind Heaven for all its gifts
And thought, with secret pride,
That they were beautiful enough,
And they were satisfied.

But now, our modern girls, alas!
Think Providence unkind
For putting too much in the midst,
And not enough behind;
And so they bustle round, and lace,
To mend such clumsy ways,
And think they far outshine the girls
Of good old-fogy days.

He wished, he said, for their sweet sakes,
That Fashion's torturing vise
Would ease them up a little, and
Less pinching would suffice;
That they might feel the bounding health
Around the heart that plays,
When all unfettered as it was
In good old-fogy days.

THE STORY OF A KISS.

"You wished to see me, Doctor?"

"I did, Miss Dallas, and upon a very serious matter. Pardon me if I appear to be meddling with your secrets; I do it only to save a fellow-creature's life."

The young woman's face flushed during the remarks, but paled when he spoke so gravely. He continued:

"Three weeks ago I was called to the bedside of Harry Gilman, and found him prostrated with a brain fever. I saw at the outset that the case was a desperate one, but hoped that skill and care might bring him through. From that day until this I have been almost constant in my attendance upon him; have battled with the disease inch by inch; and striven with what skill I had at command to save him.

"Early in my attendance I saw there was some dreadful disappointment beneath his malady, if not the cause of his prostration. In the hours that his mind wandered, your name was constantly on his tongue. His sister has told me, in answer to my questions, that Harry was deeply and truly in love with you, but that an estrangement has come between you lately; and I think this blow has been the one that brought him under my care. To-night the crisis in his disease will be reached, and to-night will answer our questions as to whether he will live or die. Without any help but such as I can render him, he may be saved; but a man's life is too great a jewel to trifle with, and we feel if you would but help us we could surely save him. Will you consent to assist us?"

"What could I do?" she asked.

"The plan I have marked out in my mind," said he, "is simply this: About midnight he will arouse from his present stupor, and in the next ten minutes his fate will be decided. The main point will be to have him make an effort for his own life. Should he try to live, his chances will be among the best; should he make no such effort, we might, with stimulants, carry him beyond danger; but if at that moment he recalls the past, and despondently sinks under it, no power under heaven but you can save him."

"And what would you have me do?"

"Just this, Miss Dallas: If, when he awakens, he is hopeful and remembers nothing of his disappointment, we will not need you at all. But should he begin to sink, the sight of you will save him."

"But how?"

"We could pretend you had recalled your decision of a few weeks ago."

"Oh, that would be too horrible! I could never do that."

"Not to save a man's life?" he asked solemnly.

"He would not thank me for saving his life by such a mockery," she said. "Why, I might have to say that I loved him, might I not?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I could not do it!"

"Not even to save his life?"

"You said that before," she said, "but not even for that could I do this thing. Harry and I have ever been very dear friends. I never fancied that he could love me until he surprised me by his avowal, and then I told him it could not be. How could I stand at his bedside now and say that I loved him? No, no, it cannot be. Think of some other plan."

"I have thought of all ways, Miss Dallas. I may not have to ask you to do this thing that you dislike so much, unless in the contingency I spoke of. I will not say to you what you ought to do, my dear young lady, but I promise you, if I am compelled to ask your assistance, that I will explain the whole matter to Harry, just as it is, and give him a correct report and understanding of your part in it."

"But how could I ever meet him again?"

"It will be no harder then than it is now. And I have no doubt Harry will leave the place if he recovers."

"I would be glad to help you, Doctor, but this would seem like profanity to me."

"It is to save a fellow-creature's life, and be all the blame on me."

"I wish I could do it, but what an awful thing it is for a girl to do!"

"I can appreciate your hesitation, and yet, if you were my daughter, I would say it was your duty to do it."

"Thank you for saying that, Doctor; it decides me. I will do what you ask."

"Thanks; I will call for you this evening and explain your part to you."

Later in the night there gathered around the bed of the sick man his mother and sisters, the doctor and Kate Dallas. The doctor had explained to the others the part he had persuaded Kate to act, if it should be necessary, and they had thanked her over and over for consenting. They sat near each other; the mother and sisters wondering in their own hearts that any girl could know their Harry and not love him, but yet, they are women enough to know that love cannot be forced or reasoned.

"How is he now, Doctor?" the mother whispers, and his reply, "There is no change." They await the slow turnings of another hour, and then the sleeper makes some movements with his lips, and the doctor, bending over, catches the word, "Kate," but he does not tell it to the others. By and by there is another movement, and the doctor beckons them out of the room.

"In a quarter of an hour he will awaken," he says. "You, Mrs. Gilman, and Ruth, will stand near me and be ready to catch the first question he asks and answer it. Miss Dallas, you will stand at the door and come if I speak to you, and act as I have told you before. If we are prompt and careful, and God wills it, we will save his life."

The mother and sisters step softly back to the bedside, and the doctor, reading the tremor in Kate's eyes, waits to speak with her.

"You will not have to say a word, Miss Dallas. I will play the tyrannical doctor to perfection and save you, as well as quiet any apprehensions that come to his mind. God bless you!"

It was no common case with Doctor Brown, this attendance on Harry Gilman. When he came to Melville a poor, unknown graduate, seeking to establish himself and earn his daily bread, it was Harry Gilman's father who had been the first to trust him, the first to say a friendly word to him, the one who had taken him to his own fireside and made him feel he was in the house of a friend; the one who had honored him with his friendship in all the succeeding years. Doctor Brown was now, with skill and care, repaying to the son the debt he owed the father, and he could not have done more for his own child. As he looked into the face of Kate Dallas, he could not but feel it was a fearful experiment he was about to make in two lives, but he brushed the thought aside, and returned to his patient.

There were the premonitory symptoms of awakening upon the part of the sick man, and the hearts of the women around him seemed almost bursting with suspense and anxiety. At last the eyes opened; the wild look in them gave way to one of recognition, and the lips feebly uttered:

"Mother."

She could not speak; her heart was too full for words, but she bent over and kissed him.

"Have I been here long?"

"Not such a great while," broke in the cheery voice of the doctor, "but plenty long enough. Here take a drop of this," and he gave him some stimulating drops.

"Have I been very sick?"

"You have been pretty sick, my boy, but you must not talk. Turn over and go to sleep again, and you can talk as long as you wish to-morrow."

"Is that Ruth?"

"Yes, Harry."

"Tell Kate—"

"Nonsense," broke in the doctor, "take a little more of this and go to sleep without another word," but he turned to Kate, and his eyes said "it will have to be done."

She tried to still the beating of her heart, but she had no fear for herself.

"Tell Kate"—Harry started again, but the doctor, after a quieting draught was administered, said:

"Why don't you tell her yourself?"

"Who? Is she here?" he asked excitedly, but the doctor caught his hand quietly, saying, "Do not get excited, Harry, but listen; obey me exactly, and all will be well. Miss Dallas and you have had some misunderstanding, but you have fancied it to be much more serious than it really was. She is here now to see after you; she wants you to get well, and if you obey me you will."

The sick man's eyes opened wider and wider as his physician proceeded, and when he said, "Miss Dallas is now here," he would have raised himself, but the doctor was watching, and prevented his making more than the first effort. He turned to Kate, and in answer to his look, she came close to the bedside.

"My orders," said the doctor, "are that you may look at Miss Dallas a moment, but you must not speak, and then she and your own people must leave the room."

Kate's face was almost deathly white as she turned toward Harry.

"Kate, oh Kate!" cried he with the most supreme happiness written in his face.

"There, there," said the doctor, "you disobey me already. Clear out of the room, you women, at once."

"No," said Harry, "stop a minute! Kate, will you kiss me?"

"Yes," she said, and she pressed her lips to his face.

"You may go now," he said, and he took the draught the doctor offered him, turned to the wall with sweet contentment written on his face, and in a few moments the doctor's practiced ear told him his patient was asleep.

He walked out where the women were awaiting him, took Kate's hands in his, and said, "You have saved his life?"

"Thank God!" came swelling up from the mother's heart.

From this point Harry's recovery was rapid. His frequent inquiries for Kate were parried until the hour came when Dr. Brown felt the story had best be told. There was no danger to be feared for Harry, while something might turn up to annoy Kate; so he set about unfolding the stratagem. Harry listened attentively, his face turning red and pale by turns, but he spoke no word until the story was finished.

"I did this," said the doctor, "because I knew it was the last chance of saving your life. I kept her back until I saw it must be done."

"Have you seen Kate since that night?" Harry asked quietly.

"I saw her but once, and then only for a moment. The poor girl's nerves underwent a terrible strain that night, and I called to help her."

"Doctor, I want to ask you one question. Do you think I can have any hope of ever winning her love?"

"To be frank with you, my dear boy, I do not think you ever can. I have given you a careful account of what passed between us at our interview, and, to me, her manner showed that you had no part in her heart."

"Yet mother says she has sent over daily to inquire for me."

"Yes, but it was at my suggestion, until I had told you the story."

"Doctor, I am, so far as you can tell, in my right mind; am I not?"

"Certainly, you are."

"The fever has all gone?"

"Of course it has. What are you driving at?"

"Just this," said he, with despairing bitterness. "I wish to heaven you had let me die!"

"Why, Harry!"

"I mean it. You ought to have let me die!"

"My boy, you are too young to talk like this. There is more in life than just loving or being loved. You have your mother and sisters, if you care nothing for yourself."

"Well, let it go. As I am alive, I must make the best of it. I thank you just as much as if life was dear to me. When can I drive out?"

"To-morrow, if you choose. Where do you want to go?"

"To see Kate Dallas."

"Not to worry her, Harry?"

"No, to thank her, and then withdraw from her presence forever."

"Can I help you?"

"No, except to let me visit her without announcing that I am coming."

"It shall be as you wish."

The next day Harry was driven to the home of Kate Dallas, and as he sat in the parlor awaiting her appearance, his thin, white lips seemed to move as if he were rehearsing his part.

"I am glad to see you out again, Harry," she said, as she came toward him, but though her voice was sprightly, her face was fully as pale as his.

"Thank you, Kate, this is my first call; but Dr. Brown consented to my ride to-day."

Her eyes tried to read in his face if the doctor had told the story, but she said:

"I hope you will soon be out of the doctor's hands."

"I learned from Dr. Brown only last evening," he went on, as if determined to say at once what he had come to say, "of what you consented to do for him during my sickness. I ought to thank you for, perhaps, saving my life. I do thank you heartily for all that you did, and all the more because I know it was a terrible task for you. He told me the complete history of his plan, and while I wish it had never been thought of, I cannot but see how great a sacrifice you made fo me, and I thank you for it."

She had covered her face with her hands as soon as he began, and still kept them there. He waited a moment as if to give her an opportunity to speak, but she remained silent.

"I have come," he resumed, "not to thank you only, but also to say, 'Good-by.'" She uncovered her face at this, and her eyes filled with anxiety—he went on, "In a few days I will leave Melville forever, but if—no matter where I am—the day shall come when I can be of help or assistance to you, you will remember that I owe my life to you, and"—he almost broke down here—"all that I am or have will be at your service."

She had covered up her face again, and had he looked closely he might have seen tears forcing their way between her fingers, but his eyes were on the carpet, where they had been all the time.

"I am sorry," he continued, "more sorry than I can tell you, that I have ever been the cause of annoyance to you, or have ever brought aught of sadness into your life, but you have beautiful days yet in store for you wherein these will be forgotten, and I hope you will think of me, if at all, as one who would rejoice in your happiness and be happy in your joy."

He waited a moment, as if hoping she would say a word, but the tears were dropping from her eyes thick and fast, and her tongue refused to speak.

Finding that she did not intend to break the silence, he arose to take his departure, and then, for the first time, saw her tears. A wild, exulting light leaped into his face and eyes, but died away as soon again.

"Good-by, Kate," he said, and he moved toward her.

Her answer was a sob.

"It is my lot," he said, "to bring your life unpleasant experiences, when my dearest wish would be to bring you joy. I shall never be a cloud on your horizon again, so once more, 'good-by.'"

She turned her face from him, and said between her sobs, "I don't want—to drive you—from your—home."

"Let that give you no pain," he said, tenderly; "I could not live here now."

"But it is I who am driving you away," she said.

"No, you must not take the blame," said he. "I should never have supposed you could love me, but let that go now. 'Good-by.'"

"Don't go," was her answer.

"I must. I could not stay and see you the wife of some one else."

"Don't go," she repeated.

Heavens! Could he believe his own heart! Could it be possible that she loved him! His eyes filled with light and hope again, and with one step he was beside her. "Kate," said he, "am I coming from death once more to life? Can you love me? Do you love me? Ask me to stay but once again! I am yours for life or death if you love me. What shall it be, darling, will I go or stay?"

"Don't go," was all she said.—Hearth and Home.

A Conundrum Answered.

The Louisville Ledger has been puzzled for a long time to know why the women of Massachusetts make more noise than their sisters in other States. Archbishop Whately once propounded a similar conundrum: Why do white sheep eat more than black ones? and answered it with the inevitable reply: Because there is more of them.

Death of a Veteran Printer.

Robert K. Fleming, the pioneer printer of Illinois, died at Belleville, on the night of the 26th ult., aged 78 years 2 months and 26 days. He published the Democrat in 1832 at Kaskaskia, formerly the capital of the State, and in October, 1833, he went to Belleville and embarked in the publishing business, starting several papers, all of which finally merged into the Advocate of the present day. He has been a resident of St. Clair County for upwards of forty years, and most of the time has been identified with the printing business.

A SECOND FATHER MATTHEW.—Who is there that does not respect the memory of Father Matthew, the great champion of temperance. Innumerable societies bear his honored name; but there is one man who has struck a more sure death blow to intemperance, and that man is DR. J. WALKER, an old California physician, who has discovered in nature's "meek and lowly herbs," a medicinal "tonic" and gentle stimulant that completely takes the place of the fashionable alcoholic poisons called "tonics," so popular as a compromise between strong drink and cold water, and does away with the mania for drink, and in reality cultivates an involuntary disgust for the same. It even does more. It acts upon the entire physical system, purifies the blood and produces hale, hardy health. The discoverer of this great medicinal stimulant is surely entitled to the thanks of a whole nation, and it is not extravagant to entitle him "a second Father Matthew." 33

THE CAPITOL'S GRANDEUR.—A correspondent of the Cleveland Leader has been doing the capitol at Washington, and says: "If one can even give accurately the number of square feet in encaustic tiles, the amount of money paid for adornment, or a catalogue of pictures and statuary of a great building like the capitol, does any one else under the sun realize a particle of its grandeur, beauty, or fitness? Are not one's own eyes and understanding worth a library full of description? After more than eight years spent in its halls and galleries, in going up and down its stairways, in wondering and admiring over its grandeur and elegance, I frankly confess my inability to convey even to the most sympathetic and imaginative reader a single particle of the charm of living within these marble halls.

A Wrong Custom Corrected.

It is quite generally the custom to take strong liver stimulants for the cure of liver complaint, and both the mineral and vegetable kingdoms have been diligently searched to procure the most drastic and poisonous purgatives, in order to produce a powerful effect upon the liver, and arouse the lagging and enfeebled organ. This system of treatment is on the same principle as that of giving a weak and debilitated man large portions of brandy to enable him to do a certain amount of work. When the stimulant is withheld, the organ like the system, gradually relapses into a more torpid or sluggish and weakened condition than before. What then is wanted? Medicines, that, while they cause the bile to flow freely from the liver, as that organ is toned into action, will not overwork and thus debilitate it, but will, when their use is discontinued, leave the liver strengthened and healthy.

Dr. R. V. Pierce:

DEAR SIR: Your treatment in my case has been quite successful and satisfactory, and for which I desire to express my gratitude. I have been troubled with a disordered Liver and Catarrh and general weakness for a good many years, and was failing slowly all the time, and last August I called on you and got some of your Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and one of your Nasal Injectors, and since that time I have been improving and am now better than I have been in years, not having had the sick headache in months, which I used to have to average once a week, the Golden Medical Discovery being the principal medicine used. It has worked wonders in my case, and I recommend it to those similarly afflicted. Let me express gratitude to you for such invaluable services.

Truly and gratefully yours,

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine, and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumorous discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure—a cure is certain; for when once this remedy commences its work of purification, and succeeds in diminishing the loss of wastes, its repairs will be rapid, and every day the patient will feel himself growing better and stronger, the food digesting better, appetite improving, and flesh and weight increasing.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional, and Skin diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

Nature's Great Remedy

FOR ALL

THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES!!

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medicinal properties are retained. Tar even in its crude state has been recommended by eminent physicians of every school. It is confidently offered to the afflicted for the following simple reasons:

1. It cures,—not by abruptly stopping the cough—but by dissolving the phlegm and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter causing the irritation. In cases of seated consumption it both prolongs and renders less burdensome the life of the afflicted sufferer.

2. Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain, and subduing inflammation.

3. It purifies and enriches the blood. Positively curing all humors, from the common simple eruption to the severest cases of Scrofula. Thousands of affidavits could be produced from those who have felt the beneficial effects of PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL in the various diseases arising from impurities of the blood.

4. It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

All who have known or tried Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's remedies require no references from us, but the names of thousands cured by them can be given to any one who doubts our statement. Dr. L. Q. C. The Death of Dr. Livingstone.

[Letter from the British Consul at Zanzibar.]

It appears from the information given to Lieut. Cameron by the doctor's servant, Chumah, that Livingstone proceeded from Ujiji to the middle of the northern shore of Lake Bemba (Bangweolo), and that, being unable to cross it, he retraced his steps and rounded into the southward, crossing, besides the Chambese, three other rivers which flowed into the lakes. He then went (so far as Lieut. Cameron is able to make out) in search of the ancient fountains of Herodotus, and eventually turned to the eastward and crossed the Luapula.

After marching for some days through an extremely marshy country, in which sometimes for three hours at a time the water stood above the waists of the travelers, the doctor succumbed to an attack of dysentery, which carried him off after an illness of ten or fifteen days. During this trying journey two of his men died and several deserted. The remainder, seventy-nine in number, disemboweled the corpse and embalmed it as well as they were able with salt and brandy.

On nearing Unyanyembe, Chumah, with a few others, started ahead to procure supplies, as the party was nearly starving; and the remainder, with the body, were reported to be distant from ten to twenty days' march from Unyanyembe at the date of Lieut. Cameron's letter. It will be seen on reference to Dr. Livingstone's last communication, dated July 1, 1872, that the account given by the Doctor's servants of his latest movements agrees in the main with the route sketched out by the traveler himself before leaving Unyanyembe.

His intention was to go southwards to Ufipa, then round the south end of Tanganyika, and crossing the Chambeze, to proceed west along the shore of Lake Bangweolo. Being then in latitude 12 south, his wish was to go straight west to the ancient fountains reported at that end of the water-shed, then to turn north to the copper mines of Katanga, and after visiting the underground excavations, to proceed to the head of Lake Lincoln, whence he would retire along Lake Kamolindo toward Ujiji, and home.

He distinctly stated it was not his intention to return northward through the Manyuemo country; and as he esteemed the duration of his journey from Ujiji and back at eight months, it is not unreasonable to infer that the design had been completely carried out and that Livingstone was on his homeward journey when attacked by the disease to which he fell a victim. This supposition is rendered more probable by the fact that when the Doctor left Unyanyembe he was well supplied with provisions, and that he is reported by his servants to have been nearly destitute at the time of his death.

Smiley's Tribulations.

When Smiley, of Pittsburgh, started for Philadelphia the other day a woman occupied the seat in front of him with twin infants. Just before the train moved off the woman asked Smiley to hold the babies for a moment while she went to the drug store across the street after a new bottle top. He took the little ones and before the woman returned the train started. Smiley was in agony, and when the babies began to cry no words can describe his misery. This kind of thing continued until dark, and then as the conductor refused to have anything to do with the infants, poor old Smiley put them into his own birth and tried to soothe them. But the more he tried the more they howled, and he set up alongside of them the whole night utterly wretched, while the other passengers swore at him and threw boots at his head, and called him hard names because he wouldn't keep the youngsters quiet. By the time morning came Smiley was pretty near crazy, and the twins were almost starved to death. He had nothing to give them but plug tobacco and bay rum, which he carried for his hair, and he knew those were not healthy. The first time the train stopped he bolted out and got a pie. When he returned one of the twins had tumbled off the seat and had a broken nose; but he stuffed them both with the pie until they were deathly sick, and began to disgorge. Then Smiley was in a worse case than ever. When he reached Philadelphia he was on the very verge of insanity, and his reason was all but dethroned when a policeman entered the car and seized him on the authority of a telegram from Pittsburgh, on a charge of kidnapping. He spent the night in jail, and was then released on bail. He wants to find the father of those twins. He yearns to tell him something, and to fumble among his hair.—Max Adeler.

Ready Money.

It is a good thing to have unlimited credit, but better still to have ready money on hand for emergencies.

The richest man on the globe, Baron Rothschild, learned this lesson one day when he chanced to ride in a public conveyance, and found out that he had "not a red" in his pocket.

The driver was furious, and demanded his pay. Rothschild told him his name, and gave him his card.

"I never heard of you, and never want to again; but I want my pay and must have it," and he looked down threateningly. The money king was in haste. He had only an order for a million, and offered the driver a coupon for fifty thousand francs "to change." The driver started; the passengers laughed, and just then an acquaintance came up, from whom he borrowed six sous, and paid the angry Jehu.

If it is inconvenient for even a Rothschild to be without money in his pocket, you may be sure it will be even more so for you. The world never respects a "state of impecuniosity." It is a most uncomfortable state to be in.

If you have an income of any sort, try not to spend every cent. Have a few dollars always about you for emergencies that will always be happening. If you gather it up as the children do their pennies, one at a time, keep your stock good. When you must break into your last five dollar bill, replace it as soon as you can. It adds to your comfort more than you ever guess to feel that there is a snug little sum that you can draw from in case of urgent need.

Philosophy, religion, or poetry to the contrary, there is no use in being penniless. By common prudence, most people of industrious habits can keep a little ahead for a rainy day.

The Potentates of Europe.

Europe consisted, before 1859, of fifty-six independent states; and now, after the smaller Italian states have been swept out of existence and the German states are consolidated into an empire, the number of really independent states has been reduced to fifteen—not including the petty independencies Liechtenstein, San Marino, Monaco, Andorro nor the semi-independent states of Roumania, Servia and Montenegro.

The fifteen independent states of Europe are Russia, Germany, France, Austro-Hungary, Great Britain, Italy, Spain Turkey, Sweden and Norway, Belgium, Portugal, Holland, Switzerland, Denmark and Greece. Some of these again are made up of similar semi-independencies. The German Empire is composed of twenty-six separate existencies. The Czar of Russia is at the same time Grand Duke of Finland; the Emperor of Austria is the hereditary King of Hungary; the Sultan enjoys the sovereignty over Roumania, Servia and Montenegro. The entire population of Europe is some 301,000,000, of whom 147,000,000 are Catholics, 71,000,000 Protestants, 70,000,000 Greek Catholics, 5,000,000 Jews, and 6,500,000 Mahometans. The foreign possessions of European states have a population of nearly 280,000,000, over 200,000,000 of which belong to England alone. Spain has 6,000,000 of subjects in her colonies. In the following list we give all the European states, independent and semi-independent, with their populations and rulers, and the age and length of rule enjoyed by the latter:

The Great Western Holocaust.

The dreadful accident on the Great Western road, near London, Canada, is one of the most appalling which has happened for a long time. A lamp falls in a sleeping-car, the rear car of the train, which is going at the rate of 30 miles per hour, and in the short space of five minutes the car is destroyed, eight unfortunate victims are burned to death, and the remainder of the passengers are strewn along the track for a distance of three miles, some of them maimed and some of them dead. It does not appear from the accounts that anyone is to blame, and yet it is very extraordinary that the train could not have been stopped by using the bell-rope, and that none of the employes of the train knew that the car was on fire until it was too late to render any aid. The circumstances at least demand a rigid investigation. To people not connected with the railroad business, it will be a mystery how a car on a railroad train could burn for six minutes without attracting the attention of anyone on the train.

"A Daniel Come to Judgment."

A German had made a fortune in Philadelphia by selling milk. He started home with two bags of sovereigns. On shipboard he counted one bag of treasure. A mischievous monkey was watching his operations. As soon as it was replaced and tied up and the other bag emptied, Jocko snatched up the full one and was soon at the mast head. He opened the German's bag, and, after eying the pretty gold, he proceeded to drop one piece upon the deck and another in the water, until he had emptied the bag. When he had finished, the Dutchman threw up his hands, exclaiming: "He must be de Tuyvil, for what came from de water he does give to de water, and what came from de milk he gives me!" Well, we don't ask you to believe this story, you know.

It is said that there is a dog in Iowa which its owner, a farmer named Tremaine, values at $32,000. We have a dog ourselves which we value at somewhere in the immediate neighborhood of that sum, but to a warm personal friend who wanted him badly, and seemed to think he couldn't get along without him, it is not wholly impossible that, in some moment of convivial joy, when the heart beats high and warm with dance and song and banquet wine, we might be induced to sell him for fifty cents.—Courier-Journal.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.

The Auburn Courier

Thursday, March 19th, 1874

Cyrus Fillmore, a brother of the ex-President lives in Lagrange County.

The remains of Milliard Fillmore were buried at Buffalo last Thursday with civic and military honors.

It is whispered that Miss Nellie Grant and Mr. Sartor Resartus will be married sometime next month. The shoemaker and the tanner's daughter, two half soles made into one.

Senator Tipton, of Nebraska, ridicules the sensational reports of Indian scares sent in from the frontier of that State. No one is in any danger, or the least bit scared, unless it is Governor Furnas.

Minnesota has a Governor who is a curiosity. Recently the Legislature passed a bill increasing his salary from $3,000 to $4,000 a year. This bill he vetoed for the reason that as he had opposed the salary-grab, he could not consistently accept increased pay himself. That Governor is a curiosity. He didn't emulate Grant.

General Concha, the new Captain-General of Cuba, is a great favorite with the Havanese. At least they have a cigar called after his name as well as a prison. Perhaps his ambition will end like the smoke of the one and his life, within the walls of the other. Cuban politics and politicians are terribly unstable.

The late Charles Sumner, according to the opinion of the leading London dailies, was a great man, a fine speaker and personally honorable, but wanting in statesmanship. The virdict may be just, but judging by the standard of statesmanship set up in this country, the people would be willing to worry along somehow with a few Sumners, and do without statesmen altogether.

The Democratic State Central Committee met last week, and called a State Convention to meet July 15th. After the adoption of the day for the Convention Col. Alvord resigned his position as Chairman of the Central Committee, and the Hon. J. E. McDonald was made a member of the committee and Chairman thereof, in place of the retiring member. Mr. McDonald has accepted the trust.

To show the people how they are bled by the Grant party, we refer to a standing army of officials in the revenue service whose entire collecting come short of paying their own salaries, and hence a regular charge upon the Treasury. More than half are such at this time. They are maintained for no other purpose than to electioneer and vote for the party. This is an exhibit made by Mr. Dawes and must be true.

Secretary Robeson is soon to deliver a commencement oration at Layfayette College in Easton, Pa. If he will only reveal on that occasion how a poor and briefless lawyer, while holding the office of Secretary of the Navy for five years, has in that time honestly saved $600,000 from his annual salary of $10,000, he will tell these college boys something worth hearing, which will make them open their eyes and prick up their ears with wonder.

Harpers Weekly done more, perhaps, for the defeat of Greeley, than any paper in the country. It guaranteed the integrity and honesty of Grant. It is rapidly changing its opinion towards the present administration. We give the following from a recent issue of that journal.

The public disgust and wrath with corruption of every kind are quite as remarkable at this moment as the corruption itself. The country is dividing into those who believe in political honesty and who mean to secure it, and those who laugh it to scorn as impracticable sentimentality. What sincere Republicans ask, and do not receive, is some unmistakable sign from Washington that their administration is with the former and not with the latter. They do not see that sign in the appointment of governor Shepherd, in the Sanborn contracts, in the nomination to the Boston collectorship, as they did not see it in the approval of the "salary grab," in the retention of Mr. Casey, in the tendency to inflate the currency, and in the hesitation to retrench. That demand, however, will not be relaxed. An attempt in the white house to Johnsonise the Republican party failed, and an effort to Butlerise it will be equally useless.

Democratic State Convention.

There will be a delegate Convention held at Indianapolis on Wednesday, the 15th day of July next, by the Democracy of Indiana to nominate a State ticket, to be voted for at the October election, 1874, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it.

The ratio of representation in the Convention will be one vote for every one hundred votes cast in the various counties for Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks for Governor, at the election in 1872, and one vote for every fraction of fifty votes and over.

The Democratic party of Indiana, claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all good men without regard to past party affiliation, who view the present condition of our political affairs as imperatively demanding reform, and who are disposed earnestly to labor for the overthrow of a corrupt party, and a profligate administration, most cordially invite all such to unite with it in council and in action.

In these times of official corruption and political misrule, it becomes, more than ever, the duty of all good citizens to require a strict adherance to, and faithful compliance with, the principles upon which our political institutions rest.

Justice and sound policy forbid that one brance of industry should be cherished at the expense of another, or that exclusive privileges should be conferred upon any one class of the people; and, therefore, the people viewed with alarm the growing tendency to monopolies and class legislation, and the overshadowing influence of the money power in controlling legislation and in shaping the destinies of the country. These influences must be checked.

The only certain safe remedies for the dangerous tendencies of the times, are to be found in the strict construction of the Federal constitution, and the assumption of no doubtful powers; and an honest economical administration of our public affairs, both State and national: the ostracism from public life of all who are found guilty of official corruption, and a strict subordination of the will of the representative to the will of the people, regarding the great body of the people as the only tribunal for the ultimate decision of questions affecting their government both as men and measures. The people have no divided interests, but all alike desire to see:

1. Labor protecad against the encroachments of mere money power;
2. The industrial interests guarded against the exactions of monopolies;
3. The public burdens enlightened by honesty and economy in the administration of public affairs.

Moreover the people would like to see such changes effected in our financial system as will guard against the rapid fluctuations in prices, consequent upon the sudden contraction and expansion of our currency, with such additions to its present volume as the business of the country requires, adopting and discriminating in favor of legal tender of treasury notes as against national bank currency. There is no hope of securing these forms through the agency of the party in power. We therefore call upon all good people to meet with us in convention, and to act with us at the polls, in behalf of these proposed measures, and to aid in staying the progress of corruption and misrule.

By order of the State Central Committee.

J. E. McDONALD Chairman.
A. T WHITTLESEY, Secretary

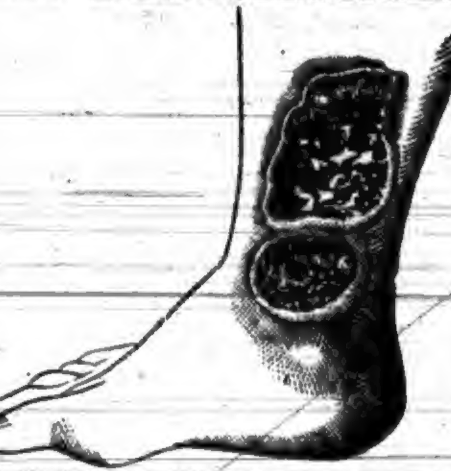
HOME TESTIMONIALS.

Aboit tp., Allen Co Ind. Mar. 8th, 1873.—I hereby certify that I was afflicted with fever sore for nearly 3 years We employed what we thought the best physicians of Ft. Wayne without any benefit; and for over two years I could not walk, and my whole system was affected. At this stage of the disease I consulted Dr. S. Clay Todd, and, I am glad to say, under his treatment I became perfectly well in four months, and thanks to a Kind Providence, and the skill of Dr. S. Clay Todd, I am no longer a cripple



I was 61 years old when cure... who have such a disease should employ Dr Todd at once.
MRS. LYDIA KNEPPER six miles west of Fort Wayne.

Ft Wayne, Ind. Feb. 15 1873.—I hereby certify that Dr. Todd cured our infant daughter of a large scrofulous tumor on the right under jaw in two weeks without lancing. She has been perfectly well ever since. Cured Aug. 14, 1872.
MISS HARRIET BROWN Wife of Mr Harrison Brown, 5 miles west of Fort Wayne.

Fort Wayne, Sep. 17, 1872.—For the benefit of those who think consumption incurable, I will make a statement of my cure: On the 12th of last March I was taken with the Lung Fever, or as the doctor called it, Pleuro-Pneumonia. I was attended by one of whom I considered the most eminent physicians of this city 3½ months, during which time he employed 5 other physicians as council. For 3 weeks I though I was getting better, when an abscess began to form in my left lung, and the physicians pronounced it quick consumption, from this time I failed rapidly, and raised from a pint to a quart of phlegm and matter each day, and had night sweats; by the 26th of June I had got so weak I could not lift a glass of water to my mouth, and was confined to bed. At this time some ladies in the neighborhood persuaded my wife to employ Dr. Todd, and I am free to say I improved steadily from the time I began taking his medicines, and in 10 weeks I was able to walk 2 miles, and felt as well as I ever did, now I walk from 3 to 4 miles each day, and neither cough nor spit. I have no pain and think my lung is healed perfectly.

JOHN A. MILLER,

SHE PRAYED FOR DEATH.

Two years and four months I lay upon my back in the most abject suffering every night I thought I would not live until morning and every morning that I would not live until night, and prayed for death to relieve me from my misery. We employed ten (10) physicians the most eminent of Fort Wayne, and other cities, without any benefit. When we heard of the wonderful cures of Dr. S. Clay Todd of this city we employed him, and thanks to a kind Providence and the skill of Dr. Todd. I am now able to attend to my household duties. I would advise all who think their case past help, to apply to Dr. S. Clay Todd at once. Mrs. DAVID BIRLEY, 109 E. Holeman St.

DEKALB COUNTY

NUMBER THREE.

The goods were then caught at different points down the river. A trunk containing $300 dollars in bank bills, floated down perhaps half a mile, and when the runaway was caught, the bills were completely saturated with the water, and had to be dried at the fire.

As another instance of difficulties in getting into the country, though not exactly in its proper place here, we will relate that Mr. Joseph Miller, the first county surveyor for DeKalb county, and his father brought a part of their goods by the way of Fort Wayne to Shryocks, (now Stoner's) mill. And from thence to the farm, now owned by Mr. Ditmer, one mile below Auburn, they had to cut their way through the dense forest. Having left the ballance of their goods and their familes on the Maumee, they struck through the woods, directly east, by means of a pocket compass, to the St. Joseph—going around the worst swamps—and then cut a road all the way back, (some 12 miles,) for their wagons to pass—having to bridge a tamarack swamp on the way. This road was known as "Miller's trace" for years afterward, and served as a highway for many emigrants.

It was where the road now runs, Westward from the St. Joseph river, at Judge Widney's.

Many of the settlers had never seen an Indian, before coming here; but they had heard, and read much of their savage barbarity. During years 1835-6-7 and 8 many of these "Red men," still lingered in their native forests, generally in large companies or "camps," They were an object of terror to many of the settlers, especially to the women and children; as singly or in caravans, they passed from one camp to another. To add to the terror, at first, the screams of a great owl, unknown in the east, but abounding in the western woods, were taken for the "whoops" of savages. Well do I remember a night in the fall of 1837, spent in terror of the Indians,. I had been in the country six months, but as yet had seen very few of them. My widowed mother with six children younger than myself, (and I not yet 17 years of age,) bought and settled on the farm, spoken in my last, as belonging to Dr. Babcock. Here an Indian trail crossed the river, and on the other side was a house where liquor was sold. Soon after nightfall, the real "whoops" were heard away in the South woods. The sound drew contionally nearer, and increased in volume, till our fears pictured a whole army of savages coming to murder us. We put out all the lights; fastened the doors, and concealed ourselves in different parts of the house. Soon the Indians were trampling around the house, and their torches gleaming through the window. We almost held our breath with fear. Soon however they passed by, down to the river, and, taking our canoe, crossed over and their whoops died away—drowned in the Indian's favorite beverage, "good old rye." But our rest was spoiled for the night, as we continually dreaded their return.

Afterwards, however, we became better acquainted with the "poor Indian"—as a camp of some 40 men, squaws and "papooses," spent four or five weeks in their tents, within twenty rods of the house—visiting us, or we them daily. The men spent their time hunting, dressing their game, gambling, or lying around the fire like dogs. The women chopped the wood, made the fires and waited on their lords and masters, while the children shot birds with their bows and arrows. Joe Richardville, son of the celebrated chief, was in the camp dressed partly like an Indian and partly in the European costume. His college education failed to make any thing out of him but an Indian.

The nearest mill and market was at Ft. Wayne, about twenty-six miles from the centre of the river settlement, by land and nearly as far again by the winding river. There was no wagon road, as yet, and the river was the great throughfare. It was navigated by means of "pirogues," (that is, large canoes, dug out of the huge towering poplars, abounding along the river.) They were sometimes three or four feet wide, and seventy or eighty feet long, and would carry quite a burden. They were propelled by means of poles and paddles. Coming up the river with a load when the water was high, was very hard work, especially if the river was too high to reach the bottom with poles of a convenient length.

Mr. Rhodes, of this village informs me that, on one occasion, his father and Samuel Wasson, of Spencerville, had to pull a loaded pirogue, nearly all the way from Fort Wayne, to where Spencerville now is, by laying hold of the willows and other bushes along the margin of the water. The entire voyage, occupied a week.

The "portle gentlemen" seem to have full swing of the sidewalks, more so on Saturday. A good chance for enterprising boys to make a little change, by taking them to the pound.

An exchange, dilates upon the weather, calls to memory a winter when it was so cold that whisky had to be chopped out of the barrel, and remarks that no one begrudged the trouble so long as hatchets were plenty.

One of the debaters at the school-house was called down by the President, for occupying too much time. To condense his remarks a postal card would have been sufficiently large to note it all, writing in an old Spencerian style.

Mr. S. R. Johnson, Asst. Engineer on the Baltimore road, who has the matter of getting ties in hand, is experiencing some difficulty at this point in securing a sufficient number. We think there will be plenty furnished in due time.

The hands of the Eel River gravel-train are making this place their point to lay over. There a large number of laboring men who came here for employment and so far they have had no trouble in getting work.

An exchange says one of our country schools has introduced a new feature.—When one of the girls miss a word the boy who spells it to kiss her. Several girls are fast forgetting all they ever knew about spelling, while the boys are improving with unexamped rapidity.

There seems to be a desire upon the part of our citizens to have the Baltimore road construct a track to the Eel River depot, running thence on the line of that road to the Junction. An effort ought to be made by everyone to accomplish this as it would be to our advantage.

Our popular Grover & Baker Sewing Machine agent, Mr. C. Klotz, has also been appointed agent for the celebrated Singer Machine, both of which can be tested at his establishment. He also keeps on hand a large lot of needles, improvements, etc., to supply the trade.

Our thanks are due the Auburn Silver Cornet Band for a serenade last Saturday evening. "Remember Me," from the Bohemian Girl, was rendered in fine style, while Gounod's Military Chorus from Faust, "Glory and Love" was immense—Come again, boys. Come in beautiful dreams, playing the happy hours away.

A young woman named Mauer charges one gay and festive Mckinly, of Jackson township, with bastardy. Since the issue of the warrant for arrest Mac. has gone west to grow up with country. The Sheriff went to Columbia city for him, but did not find him. Our county seems to have her share of rape, seduction and bastardy cases.

R. H. Gilbert is canvassing for fruit and ornamental trees of ever description, and is ready to supply the demand for anything in this line. He represents a splendid house and his representations may be depended upon. We know him to be fair and honorable in his dealings, and you cannot do better than give him an order at once.

We find the following going the rounds in our State exchanges: "Under the new revenue law of the State, lands and lots remaining unsold at the regular delinquent tax sale can be sold at private sale and any person applying to the Auditor, and paying the amount due is entitled to a certificate of purchase, the same as though it had been bought at public sale.

It is threatened to publish the names of those who signed the petition of John Hebel for liquor license. We cannot see what good can be accomplished in this.—Many of the petitioners are our best citizens and have done more for the town than those who threaten. Such measures do more injury to the temperance cause than good. It needs the good influences of all and this cannot be gained by making enemies of a large portion.

W. E. Rush has opened a shop at Ward's corner, where he will engage in the manufacture of picture frames. He has just received a large assortment of frame material, and is ready to make them to order at the lowest prices. A large lot of picture frames of every imaginable style and size always kept on hand. Also baby wagons brackets, and other articles. Repairing attended to.

A negro minstrel troupe has been organized at this place. If they can't do any better than they did a few months ago they will make more money chopping wood. We like to encourage home enterprises when they are not first-class frauds, but we fail to see any talent in the array of fictitious names on the programme. If it is gotten up as a burlesque to the profession, they may have some claim to public patronage.

A lady desires us to publish the following, which she says is certainly worth a trial. It is a receipt for making good coffee, and is said to be an excellent one;—"Grind your coffee, and put it in your coffe-pot. Fill up with boiling hot water Let in stand all night. In the morning place it on the stove until it is hot enough and there you have it. Don't let it boil. It does not need anything to settle it because it has not been stirred up by boiling. By this means all the aroma is retained. Try it ladies."

A great rush of men, boys, girls, mothers, fathers, and still other relatives made for the cheap boot and shoe store of Vordermark's. One old grandfather got a nobby pair of stogas for $2.50, and the way the old fellow paced off was surprising In a short time his old woman came, almost out of breath, asked for a pair of the same kind, only she did'nt care about the tops. The clerk allowed her $1 for these, and she left saying, Lookout for our whole neighborhood tomorrow, sir.

It is said that several have refused to subscribe to the erection of a Catholic church in our place. This is particularly noticeable in one denomination which was largely assisted by the public, regardless of religious faith, in the erection of their church. We are sorry to see this spirit of bigotry and selfishness. We fail to see much religion about it. We are as ready to give to the Catholic church as any other, though we dont endorse their mode of worship. Churches are moral institutions, and the more we have the better will be the morality of our place.

W. W. Humes our well known boot & shoe man, has rented the rooms over Chas Klotz' dry goods store, for the purpose of manufacturing boots and shoes to order. We all know Billy to be a superior workman, and he has engaged two others who are masters of their trade. He intends keeping those who have experience, and our citizens need not fear of having their work botched by cheap and inferior workmen. He has just received a large stock of heavy and light leather, and is ready to do work for each and every one at a living price. His old customers are all ready to give him their work, and many others will follow.

One of the finest and most complete county printing offices in the State is that of the Columbia City Post. Mr. Brown, its accomplished editor and proprietor, has just completed and moved into a fine new office, especially erected and adapted for that purpose, and on a recent visit we found it well arranged in every particular A new outfit in furniture is being added when it will be equal to any in the country It is all located on one floor, 145 feet in length, and has each department tastefully arranged. The Post is a splenpid paper, and deserves to go into every family in the county.

The exposure of the system on which the Press is run, of charging one person three times more than another for the same space, made Charles Washington squirm last week. He did not deny the fact that he got his President's Messages printed at Toledo. Heretofore we have published the items from that paper relative to us, so that our readers might know how we answered them, but Charles W. seldom does that. As he cannot answer them he does not want his readers to know anything about them. That plan will suit one who has the "manliness" of Charles W., but it is not a fair honorable plan by any means. Whenever Charles W. says he published our item, word for word, in his issue of Feb. 5th, and can prove it by the paper itself we will send him the V and not before. That's the agreement.

THE SCRIPTURE PUZZLE.

God made Adam out of dust,
But thought it best to make me first,
So I was made before the man
To answer Gods most holy plan.

My body he did make complete,
But without legs or hands or feet,
My ways and actions did control
And I was made without a soul.

A living being I became
'Twas Adam who gave me my name,
Then from his presence I withdrew,
No more of Adam ever knew.

I did my makers laws obey,
From them I never went astray
Thousands of miles I ran in fear,
[illegible]

But God in me did something see,
And put a living soul in me,
Again of me my God did claim,
[illegible]

And when from me that soul was fled
I was the same as when first made,
And without hands or feet or soul,
I travel now from pole to pole.

I labor hard both day and night,
To fallen man I give great light,
Thousands of people young and old,
Will by my death great light behold.

No fear of death doth trouble me,
For happiness is not for me,
To heaven I shall never go,
Nor to the grave nor hell below.

The scriptures I cannot believe,
If right or wrong can't conceive.
Although therein my name is found
They are to me an empty sound.

And now my friends these lines you read,
And search the scriptures with all speed.
And if my name you don't find there,
I'll think it strange, I do declare.

DEATHS.

FOSTER—Mrs. Hattie S. daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Knorr, of this place, died on Monday morning at 3 o'clock, March 16, 1874.

She was born in Northumberland County, Pa., Nov. 21st, 1844, aged 29 years, 3 m. 25 dys. She early became a follower of Christ and was a faithful and devoted member of the Presbyterian church Her life was such that all might, with advantage, emulate. Early in their married life her husband accidentally shot himself, so her little children Harry and Jennie, are orphans indeed. With our admired and beloved sister in Christ, God has ful filled his precious promise: "He giveth his beloved sleep."

"A sleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep,
A calm and undisturbed repose
Unbroken by the last of foes.

AUBURN SCHOOLS.—The spring term of school, beginning almost without an intermission, promises to be a success to patons and teachers. There are four schools in session, with an aggregate attendance of 150 pupils. Miss Miller, Primary, has nearly sixty; she is a kind, patient and energetic teacher to who the fondest parent need not fear to intrust her children's three-fold education.

Miss Hattie Griswold, Intermediate, has about thrity. Among her scholars, the visitor may see bright, happy faces and a disposition to win her regard by careful attention to her wishes.

Miss McNerny, Grammar, has over 30, all orderly and studious. A small class in book-keeping has made some headway. The books of Frank Dills are creditable to his accuracy and penmanship.

Prof Hoffman, High-school, assisted by Miss Schoonover, has a good school, numbering over 30. Good order and close attention to studies

In general the citizens may fell kindly to these teachers just entering upon their work and to give them good cheer in their noble calling is the object of these lines from their friend, M.

RELIGIOUS.

Rev. Wm. Long, will you please give some explanations through the columns of the COURIER, concerning your sermon in the M. E. Church, on Sunday the 8th of March 1874, in which you stated that there was a personal Devil, and that he was placed on probation, that he was the prince of the power of the air and possessed full control of the stormy elements, to prove which you quoted a portion of Job, in the desruction of Job's children.—Please tell me if he (the devil) has any power except what is delegated to him does his power originate with himself or does it come from God? Is he self existent and will he exist throughout endless ages of eternity? Again you say you don't know that there was any devil previous to the creation of Adam and Eve, and again that you partially acknowledge that all the kingdoms of this world and the glory thereof, belonged to the Devil Now, I claim that he was a liar from the beginning, that he never owned one foot of land. We are told in the word of God that the earth is the Lords, and all the fullness thereof. Christ says all power is given unto me, both in heaven and earth, that he is the alpha and omega the begining and the ending; besides whom there is no Savior, and in another place he says, besides whom there is no God. Now, I claim that he made and created all things and without him was nothing made that was made that his mission here was to seek and to save sinners, and that whatsoever he purposes that he will accomplish. Again the Lord, in speaking of his almighty and creative powers, he says: I make light and create darkness, I make good and create evil; I, the Lord, do all these things. Now, if God does all these things and upholds and governs all things by the might of his power, please tell me where the Devil gets his authority to do so many wonders, and if now held in chains of darkness. Please locate the place of confinement, and if in confinement, how he gets among and deceives the sons and daughters of men In all candor and brotherly love, I am inquiring after truth.

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

THE death is announced, at his residence in Buffalo, N. Y., of ex-President Millard Fillmore, aged 74. He was conscious to the last, and death was painless.

A NEW YORK fool named Henry Connors made a wager, the other day, that he could drink a pint of whisky and a gallon of beer in an hour. He won the bet, but died a short time after swallowing the poison.

BOSTON is having an epidemic of fire. Ten were reported in one night last week.

The West.

The temperance crusade in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois is still being prosecuted vigorously, and is gradually spreading to other States. At Columbus, the capital of Ohio, the war rages fiercely, but the saloon-keepers stubbornly refuse to be moved. In the smaller towns, however, the crusaders are meeting with better success, and hardly a day passes that does not witness the closing of several rum-mills. Praying and singing bands have been organized in numbers of towns in Illinois and Indiana; and Iowa, Wisconsin and other States in the West are threatened with an invasion of the temperance wave.... Hillsdale (Mich.) College has been destroyed by fire. Loss, $75,000; insurance, $50,000.

FRIDAY, March 6, writes a correspondent, will be a memorable day in the annals of Dayton, Ohio. The Women's Prayer League, in two divisions, of about twenty women each, marched upon the three hundred barrooms of Dayton through a drenching rain and slippery streets. When the columns debouched from the English Lutheran church, after making prayers, the commotion on the streets was intense. The saloonists were instantly notified to put their houses in order, and stand guard. They were visibly agitated, as natural consequence of an assault to which no physical, or even legal, resistance could be offered. Every saloon in the city was visited. At many they were refused admittance, in some instances being rudely repelled. But they were not to be put off in this way, and when the doors were closed in their faces the devout ladies dropped upon their knees in the nasty sloppiness, and sent their prayers up to Heaven. It was an affecting spectacle, and many of the spectators were visibly affected. The rum dealers showed little disposition to yield, but the women vow they will never cease their labors until the iniquitous traffic is banished from the city.... The National Crop Reporter gives the most flattering accounts of the fruit prospects and the condition of the fruit buds in the West. It states that there were a great many trees killed last year in various manners, but at present, on all living trees the buds are, as a rule, in the best possible condition for a large crop, with favorable weather in the future.

THE troops sent to the relief of the Red Cloud Agency have arrived safely at their destination, where they found everything quiet, and the fears of an Indian war have almost entirely vanished.... A man named Bigelow, stabbed and killed Joseph Peschke at Muskegon, Waukesha county, Wis., a few days ago. .... A young man named Fred Olds recently shot and horribly mutilated a grocer named Ferris, in Topeka, Kansas.... Both Houses of the Iowa Legislature have passed the Railroad bill, which originated in the State Senate by a vote of 92 to 4. It divides the roads of the State into three classes, and enacts directly without the intervention of a Board of Commissioners, as in Illinois, the rates that may be charged, in each class, for freight and passengers. These rates are 3 cents, 3½ cents, and 4 cents, respectively for passengers. A fund of $10,000 is placed in the Governor's hands to defray the expense of prosecuting railroads that infringe the law. When damages are sustained by any one, he may recover five times its amount.

THE temperance movement is beginning to develop itself in Missouri.... Scattering war-parties of Indians are reported in Dakota.... The house of George King, at Independence, Iowa, was recently burned. Mrs. King and two children and Mrs. Moses perished in the flames.

THE Ohio women have closed up 396 saloons so far.... Eight convicts recently escaped from the Penitentiary at Laramie City, Wyoming, by overpowering the guard and knocking the keeper down.... All the saloons in Winchester, Ind., have capitulated to the praying women, but the druggists refuse to sign the pledge.

A TELEGRAM from Fort Laramie states that General Smith with eight companies of cavalry and four of infantry had started for Spotted Tail's agency. The Brules and Winneconjous were concentrating near the agency, and threatening a fight. The Indians under Red Cloud were also very threatening, and there was much 'bad talk.'.... The Ohio Constitutional Convention has refused, by a vote of 48 for to 30 against, to submit to a separate vote a section allowing woman sufferage.

THE pioneer settlers of Michigan are to meet at Lansing on the 22d of April to form a State Association.... The Milwaukee brewers have receded from their purpose to advance the price of beer.... The Indians of the Winnebago Agency, in the vicinity of Sioux City, Iowa, are becoming troublesome.

The South.

BRYAN, Texas, has been visited by another destructive conflagration.... The Louisiana Legislature, after a session of two months, has adjourned. The closing scenes are described as the most disorderly ever witnessed in a legislative assembly.... Recent heavy rains have caused the overflow of the Mississippi river at a number of places below Cairo and above Memphis, and some sections of the country are covered for miles by water.... An extraordinary duel was fought at Atlanta, Ga., a few days ago, between two colored men, Peter Blair and Moses Sullivan. Peter told Moses he was no gentleman. Moses demanded an apology, which Peter couldn't concede. A challenge followed, seconds were chosen, and the party repaired to the field. The ground was paced off, and Colt's five-shooters placed in the hands of the principals. The word was given, "Peter, is you ready?" "Yes, sah," reponds Peter. "Moses, is you ready?" "Yes, sah," quoth Moses. Then they commenced shooting, and both parties fired away until the last barrel was discharged. The pistols were reloaded, the principals resumed their position, words of command were repeated, and firing recommenced and was continued until Blair fell to the ground shot through both legs.

GREAT floods are reported in the Mississippi Arkansas, White and Red rivers.

Washington.

THE Senate has passed, by a vote of 26 to 21, the bill for the appointment of a Commission to investigate the liquor traffic of the country. The bill provides for the appointment by the President of a Commission composed of five persons, whose duties shall be to inquire into the whole subject of the manufacture, sale, and drinking of spirituous and malt liquors, and to report the result of their investigations. The sum of $10,000 was voted to pay the expenses of the Commission.

THE Commissioner of Internal Revenue has written a letter to members of Congress, showing that the aggregate amount of internal revenue collected from September, 1862—when the internal revenue laws first went into effect—up to Feb. 28, 1874 (last month estimated), is $1,702,555,000. Of this amount there is due from late Collectors $2,525,490, for the recovery of which suits have been begun.

THE proposed extension of the patent of the Tanner railroad-brake, which is now under consideration by both Patent Commissioners, excites attention on account of the vast pecuniary interests involved. The "royalty" claimed to date is $60,000,000. The cost of the brake to each railroad is $465 per car. The result of this tax would increase fares fifteen cents on every hundred miles of travel.

SENATOR CHARLES SUMNER, of Massachusetts, expired at the capital, at 15 minutes before 3 o'clock on Wednesday, March 11. He was seized the evening before with what physicians term literally neuralgia of the heart. It was at once perceived that the great statesman was dangerously ill, and nothing that could be done was left undone. Brandy and ammonia were administered, and the limbs and body of the patient were rubbed and blanketed. Whilst all this was being done, Mr. Sumner, assuming that this was the end, uttered among others, these words: "My book, my book; I should not regret this, had I finished my book." "The great account is closed." "Can I not have relief?" In the meantime Surgeon-General Barnes was summoned, and promptly responded. An examination developed the fact that the Senator was suffering with angina pectoris, or a contraction of the muscles of the heart—the worst phase of the disease from which he suffered a couple of years since—and that in all probability he would not recover. He suffered excrutiating pains, and hypodermic injections of morphine were administered as occasion required. He lingered in great agony until 2:47 o'clock of the following day, when death ensued. He had several severe convulsions just before dissolution, and it is the opinion of those who were present that rupture of the heart occurred. His last words, which were addressed to ex-Attorney-General Hoar, were: "Take care of my Civil Rights bill. Tell Emerson I love him and revere him." Mr. Sumner was born in Boston, Jan. 6, 1811, and had just entered upon his 64th year. He graduated at Harvard, passed through the Cambridge Law School, studied law under his father, and was admitted to the bar in 1834. He visited Europe in 1836 and spent four years in England, France, Germany and Italy. Returning, he pursued his profession with success. His first entrance into official life was as United States Senator from Massachusetts in 1851, and continuously represented his State in that capacity up to the time of his death.

IT has been ascertained that bills providing for the erection of thirty-seven public buildings have been introduced in the present Congress.... It is announced that the marriage of Miss Nellie Grant to Mr. Sartorius, of England, will take place some time next month.

Political.

THE California Legislature has passed a bill making women eligible to educational offices.

THE Republicans of Rhode Island have nominated the present Governor and State officers for re-election.

THE Rhode Island House of Representatives has agreed to submit the question of woman suffrage to the people of the State for adoption or rejection.... The recent election for Governor of New Hampshire resulted in no choice by the people, and it will devolve on the Legislature to choose a Governor.

The Grange.

THE Executive Committee of the National Grange of Patrons of Husbandry are maturing a plan for the formation of a statistical bureau in connection with the National Grange, for the collection and dissemination of information in regard to the condition of the crops throughout the country. The new bureau will be located at Washington. Subordinate granges will report direct to the State Grange all information of interest relating to crops, and the different State Granges will report by telegraph to the Statistical Bureau of the order at Washington. The bureau will compile and summarize these reports into a monthly report of the crops in all sections of the country, and will simultaneously transmit the report by telegraph monthly to all State Granges, which in turn will furnish it to every subordinate grange within their jurisdiction. The information will not be furnished to the press for publication, it being intended exclusively for the benefit of members of the order.... The number of granges in Wisconsin is reported by the Secretary of the State Grange to have increased to 399. In January last there were 846. When the organization of those that have applied for recognition is complete there will be 480 granges.

MINISTER SCHENCK is home on a three months' leave of absence.... Caleb Cushing has sailed for Madrid.

THE steamer Pennsylvania, on her recent trip from Liverpool to Philadelphia, encountered a terrific hurricane. The Captian, First and second officers and two sailors were washed overboard and lost.

OLIVER AMES has been elected President of the Union Pacific railroad.

IT is given out from Washington that Gen. Schenck's visit home is in connection with a reciprocity treaty between Great Britain and this country, which is intended to obviate further proceedings under the Alabama treaty. .... Sidney Dillon—and not Oliver Ames, as was erroneously announced—has been elected President of the Union Pacific railroad.

Foreign.

THE steamship Sedra, bound from Newcastle, England, to Port Said, Egypt, was lost in the recent gale, and thirty persons perished.... The French Government has interdicted the sale of photographs of Count Chambord.... A Havana letter states that Spanish volunteers are constantly deserting to the infurgents.... A cable dispatch says the British Government will be obliged to maintain 2,000,000 of half-famishing Indians for three months, and that the expenditures on account of the famine, till February last, are estimated at over $7,000,000.

ENGLAND and Turkey are engaged in a diplomatic dispute touching the arrest of British subjects.... There has been an extensive conflagration in Salonica, Turkey. An immense amount of property was destroyed, and eleven person burned to death.

OFFICIAL advices have been received from Sir Garnet Wolseley, commanding the British forces in Ashantee, announcing the capture and destruction of Coomassie.... The death of Cespedes, ex-President of Cuba, is confirmed. He was surprised by a party of volunteers, resisted bravely, and was riddled with bullets .... A London dispatch says several prominent Englishmen will be prosecuted for conspiring with Arthur Orton to get possession of the Tichborne estates.

DISPATCHES to the British War Office from Gen. Wolseley say: "No means were left untried to affect a peaceable solution of the campaign. The King's palace was not touched till the last hour, and the troops left Coomassie without one article of plunder.".... Charles Orton has made a confession in which he acknowledges that the Tichborne claimant is his brother.... The terrible condition of Cuban finances is thus told in a Havana dispatch: "The market is disorganized. Merchants refuse to sell exchange. It is impossible to give quotations. Higher rates are asked hourly for gold. No sales."

A LONDON dispatch informs us that the negotiations between Sir Garnet Wolseley and the King of the Ashantees have been completed. The King agrees to pay 50,000 ounces in gold, and renounces all claims to Adarsi and other territory specified. He consents to withdraw from Appolonia and the coast, promises to keep the road free of bush from Coomassie to the river Prah, protect commerce, prohibit human sacrifices, and keep the peace forever.

THE report that Gen. Concha is to be Captain-General of Cuba, in place of Jovellar, is confirmed.... The British army that was sent to Africa to "punish" the Ashantees, and which, having succeeded in its object, is now homeward-bound, suffered a total loss during the "war" of only 15 killed and [illegible] wounded. .... It is announced from London that, if his health will permit, Gladstone will resume the leadership of the Liberal party in 1875. The Marquis of Hartington has been accepted by the Liberals as their temporary leader.

THE Duke of Edinburgh has returned to England, accompanied by his bride. The people turned out en masse, in the midst of a driving snow-storm, to welcome the royal couple, and so great was the pressure that many casualties occurred. Four persons were killed and twenty-four injured in the vicinity of London alone.... Bismarck is sick.

CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, March 6.—Senate.—Petitions were presented by Chandler from citizens of Michigan, and Logan from citizens of Illinois, asking for an increase of currency.... Thurman introduced a bill appropriating $10,000 to pay the expenses of the District of Columbia Investigating Committee.... Ramsey addressed the Senate on the subject of cheap transportation.... The Senate refused, by a vote of 17 to 23, to adopt Frelinghuysen's motion to instruct the Appropriation Committee to report in favor of an appropriation for the Centennial not to exceed $3,000,000.... The bill was then referred without instructions to the committee. As it stands, it has no international suggestions. It invites the Governors of all the States to take part in a national exhibition.... The bill to appoint a Commission to investigate the liquor traffic was passed—yeas, 26; nays, 21.

House.—A bill was passed authorizing a bronze statue of Admiral Farragut.... The Secretary of the Treasury was directed to furnish information as to Pension Agents, and the number of pensions paid by each, with costs, etc., prior to or since the war.

SATURDAY, March 7.—Senate.—Not in session.

House.—The House met for debate only—Wilson, of Iowa, in the chair. Fernando Wood, Burchard, Beck and Kelley made speeches on the abolition of the tax on matches. The speeches, of course, took a wide range, and comprehended questions of finance and politics generally, which were discussed at great length.

MONDAY, March 9.—Senate.—The Senate met, and, after prayer by the Chaplain, adjourned out of respect to the memory of ex-President Fillmore.

House.—Under a call of the States a few unimportant bills were introduced. Mr. Cox announced the death of ex-President Millard Fillmore, and, after the delivery of speeches eulogistic of his private character and public services by Cox, Wood and Maynard, and the appointment of a committee of seven members to attend the funeral, the House adjourned.

TUESDAY, March 10.—Senate.—A committee of three, consisting of Fenton, Hamlin and Bayard, was appointed to attend the funeral of ex-President Fillmore on behalf of the Senate.... Oglesby presented a joint resolution of the Illinois Legislature asking the passage of a law to prevent unjust discrimination in charges by railroad companies.... Boutwell was excused from service on the District Investigating Committee.... The bill to equalize the currency was taken up, and Ferry (Mich.) delivered a lengthy argument in favor of free banking on the national banking system.

House.—The bill to prevent the destruction of buffaloes on the plains was passed.... Clark presented a resolution of the Patrons of Husbandry of Missouri, appealing to Congress to secure the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi river and its tributaries by ample appropriations.... Nearly the whole day was consumed by the House in Committee of the Whole, in considering the general appropriation bill.

WEDNESDAY, March 11.—Senate.—Immediately after the reading of the journal, Sherman said: "One of our number [Senator Sumner] lies ill, and perhaps dying. I therefore move the Senate adjourn." Agreed to, and the Senate adjourned.

House.—Donnan, from the Committee on Printing, reported concurrent resolutions reciting that it is alleged that grave abuses exist in the Government Printing Office, and instructing the Joint Committee on Printing to inquire into the expediency of abolishing the Government Printing Office. Adopted.... The bill to restore to the pension roll those persons whose names were struck therefrom in consequence of disloyalty, was passed; also, the bill granting $30 for an artificial eye to soldiers who have lost an eye; also, the bill to amend section 13 of the Pension law of March 3, 1873, by providing that, in case of the death or remarriage of a soldier's widow having a pension, or the death of a soldier's orphan children, the pension shall revert to the dependent father, mother, or other relative of the soldier, from the date of such death or remarriage.... The death of Senator Sumner was announced, and the House immediately adjourned.

THURSDAY, March, 12.—Senate.—The galleries were crowded before the hour of meeting. The chair of the late Senator Sumner was draped in mourning, and a large bouquet of white flowers was placed on his desk. The reading of the journal only occupied a moment, and, upon its completion the Rev. Byron Sunderland, Chaplain to the Senate, delivered a short and very impressive prayer, the Senators all rising and standing, with bowed heads during its delivery. A painful pause of a few minutes' duration ensued; then Senator Anthony, of Rhode Island, in a broken voice made the official announcement of the death of Mr. Sumner. This painful duty would have devolved upon Senator Boutwell had he been present, but, he being quite ill at his residence, Mr. Anthony, at Mr. Boutwell's request, delivered the few necessary words, supplementing them with a resolution for the appointment of appropriate committees. They were seconded by Mr. Conkling in an appropriate manner, and adopted by general consent; after which the Senate adjourned.

House.—After the reading of the journal, no business was entered upon, and no motion of any kind was made, but the members sat in their seats waiting, amid the murmur of conversation, for the expected message from the Senate announcing its action on the death of the Massachusetts Senator. As soon as the message was received, Representative E. R. Hoar, of Massachusetts, arose and, in a tremulous voice and with great sadness of manner, offered appropriate resolutions touching the sad event. Hurlbut, Hale of Maine, Foster, Rainey, Clayton, Scudder, Randall, Beck and Hancock were appointed a committee on the part of the House to accompany, with the Massachusetts delegation, the remains to their place of burial. The House then adjourned.

The Siamese Twins.

Dr. Louis A. Sayre, Porfessor of Orthopœdic Surgery in Bellevue Hospital, New York City, who is a most distinguished surgeon in his specialty—the deformity of the human body—is thoroughly convinced that the twins might have been separated in life with perfect safety by a simple process well known in the profession and frequently practiced, most often in cutting horses' tails off. This process is to run a silver wire or a piece of silk through the center of the band. By tying the ends together and making a stricture around the part of the band encircled, the tight impression would cause the wire to gradually cut through the band, the flesh sloughing away until the whole structure was cut into two. The severance in this way would have been so gradual that the shock to the system and the danger of peritonitis would have been avoided.

The arterial circulating between the two was so slight that when one twin was chafed by the Doctor at Apollo Hall, New York, in 1843, though his pulse increased greatly in rapidity, that of the other was perfectly regular. The Doctor was then convinced that his theory could have been carried out in practice. The Professor, then a young doctor, actually proposed to attempt it; but the twins preferred to continue their profitable partnership. He returned to New York at midnight.

ONE of the rare colors in evening silks is called "London fog." It has a yellow hue and is not as ugly as some would think from its name. The old "London smoke" is out of date.

The Trichinæ.

An interesting case of trichinasis was examined yesterday morning at the Rush Medical College. Last December the subject, Mr. Wallace M. Blood, of Grinnell, Iowa, ate a piece of pork which was afterward found to contain trichinæ spirales. Three days later he was taken with purging and soon after with vomiting. He took to his bed and remained there five weeks. During this time his feet and limbs were greatly swelled. He could not stretch his legs out straight without making all his muscles ache. Nevertheless he had no pains on pressing on his muscles. He had great thirst, profuse perspiration, and pains in his back; could not breathe easily; could not turn himself in bed, [illegible] and could not sleep well. At the end of five weeks he had a great longing for pork, and, getting up one day, he partly broiled a piece of ham, but did not cook it through. He ate this and was taken worse very soon after.

Dr. Norman Bridge briefly reviewed the character of the symptoms of the patient, and explained the manner in which the trichinæ are introduced into the muscles, where they seem to prefer to live.

The lecturer expressed the opinion that the trichinæ are carried by the circulation, and that they are not dependent upon their simple ability to crawl. From the rapidity of motion of the trichinæ, it seems impossible that they should crawl through the tissues in such a short space of time. Dr. Bridge then examined the methods of preventing the disease. It has been found that a heat of 160 deg. Fahrenheit kills the animals. Hence, if the heat is raised to the boiling point, 212 deg., there will be no danger from the disease. It has been said that dry-salting meats will kill the trichinæ, but it is hardly a certainty. Therefore, pork or any other meat may be safely eaten which has been thoroughly cooked, but there is no absolute certain method of preventing the propagation of the animals, except thorough cooking.

The treatment should be as prompt as possible on discovering the symptoms. Rest and nursing were among the first essentials. In most cases diarrhea was one of the early symptoms, and its effect was beneficial, since many of the trichinæ were thus carried out of the bowels. Dr. Bridge cited the case of a sailor who ate a piece of partly-cooked sausage, and was shortly afterward brought to the dispensary for treatment. The diagnosis was that of a probable case of typhoid fever, and, about three weeks later, when Dr. Bridge took charge of the patient, the treatment had been for fever. He took a piece out of the arm of the man and found a large number of the worms in it. By this time he was very feeble, and he died about two weeks later. In this instance there was no diarrhea, and though the number taken into the stomach was originally small, they all probably multiplied, and none were carried off.

The final destination of the animals is principally in the muscles of the extremities, though they are found in small numbers in all of the muscular tissues, except the muscles of the heart. So far as known, none have ever been found there.—Chicago Tribune.

Three Safe Ways of Sending Money.

With all the facilities afforded the people for transmitting money with absolute safety, people will persist in sending money in the shape of greenbacks in letters.

Now, with all the chances to which a letter in the ordinary mail is exposed, it is inconceivable that a man would risk the loss of his money in that way, when there are three practically safe and secure ways of remitting it.

1. By a bank draft, which if stolen is of no use to the thief, who will very seldom run the additional risk of a forgery and being identified. Such draft, however, can only be obtained in towns where a bank is established.

2. By a money order. This is absolutely safe, the Government being responsible for the money. A money order, however, can only be obtained at money order offices, but their number is now so great that most small remittances can be made in this way.

3. By registered letter. This is also a perfectly safe method of sending money or valuables through the mails.

This idea we would like to impress upon every man, woman and child in the community: "Never send money in a letter in the ordinary way." It is not safe, and if money is lost there is no redress for the sender.

Either buy a draft at the bank, or a money order at the postoffice, or have your letter containing money registered.—Pittsburgh Commercial.

Pullman Catches a Pickerel.

Mr. Pullman, of Hatboro, doesn't feel as much interest in the study of natural history as he used to. He has a fine aquarium, and on Wednesday he thought he would spend half an hour studying the movements of the fish and other animals in it. He was particularly interested in the capers of a large pickerel, and he thought he would peep over the edge of the tank and see how the fish looked through the water. The nose of Mr. Pullman is long and red; and as it projected over the water it naturally attracted the attention of the pickerel. The fish darted toward it, snapped at it, and the next moment Mr. Pullman was running up stairs with a three-pound pickerel hanging to his nose. When they knocked it loose (the fish, not the nose), the nose began to swell, and it is now as large as a good-sized Bartlett pear. It will make a splendid nose for bait, but although Mr. Pullman is exceedingly fond of fish he will probably not use it continually for that purpose. He has soured on piscatorial sport.—Max Adeler.

Fickle Frenchmen.

The return to Paris of M. Emile Ollivicr is a striking illustration of the fickleness of popular feeling. A little over three years ago M. Ollivier was execrated by the French people. Now he not only appears again before the Parisian public, but proposes to deliver his inaugural address at the French Academy in the shape of a eulogy of the late Emperor Napoleon III. Well may the "Immortals" be dismayed at this proposition, and postpone the proposed reception of the ex-Minister at the Palais Mazarin.

Migration of Insects.

The following historical facts will give an idea of the enormous magnitude sometimes attained by migrating swarms of insects. After the defeat of Pultova, while retreating through Bessarabia, Charles the Twelfth's army was marching through a defile, when suddenly the men and horses were brought to a halt, being blinded by a living hail precipitated from a thick cloud which intercepted the light of the sun. The coming of the locusts was heralded by a whizzing sound like that which precedes a storm of wind, and the noise of their wings and of their bodies as they clashed together was greater than the roar of breakers on the sea-shore.

General Levaillant saw at Philippeville, Algeria, a cloud of locusts twenty to twenty-five miles in length, which, when it descended to the earth, formed a layer over an inch in thickness.

Toward the close of 1864 the cotton plantations of Senegal were destroyed, and a living cloud was seen to pass over the country from morning till night. The rate at which it moved showed that it was fifty mile long, and this was only the vanguard; for when the sun went down a still denser cloud was moving on. The English Traveler Barrow states that in Southern Africa, in 1797, these insects covered the ground to the extent of two square miles, and that, having been driven by the wind toward the sea, they formed a drift near the coast nearly four feet in depth and fifty miles long! After the wind changed the stench of their putrifying carcasses was recognized at the distance of one hundred and fifty miles.

The famine produced by the voracity of these acridians are not the only evils they cause to men and animals; a pestilential epidemic is oftentimes the result of the foul eminations from their rotting bodies. The invasions of these insects are veritable national calamities. In 1835 China was ravaged by them, and the sun and moon were obscured. Wherever they alighted the finest and richest crops were instantly devoured, and the fields left bare; even the contents of the barns were to a great extent consumed by them. The people fled in alarm to the mountains. In the submerged districts, where there were no crops to devour, the locusts penetrated into the houses, and destroyed the people's clothing. These ravages, which began in April, continued without interruption till the season of frost and snow.

Hard on Pimpkins.

Pimpkins! Don't you know Pimpkins? Then you don't know the daintiest, darlingest, most fashionable and most fastidious young self-admirer that ever lisped and languished in a drawing-room. Pimpkins was at Mrs. Bonnycastle's party last spring. One of the company was a blooming damsel from the country—a fresh, rosy-cheeked, bright-faced girl, over whom the impressible bachelors were in ecstasies. Pimpkins saw and admired. Pimpkins determined to make an impression. He stared at her through his quizzing-glass until he had stared her out of countenance. Then he approached her. She was engaged in knitting a pair of oversocks for one of Mrs. Bonnycastle's children.

"Aw," said Pimpkins. "Knitting, 'pon honah! Twooly industwious. Now, do you know I like to see a young lady industwious. It's a good sign. I like to encouwage industwy. Aw—what would you chawge to knit me a pair like that?"

"Socks or stockings, do you want, Mr. Pimpkins?"

"Ah! deuced if I exactly understand—but, aw—I want 'em to come up over the calf, you know."

"In that case," replied the blooming damsel, smiling a sweet, innocent smile, "I should have to estimate. I never knit a pair to cover one's whole body!"

Pimpkins was observed at the sideboard shortly afterward trying to eat a half-melted ice with a fork.

A Result of the Recent War in France.

War and the troubles which arise from it have often proved sufficient to reduce civilized communities almost to barbarism. If France had been in political distress a few months longer, many of her rural districts would have relapsed into the disagreeable primitiveness of ancient times. In the Departments of the Vosges and the Ardennes there now exists a foretaste of what might be expected in other parts of the country were men preoccupied with public affairs and their own distress. There has been no hunting for these seven years past in the localities above mentioned, and, as a consequence, wild boars and wolves have multiplied prodigiously, while packs of the latter animals have been devastating the eastern border. A similar condition of affairs existed after the close of the war of the succession in 1713. A colossal wolf, called the Beast of Gavendar, then made his appearance and did an incredible amount of damage. He was finally overtaken by a whole brigade of soldiers, accompanied by many peasants, and killed by discharging a brass field-piece. Before he was dispatched, he bit a Lieutenant in two. This year the hogs are playing the mischief with the crops, while the wolves are eating both live stock and farm laborers. It is consoling to know that this state of affairs cannot last long.

Brilliant Success.

It is permitted to few men or companies to achieve acknowledged superiority in any important position or business. The present generation has witnessed stupendous rivalry in several branches of industry, and notably the Sewing Machine business. Amid a multitude of competitors, steadily and surely the Wheeler & Wilson Company held their way from the beginning, upon fixed and honorable principles. Long since, their leading position in America was established. Abroad, at London, in 1862, they won the highest premiums; at Paris, in 1867, they distanced eighty-two competitors, and were awarded the highest premium, the only Gold Medal for Sewing Machines exhibited; and lastly, amid unparalleled competition, followed the splendid triumphs at Vienna, noted in our advertising columns.

WHY is a beefsteak like a locomotive? It's not of much account without its tender.

German Emigration.

One of the most important questions before the German Government to-day is the question of emigration. The number of Germans who have forsaken the fatherland within [illegible] has reached unprecedented figures. While from 1832 to 1839 the average number of German emigrants was only 12,000, and from 1865 to 1869, 107,670, the number in 1872 rose to 215,000, and the number for the first half of the year just past is greater than that for the corresponding half of the preceding year. A great dearth of agricultural and other laborers has been the consequence; and the Government has awakened to the importance of putting an end to the wholesale exodus, and the resulting loss to the country of both labor and capital.

It has been calculated that Germany loses on an average $150 in money with every emigrant. The amount of money brought to this country in 1856 by German emigrants was estimated at $15,000,000; and the total loss to Germany since 1819, $375,000,000, by far the greater portion of which left the country after 1832, the date at which emigration assumed any remarkable dimensions. During the last two years alone it has lost probably $64,500,000 in money by emigration. This is, however, only part of her loss. Her loss in labor is also to be taken into account, and, in estimating it, it must be borne in mind that it is the strongest and most enterprising of her laborers that emigrate. None but these leave their homes.

Drinking Warm Blood.

Mention was made recently of a gentleman in a very feeble state of health, who had been for some time at the Butchers' Abattoir in Brighton for medical treatment, simply drinking a half tumblerful of warm blood twice a day. This course the gentleman, Mr. C. H. Stickney, who is willing that his name shall appear, has followed until a week ago, having been there ten weeks, and during that time gained ten pounds in weight, and to use his own words, "My appetite is good; I sleep well, and feel like a new man, and I am soon to commence business again in Boston." He also says that there are ten or twelve others there, drinking the blood, all of whom are gaining under his treatment. One gentleman from Boston, a consumptive, so feeble that it was with difficulty he could get to this abattoir, is now able to handle an ax skillfully enough to "knock down a bullock." A lady from the city who has been sick six years, stricken with paralysis, is improving wonderfully by this "blood cure." A gratifying feature of this cure is that it is "without money and without price."—Boston Journal.

Clean Teeth.

If you will only keep your teeth clean they won't decay. The wonderful dentrifices which are sold at fabulous prices are greatly inferior to a simple mixture of soap and prepared chalk, with a little something like orris root; but the essential articles are soap and chalk. The druggist will prepare you enough for a quarter of a dollar to last a long time. When you go to bed, with a broad, soft tooth-brush go through the mouth thoroughly. If disposed to a bad mouth, you may repeat the dose in the morning. But the principal article for keeping the teeth clean is a toothpick, a soft goose quill, which you must use after eating, no matter though it is a piece of apple, and if convenient, after the pick use a mouthful of water to rinse from the teeth what the toothpick may have left.—Dio Lewis.

Eastern vs. Western Colleges.

Harvard College has 430 rooms to rent to students. One-third of the number rent from $200 to $360 apiece per annum. We know Western colleges on which the highest rent is $35 per annum—about one-third the lowest rent at Harvard (which is $44), and only eight rooms can be had for that price. If other expenses are on this scale, no wonder there is a movement of young men from New England toward some of our Western colleges, for economy's sake, as there is of Yankee young women in the same direction for the sake of as good an education as Eastern colleges offer exclusively to young men.—Inter-Ocean.

THE FARMERS.

The Work of Organization --How the Good Fight Progresses.

What the Grangers are Doing in Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Kansas, Wisconsin and Other Western States.

The Good Work in the East and South—The War Carried Into Canada, etc., etc.

ILLINOIS.

NINETEENTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

A convention of the farmers of the Nineteenth Congressional District was recently held at Fairfield, at which it was determined to hold a convention at Carmi, White county, on the 12th of August next, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress.

MADISON COUNTY FARMERS.

A large convention of the clubs, granges and other organizations of Madison county was lately held at Beshalt. The speeches made, all affirmed the necessity of political action to remedy the evils under which the farmers are now suffering.

COUNTY GRANGES.

The State Grange of Illinois is making arrangements to have County Granges formed after the manner provided for by the late National Grange. The matter will come up for final action and definite instructions at the meeting of the State Grange at Bloomington on the 16th of April.

IOWA.

GRANGES AIDING THEIR SUFFERING BRETHREN.

[illegible] from a letter from Sioux City: [illegible] Wedle, agent for the State Grange in the distribution of supplies to needy homesteaders in Northwestern Iowa, states that he has already distributed 800 tons of supplies, and helped over 1,000 families; and has expended in cash over $1,000 for freight, medical attendance, etc., where nothing but ready money would afford relief. This is over and above the purchases of provisions. The grange has on hand about $4,000, which will be expended in the purchase of grain, etc. He says there will be no relaxation by the grange on account of the State aid appropriated, as it is clearly understood all will be needed that can be done.

WISCONSIN.

FARMERS IN COUNCIL.

A largely-attended Agricultural Convention, under the auspices of the Northern Wisconsin Agricultural and Mechanical Association was recently held at Appleton. Papers were read on "Manuring Lands," by E. H. Benton, of Leroy, Dodge county; on "How to Elevate the Farmer's Calling," by W. J. Jennings, Rosendale; on "Grape-Growing," by Gen. N. T. Lund, of Madison; "Intelligence in Farming," by President Smith of Green Bay; on "Cheese Dairying," by Hiram Smith; on "The Science of Farming," by George E. Morrow, of Madison. The most important paper was by Eli Stilson, of Oshkosh, President of the State Agricultural Society, on "The Western Farmers' Movement," of which the following is an extract: "This movement will work one immense benefit in overcoming a great obstacle to successful culture among the farmers, viz: the isolation in which the farmers live. Conventions, farmers' clubs and granges break down the barriers between the farmers, and unite them in one common brotherhood.

"The farmer should not ignore the high duty he owes to his country by absolving himself from the duty of acting independently at times of elections. The farmers in the past have been bound too closely by party ties, and too often roped in by politicians to contend for some abstract principle to the neglect of crying wrongs which stare them in the face. Offices have been multiplied, salaries and fees increased out of all proportion. Speculation, bribery, corruption, and defalcation have become rampant, and we should fear that the Republic would fall as Rome did, by internal rottenness, were it not that, in some instances at least, slim justice is meted out to offenders. Tweed occupies a felon's cell, his colleagues are in prison or fled, and an honest Judge occupies the seat where bribery and corruption held high carnival. Even Congress shows signs of returning sanity by repealing some of its obnoxious laws, and paying some respect to people whose rights it has outraged. Corruption in high places is no new thing. Eighteen hundred years ago the corruptions of the Jews had entered into the Temple; but there came One with a scourge of small cords and drove them out. So may this Farmers' Movement by the farmers' votes assist to make a scourge of small cords that shall drive from the high places in the Republic all tainted with the corruption of Credit Mobilier, back-salary grabbers, railroad land grabbers, and aiders and abettors, and all others who have beggared, robbed, and nearly bankrupted the nation and many of the States. Let no person receive the farmers' vote who has the taint of corruption on his garments. By so acting we shall not only lighten the burden that is now weighing us down, but may help to transmit to our children the blessing of a free country."

CO-OPERATION.

"A letter from Fond du Lac says: "Fond du Lac and Winnebago counties have each about twenty granges, and are still organizing more. A year ago the granges in these counties were organized into County Councils for the purpose of better concentration of efforts in co-operative purchasing, and under their guidance arrangements were made at Fond du Lac, Ripon, and other points, where members of the Order have ever since made purchases of everything in the line of dry goods, clothing, hats and caps, boots and shoes, hardware, groceries, etc. These arrangements have embraced as many houses as there are items mentioned, and have proved entirely satisfactory on both sides."

MICHIGAN.

HOW THE GOOD WORK HAS PROGRESSED.

Extract from an address by State Deputy King, at Battle Creek:

"A new history of organization must now be written. Hardly a year ago Mr. King's connection with the grange movement began. In his first efforts he was welcomed by but few farmers. They had been fleeced and deceived so often that they were shy of any new movement with which they were not fully conversant. But a few were gathered in here and there and organizations begun. It was a rare thing then to find more than fifteen or twenty belonging to one grange; now fifty could hardly be called an average. He could report the organization of one hundred granges, which gave him the paternity of a large family. With all those engaged in the work of organizing, working equally hard, the demand could not be supplied. The cry was 'come and help us here' from all parts of the State, and requests had even been sent from other States for help from Michigan. He thought this looked well for the future of the order. On the 15th and 16th of last April the State Grange of Michigan was organized; now there are 280 subordinate granges under its jurisdiction. Many who ought to be active workers in the movement were kept away by blind prejudice, but, step by step, this was being overcome. One idea which many seemed to have at the outset was that the farmers were not competent to manage an organization of so broad a scope. He said that a few months before he called at a postoffice to procure a money order in payment for a charter, when he was asked the question whether people who were not farmers were admitted into the order. He replied that only those directly interested in agriculture were allowed to become members; thereupon the postmaster remarked that some outsiders must be admitted, as the farmers had not brains enough to run the thing themselves. He closed with a bright picture of the order."

KANSAS.

RAPID GROWTH OF THE ORDER.

[Extract from the Address of State Master Hudson.]

The growth of our order since our last meeting has been very rapid; and the information from all sections of our State excites the admiration and wonder of its most sanguine friends, while those outside of the order have beheld our growth with undisguised amazement. Since our last meeting closing first of August, during an interim of six months there has been organized in our State 575 subordinate granges, with a membership of 15,500; and so far as we are able to learn there is a rapid increase in the number or applications for dispensations. These results have been achieved through the instrumentality of our deputies, and to these faithful men who have done their work so nobly and so effectively, we owe a lasting debt of gratitude.

WHAT THOSE GRANGES MEANS.

Mt. Zion Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry took charge of a member sick of typhoid fever. He was poor and uncomfortably housed. The Patrons took charge of him, gave him comfortable quarters, dressed him in new clothes, and have been watching over him ever since.—Spirit of Kansas.

THE STATE GRANGE.

This body, which was in session at Topeka recently, was a remarkable body of men. The number present was about 300, though under the plan of representation adopted, there were but 168 delegates voting. A large amount of business was transacted, and all harmoniously and generally satisfactorily done. The ability displayed by the generality of the members, both as public speakers, debaters, and in executive qualities, was above the average, and illustrated the fact that the farmers of Kansas are in no wise behind their fellow-citizens of other vocations in those respects.

VIRGINIA.

THE WORK OF ORGANIZATION.

The following card in the Petersburg Index gives a hopeful account of grange matters in Virginia:

"Since the organization of the State Grange and the election to office of some of Virginia's truest and best sons, it's success cannot be any longer doubted or its purpose questioned. While it was true that it had met with opposition from some of the leading newspapers of the State, its progress has been onward. * * We confidently believe that in twelve months from this time every county in the State of Virginia will be represented in the State Grange, and in many counties every township. And even then we can confidently say that not the slightest interference will be had with the politics of the country. We have for our object higher aims and nobler purposes—the moral and social elevation of our people. We have united together in a common brotherhood for our mutual protective interests and advancement, and this we have done without the slightest infringement upon the rights of others, and by the help of God and our own strong arm, we expect to go on till we kindle a flame of brotherly love and bind together under one common banner the farmers of Virginia."

MAINE.

ORGANIZATION OF GRANGES.

Deputy O. D. Hinckley, of Wisconsin, is engaged in organizing Farmers' Granges in Maine. Several are already organized, and it is anticipated that next month a State Grange will be in operation.

CANADA.

THE GOOD WORK ACROSS THE BORDER.

The Toronto Mail, of a recent date, says: "Eben Thompson, agent of the United States Patrons of Husbandry, formed a grange near London, in Westminster township, in this province. Mr. Thompson intends canvassing the province, and establishing granges wherever practicable. From the encouragement received he expects to meet with immense success."

A VOICE FROM THE EAST.

THE FARMERS' STRIKE.

[From the New Haven (Conn.) Union.]

The strike of the farmers and workingmen of this country, against the oppressions of the monopolists, will, in future, be looked upon as the greatest movement of modern times. Subsidized newspapers and awe-stricken plunderers may howl about the exclusiveness and secrecy of the two organizations which are welding the industrial classes together; but the form is not what troubles them so much as the fact that they are thoroughly arousing to a sense of their duty. Even the New York Nation, a paper not particularly devoted to the interests of the producing class, is compelled to remark that the farmers and producers of all kinds have been oppressed by having an unreliable and changeable judiciary, corrupt and incompetent legislatures, and good laws which were not enforced, and bad laws which were enforced. They have been oppressed, too, by a monstrous and mis-shapen tariff, so complicated that its operation on the actual industry of the country is almost as mysterious and little understood as the perturbations in the earth's orbit by an undiscovered planet. They have been oppressed just as the consumer of milk has been oppressed by adulteration, just as the coal consumer has been oppressed by the Pennsylvania monopolists.

[From the same paper.]

The New York World is catching at straws. It reads in the signs of the times a terrible smashing up of old cliques and old customs. Its patron Belmont, the greedy agent of the more greedy Rothschilds, is afraid that a new deal is at hand, and that the rotten financial system now in vogue, and the still more rotten one which is advocated, that of specie payment, will be consigned, along with the party which he represents, to political oblivion. One desperate effort is to be made to postpone the final smash-up, with the hope that if even a concession is made to the people in the way of resolutions, enough monopolists will ride into power to prevent the carrying out of reform measures.

Let no one be deceived. The farmers of the West, and workingmen of the East, are in dead earnest. The questions which they advocate are of great moment. No dilly-dallying with political hacks and public plunderers can be tolerated. The Democrat and Republican parties must battle the people directly, and with principles expressly laid down, which fully represent the sentiments of the leaders, or one of them must disband, and turn its forces into the ranks of the people, and form a rear guard in the great battle for liberty.

AT LARGE.

WHAT THE GRANGERS HAVE DONE.

Colman's Rural World has the following correct summary of what the Grangers have done:

"The influence of the Grangers" movement have been felt all over the land. It has penetrated into the innermost recesses of every monetary institution in this country. It has brought fictitious, inflated values down to real values. It has put a stop to the operations of stock-gamblers and swindlers. It has brought many down from the high stilts on which they have been taking colossal strides, to the solid earth, where they walk very much as other common mortals. It has stopped the spirit of speculation. It has given credit its death blow. It has made more wary and cautious every business man. It has poured hot shot into the ranks of corrupt rings, until their numbers are thinned and they are left harmless for evil. In has put a stop to extravagance and recklessness in the expenditure of money for private or public purposes. It has killed off the whole race of salary grabbers. It has made the very word "back-pay" ignominious. It has been more effective in slaying politicians than Sampson was in slaying Philistines. It has filled the very air with the spirit of reform. The year 1873 will be a memorable one. A new era will date from it. It was inaugurated by the farmers. But the work which they sat out to do has only begun. There is an Augean stable to cleanse. The purity that existed in the early days of the republic must be restored. Every farmer must gird up his loins and prepare to bear his part in the contest against the corruption of the times.

OLD MONOPOLY.

[From the Western Rural.]

Resist!—resist the forging chain
That would your free-born limbs enclasp!
Drive from the heart the fearful pain,
The hardened steel, the cutting rasp
Of old Monopoly!

Resist the capital that bears
With leaden weight upon your breast,
That sows your children's minds with tares,
And fills their souls with deep unrest,
Through old Monopoly!

Resist extortion's pointed shaft,
The privateering railway's power,
That rakes the farmers fore and aft,
Seizing their corn, and pork, and flour,
Through old Monopoly!

Down with the proud plow-making firms,
Reaping where they have never sown!
Down with their base, dictating terms!
Resist till both are overthrown,
With old Monopoly!

Resist the politician's power,
Who have for years the people sold!
And usher in the welcome hour
When truth and right the sway shall hold
O'r all Monopoly!

Glad day, whose beams of dawning light
Shall hail the brotherhood of man,
Dispel oppression's gloomy night,
And gild the banner in the van,—
"No more Monopoly!"

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

There will be gory work when the elections for the Forty-fourth Congress begin—a perfect slaughter of the innocents. Provident statesmen of grabbing proclivities may as well be making friends with the mammon of unrighteousness while it is yet called to day. They have a marketable value at present; after next year, neither Tom Scott nor any other wide-awake man of business will give a dollar a dozen for them.—Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.

Lively Scene in a City Council.

[Extract from the proceedings of the Chicago Common Council, March 2.]

Mayor Colvin rose from his seat, and said that he would appoint, under the powers of the Mayor's act, Dr. O. A. Paoli as City Physician.

Ald. Campbell rose to a point of order. It was that the appointment could not be entertained until it had been reduced to writing.

Mayor C.—I have no question at all about my authority.

Ald. Cullerton—I will move that the appointment be postponed for two weeks.

Mayor C.—I refuse to entertain the motion. You can't postpone for a longer time than one week.

Ald. Cullerton—Mr. Mayor, you can't come that over this Council. You have no right to dictate to this body in that manner.

Ald. Campbell—You can't act in two capacities. More than that, you can't override this Council, violate a palpable rule, and force your ipse dixit down the throats of the Aldermen. I insist on the appointment being reduced to writing.

Mayor C.—If I am wrong, you have your remedy.

Ald. Cullerton—(excitedly)—Will the Mayor have the nomination reduced to writing.

Mayor C.—I decline to entertain your motion.

Ald. Cullerton—(vehemently)—You have got your foot into it now and cannot withdraw.

Mayor C.—(in thunder tones)—I'd like to see you prevent me.

Cries of "Leave the chair," "Let us adjourn," "Keep order," "Damned fools, why don't you keep your mouths shut and let one person talk at a time," "Down with the tyrant," "Mayor, stick to your point," "Don't budge an inch."

The Mayor rapped his gavel in a most vigorous manner, and cries of "Don't smash that table into splinters," "Spare the gavel," "Throw it at the heads of some of the boisterous Aldermen and make them sit down."

Mayor C.—(rapping the table and excitedly)—The question is upon confirmation.

Ald. Quirk—What right have you to make rules for this Council?

Ald. Cullerton then took the floor and spoke of the demerits of Dr. Paoli for the positon of City Physician.

Ald. Schaffner—Ald. Cullerton, you ought to be ashamed of yourself to tell such villainous lies. You can't prove them.

Ald. Cullerton—Yes I can, and more than that I can prove that the doctor is a lazy and inefficient man. He is a fraud of the worst kind, and the idea of making him a city physician is preposterous. I now move that the Clerk be instructed to put the nomination in writing.

Mayor C.—(in a loud voice)—I won't entertain the motion. I've told you once, and you might as well understand it first as last.

Ald. Campbell—The motion is in order, and the President is bound to entertain it. Do you propose to insult this Council and force upon it your dictum? If that is your game, the Council will not tolerate it. We are not a set of asses, and you can't treat us with impunity as such. Now, if you propose (with wild gesticulations and in loud and sonorous tones) to override the Council in that manner, I will certainly override you. You can't act in such a damnable manner.

Mayor C.—(savagely)—I will do it just as long as I please!

Ald. Campbell—(showing his teeth, and with clenched fists)—If that is the case, I call upon every member of this Council to rise up against you and drag you down from that chair. You are an arrant tyrant, a usurper, a miserable "sucker," and a disgrace to this city.

Mayor C.—(leaning over the table and looking daggers at the Alderman)—Will you take your seat?

Ald. Campbell—No, sir, and you can't make me. I am a member of this Council and have a right to the floor, you miserable tyrant. Put me down if you can. You have got hold of the wrong man. [Great tumult and excitement.]

Ald. Schaffner—Put down the liar. Make him take his seat.

Mayor C.—(pounding the table and calling out in stentorian tones)—If you don't take your seat, I will have you placed under arrest.

Ald. Campbell—I defy you to do it. If you don't come down from your position, the Council will rise up and take you.

Mayor C.—(still standing, and plying the gavel)—Will you stop your noise and take your seat?

Ald. Campbell—I call upon this Council to assert its rights against this arrogant tyrant. I——

Mayor C.—Officers, will you arrest the man immediately? I bid you take him, and bear him away to lock-up.

Ald. Campbell—I defy you or your officers to arrest me. They dare not place their fingers upon me. You tyrant——

Mayor C.—(raising the gavel as if about to hurl it at the Alderman)—Will the officers arrest the Alderman? I bid you take him at once.

The officers advanced with flurried faces and great trepidation. Just as they were about to close in upon the Alderman, a half dozen Aldermen sprang to their feet, rushed over to Campbell, who still held the floor and continued his diatribe, and held them at bay. [Wild excitement and a rush to the railing by the crowded lobby.]

Ald. Campbell—I defy the officers to drag me away. (Turning to the officers and finding them at a distance.) There, I knew they would not lay a finger on me, you arrant coward. I——

Mayor C.—(pointing alternately to the officers and the Aldermen)—Will or will you not arrest the man?

Ald. Campbell—I denounce you as a usurper, and I insist that it is the duty of this Council to depose you. You can't browbeat us and make us accept it peaceably.

The officers made a movement toward the Alderman, but Campbell was still surrounded by the Aldermen, and they retired.

Mayor C.—(on seeing their disposition to arrest the Alderman)—There, I know you will not disregard my orders.

Ald. Campbell—Yes, they know better than to arrest me.

Are You a Slave to Strong Drink? Then Read This and be Cured.

Dr. Brunton, an English physician, has been writing to the British Messenger on the temptation of drunkenness caused by the craving for stimulants felt by some people. He furnishes prescriptions which he believes will overcome this craving and which are to be obtained by his readers at the nearest druggist's. Here are two of them: 1st. Put a quarter of an ounce of sulphate of iron and half an ounce of magnesia in an ordinary quart bottle, and fill it up with peppermint water. A wine-glassful to be taken three or four times a day. Instead of the peppermint water an infusion of dried peppermint may be used. It may be made stronger or weaker according to the taste of the patient, and should be allowed to cool before it is added to the sulphate of iron and magnesia. A little gum-arabic or gum-tragacanth added to the mixture will keep the magnesia better suspended, but this may prefectly well be omitted. The bottle should be shaken before the dose is poured out.

2d. Take an ounce of quassia chips and pour over them as much cold water as will fill three quart bottles. Let them stand an hour and then strain. Add to the strained liquid six and a half fluid drachms of the solution of iron, sold under the name of "Liquor Ferri Perchloridi." Two tablespoonfuls or half a wine-glassful to be taken three or four times a day. The iron solution may be measured out with a teaspoon, one teaspoonful being equal to one fluid drachm; but teaspoons vary in size, and it is therefore better to use a glass measure, which may be bought at any chemist's. No doubt there are many cases in which chalybeate is indicated, but it may be questioned whether it would not be wiser of those who wish to try the plan to ask a medical man first. The value of such advise is indicated by the following remarks appended by Dr. Brunton to the recipes we have quoted.

"When the person's tongue is pale, flabby, and marked with the teeth at the edges, the second prescription may be found more useful than the first. When there is any tendency to flatulence the first should be taken a quarter of an hour before meals; and if either of them causes uneasiness when taken on an empty stomach, they should be used immediately after meals. In the presence of a robust habit or florid complexion, the following prescription may be found more serviceable than either of the preceding. Add one ounce of bruised gentian [illegible] boiling water. Let this stand four hours; then strain off the liquor, and add two drachms of carbonate of ammonia. A wine-glassful may be taken two or three times a day when craving comes on. It may be used by all who are addicted to the use of intoxicating drinks.

Some Anecdotes of President Tyler.

One of the most prominent traits of Mr. Tyler's character was the assiduity with which he made flattering promises to persons who held office when he came in power, and the cheerful rapidity and perseverance with which he broke them. When he was made President, by Harrison's death, Jonathan Coddington was Postmaster of New York, Mr. Tyler sent a letter asking Mr. Coddington why he had not renewed his bond, and when that gentleman replied that he expected a successor would shortly be appointed, the President assured him that nothing of the kind was contemplated. Mr. Coddington renewed his bond, and about a week afterward another Postmaster walked in and took possession of the office.

During the Tyler regime the Madisonian was the official organ, and supported the President with a fealty that was delightful to behold. Mr. Tyler gave all the office-holders to understand that it would be to their advantage to immediately subscribe to that paper. Of course, everybody who had the slightest regard for continuance in office, and who desired his head on his shoulders, sent the subscription price ($10) to Washington, and took the Madisonian home as a gentle narcotic.

A friend of Mr. Tyler's wrote the President's life; and the latter, wishing to have his gentle virtues understood and appreciated by his admiring countrymen, caused bales of the "Life" to be dispatched to all the public offices, and desired everyone in the service of the Government to buy a copy. The request was so overcomingly modest that it could not be understood by the gross natures of the office-holders, and many of them openly rebelled. So wide-spread was mutiny that numbers of the bales of books were sent back to Washington, the President not daring to push the matter.

A Birmingham manufacturer, while in London the other day, saw in a hotel a man approaching directly toward him. At the same time he was moving toward the stranger. He stepped on one side, and found the stranger doing the same. Then he stepped in an opposite direction, but the stranger did the same. He approached nearer, and in some vexation said, "Go on, sir!" and then he saw he was exhorting an amirable reflection of himself. This is not a remarkable occurrence; in fact, it is a frequent happening; but the point we desire to make is, that in every case the victim is a man. And the reason a man is caught in that way is simply because he has so little to do with a mirror, that when he does see a reflection of himself he naturally fails to recognize it. Ahem!

Brass versus Steel.—Robert Hall, the celebrated preacher and writer, could make a sharp repartee upon occasion. It is related of him that while in his prime, and before the painful disease which afflicted him for so many years had come upon him, he paid his addresses to Ann Steele, the distinguished postess, but was met with a decided repulse on her part. One evening in company, not long after his unsuccessful courtship, he was rallied by a sprightly maiden, who said to him, "My dear Mr. Hall, why do you not try again? We are not all cold and selfish. If you have courage, you may find somewhere a heart that is not all steel?" "No," replied Hall, looking unutterable things; "but I might find what would be far worse—heart minus and face all brass!"

MAUDE.

Dear me! she can't wear it at all!
Just to think how she grows!
Look, papa! you'd hardly suppose
I made that dress late in the fall.

Outgrowing her baby-clothes so!—
If she only would stay
Our dear little darling alway,
And never away from us grow!

Pretty pet! in the [illegible] "to be"
Could we look in her eyes
As pure as the tint of the skies,
And say, "Little Maude is just three!"

Could cradle-glee gladden our ears—
And her prattle of words,
More charmful than singing of birds,
Ripple sweetly along the years!

But no; in a pitiless whirl
How the seasons go past!
Our baby is growing so fast
She'll soon be our "dear little girl!"

Afar in the future it seems—
When thought of another
Far dearer than father or mother,
With love-light will halo her dreams.

When some one will win her away—
With the old tale of love,
When trusting his vows, she will prove
Her faith at the altar some day.

Ah, well! she's our little one yet;
Though she's growing so fast
Her babyhood cannot long last;
Come—we'll take it off now—sweet pet!

There—run and tell papa—"This dress
Will not answer at all
For a baby so plump and so tall,"
And he'll buy you a new one—I guess.

Humor.

Head-light—Bright eyes.

The nick of time—A wrinkle.

A Baptist disease—Dip-theory.

A beggarly shame—Robbing a pauper.

Why is a person who never lays a wager as bad as a regular gambler? Because he is no better.

You are from the country, are you not, sir?" asked a city clerk of a Quaker who had just arrived. "Yes." "Well, here is an essay on the rearing of calves." "That," said Aminadab, as he turned to go, "thee had best present to thy mother."

A certain lawyer had his portrait taken in his favorite attitude—standing, with one hand in his pocket. His friends and clients all went to see it, and everybody exclaimed, "Oh, how like! It's the very picture of him." An old farmer only dissented. "'Ta'nt like!" Exclaimed everybody, "Just show us where 'ta'n't like." "'Ta'n't—no, 'ta'n't!" responded the farmer. "Don't you see he has got his hand in his own pocket! 'tweuld be as like again if he had it in somebody's else."

A Sad Ending.

In the Wiertz Museum, near Brussels, is a picture of Napoleon Bonaparte, representing him in Hades, which is thus described: "He is surrounded by those whose lives he caused to be sacrificed in his attempts to conquer the world. Bloody hands are thrust out toward him, and horribly mutilated bodies and dismembered limbs, still dripping with gore, strew the ground. Clinging to him, with faces expressive of anguish or fury, are the wives and sisters of those whom he has slain; yet he is represented standing in the well-known attitude, with folded arms, calmly gazing into futurity, and heeding naught of the scene about him. His face betokens deep thought. The whole picture is terrible in its significance."

The Yankee Abroad.

A Frenchman, visiting Napoleon's grave, wrote on the tomb:

"Napoleon was a statesman
And a soldier brave and true."

An Englishman, visiting the same spot, wrote below:

"But Wellington did lick him
On the field of Waterloo."

The Yankee arriving after the other two, and not being able to let the opportunity of vaunting his country's fame slip, put his hand under his coat-tail, stroked his beard, and, after a little cogitation, wrote:

"But better still and greater far,
And tougher than shoe leather,
Was our George Washington, the chap
That could lick 'em both together."

Livingstone.

It seems pretty certain that not only the remains of Dr. Livingstone will be recovered and brought home to an honored resting-place, but that there will be no difficulty in getting the journals in which the illustrious traveler has written the story of his discoveries. Dr. Livingstone, it is ascertained, was on his return journey to the coast and England when he was seized with his last illness, and had probably completed the exploration on which he set out, seen the ancient fountains at the west of the great water-shed he has mapped, visited the copper mines of Katanga, and the people who dwell in caves.

HERE THEY COME.

Bound for the Great Southwest.

We have, in the last week, observed several of the tangible signs of the onward movement towards the lands of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad.

Three parties of the people have passed through our city in the last week, numbering from fifteen to thirty each, from the States of Iowa, Indiana and Michigan, all representative men of the best type of farmers, who are on a prospecting tour, in search of homes for themselves and many friends and neighbors. By thus forming themselves into bodies of twenty or thirty, they obtain a reduced rate for a trip of examination, but the bulk of the people who are daily seen on their southwestward journey, do their land hunting in couples or singly, which, after all, is the best method though it costs a little more.

The class of people who are now coming in to occupy our heretofore undeveloped country, is well represented by Mr. Gideon Burgess, whom we had the pleasure of meeting on Tuesday last. He purchased on that day, from the A. T. & S. F. R. R., four and a half sections of land, (three thousand acres), and has closed his contract for the transportation of four thousand eight hundred sheep and two hundred head of cattle from his present home in Newton county, Ind., to his new home in Harvey county. Mr. Burgess has commenced his plowing, and one of his houses is already erected. He has been cultivating one of the finest farms in Indiana, (sixteen hundred acres), and says he will have a much finer one in Kansas. He is a me is a man of large capital and business experience, and his improvements will be of a thorough character.

Last evening there passed through our city two special trains, which had come from Illinois, bound to various points in the upper Arkansas Valley. They trains were made up of twenty-two car loads of household goods, horses and cattle, wagons, agricultural implements and immigrants' outfits; one baggage car, filled with baggage, and four coaches, containing one hundred and eighty of the thrifty people of Illinois.

The trains were made up on the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad, and came through from St. Louis to Atchison via the Missouri Pacific Railroad, and were taken from thence over the A. T. & S. F R. R. without change of cars.

This, we are informed, is the first of a series of trains that will be run from the various points in the East during the coming season so as to more fully meet the wants of the large immigration which is destined to quickly settle valley of the upper Arkansas.

Authoritative History of the Farmers' Movement.

The Groundswell.—A History of the origin, aims, and progress of the Farmers' Movement. Embracing an authoritative account of farmers' Clubs, Granges, etc.,; a full discussion of the Transportation question and other grievances; and a history of Industrial Education in the United States. Together with sketches of the lives of prominent leaders, etc., etc., etc.,... By Hon. Johnathan Perriam, Editor Western Rural, Vice President Ills. State Board of Agriculture, etc., etc. Published by Hannaford & Thompson, Chicago.

The above is the comprehensive title of a book fresh from the press, that merits more than common praise. It is emphatically a book with a mission. A reliable history of the Farmers' Movement is, perhaps, the greatest popular want of the day in the the way of books. Here we have it a genuine, authentic, thoroughly endorsed record of the great popular uprising against monopoly.

We notice that Hon. W. C. Flagg, President of the Illinois State Farmers' Association, contributes a highly interesting chapter on the Railroad and transportation question. The work is likewise backed up by a great array of commendatory letters from such strong and widely known names as Gen. W. H. Jackson, of Tenn., President of the National Agricultural Congress; John Davis, Esq., President of the Kansas State Farmers' Co-operative Association; Hon. M. L. Dunlap the well know "Rural," of the Chicago Tribune; Dr. C. V. Riley, State Entomologist of Missouri; Wm. Saunders, who was the first Master of the National Grange; Hon. Norman J. Colman, editor of Colman's Rural World, St. Louis; and many others.

The Groundswell is a fairly printed, profusely illustrated, and handsomely bound volume of 576 Crown Octavo pages. The publishers are well know for promptness and reliability, and have undoubtedly made a great hit. Thousands of people will buy this book, who would not think of investing a cent in any other.

It is sold by Distributers (sometimes called Agents) who obtain the book direct from the publishers, and bring it direct to the customers very door. For the benefit of such of our readers as may wish to correspond with them, we give the publishers address in full: HANNAFORD & THOMPSON, 193 East Washington St., Chicago.

Don't Do It.—Don't expect a man to practice all he preaches. Eminent physicians will not swallow their own nostrums.

Don't imagine that you are better than your fellows. There are no reserved seats in Heaven.

Don't let your wealth inflate you. Rich men sometimes die of small-pox.

Don't spend your days in vain regrets. The deepest wounds will leave but the faintest scar, if from this hour you do your life work well.

Don't expect your pastor to be perfect. Charcoal will mar the beauty of a lilly.

Don't eat fish for braid food. A hen never scratches for chickens before they are hatched.

Don't make a great noise in the world. A train is not moved by the sound of the whistle.

Don't spend much time in a adorning your person. A wax figure can't recite the multiplication table.

Don't dream that your child was born to adorn a profession. You can't make a fence post out of a shoe peg.

Don't expect an editor to be very devotional on Sunday. Every Saturday night there's the "devil" to pay at the office.

Don't bother your brains about the "acute angles" of a billiard table. Better take your cue from an industrious mechanic.

Don't fill your head with dime novels. Old paper is worth two cents per pound. —Logansport Pharos.

MY TWO LOVERS.

BY CORINNIE ABRAMS.

"A man who is unkind to his mother and sisters will ill-treat his wife."

My Aunt Sarah, who made this sage observation, was a shrewd, sarcastic old maid who, for fourteen years, had filled the place of parents friends and counsellor to her orphan niece. It had been no sinecure, this post of hers; for I was a frail child, and my position as heiress made the office of chaperon to my young ladyism an anxious trust.

"Auntie,"—a trembling at my heart made my voice unsteady,—"auntie, dear, of whom are you thinking?"

"Of two men, Lelia, who are courting my niece. That's an old fashioned word, dear, but I'm an oldfashioned woman. I mistrust Stephen Grey, my child; there is a tone in his voice, when he speaks to his mother, that sounds unnatural and unmanly."

"Stephen Grey," I cried. "Why auntie, he is the pink of courtesy! And how beautifully he speaks of his widowed mother."

"I mistrust him, nevertheless, Lelia I like Paul Rivers better; he is rough, but frank. Ahem! blushing, Lelia?"

"Not a bit of it, auntie. Now, my sage monitor, tell me one thing; when a poor girl sees a man only as he chooses her to see him, in his company dress and most fascinating manners, how can she judge of his domestic virtues? I cannot visit Mr. Grey at home, or Mr. Rivers, either, for that matter."

"Lelia, will you do an errand for me?"

"Certainly I will, aunt."

"I wish to inquire the character of a girl who applied for a situation here yesterday; she has lived with Mrs. Grey and with Mrs. Rivers also."

"Ah, auntie, I think I see!"

"Do you? Run off for your bonnet then."

Away I went. I was sometime dressing, as I took a mental survey of my two admirers, while I donned my walking suit.

Stephen Grey was a handsome man, who dressed in faultless taste, and who had the most courteous manners I had ever seen. He spoke of women as being too bright and good for every day life, and treated me certainly as a sweet creature to be respectfully adored at a distance. No words can express the difference with which he treated my aunt and myself, and the loving devotion he had expressed, when speaking of his widowed mother and sisters, had often brought tears to my eyes. I knew that he was poor; but I thought him talented, and capable of making his mark in the world, were the means of starting fairly within his power.

This was my most ardent lover.

Then—and here I felt my cheeks burn, even though I were alone—I thought of Paul Rivers, his honest, frank face was only saved from positive ugliness by its most brilliant pair of large black eyes, and his figure amply atoned for lack of beauty in his features. He was talled and finely formed, and his carriage was erect and manly. Reserved and almost bashful in his manner, he had never spoken one word of love; but there was a softness in his tone, and a flush on his brow, when he spoke to me, which told the tale without need of spoken words. Others might seek the golden treasure my father's will had left to me; but if Paul ever spoke of love to me, I felt sure that no sordid hope of winning an heiress would prompt him.

"Her name is Margaret O'Nell," said my aunt, at parting. "Be sure to inquire if she is a good ironer."

"I will. Good-by aunt."

I went first to the house of my handsome beau. It was early in the day, ten or eleven o'clock, when I rang Mrs. Grey's bell. The servant ushered me into the parlor. I merely said that a lady wished to inquire the character of a servant, and drawing my veil closer about my face, went into the room.

While waiting for Mrs. Grey to come down, I heard a familiar voice on the stairs. I say familiar, though the gentle, winning tone it had always assumed in my presence was changed for a high, discordant, scolding one.

"Where the (I omit the oaths) is my breakfast?"

"I am coming, Stephen," said his mother; "but there is a lady waiting for me."

"Let her wait."

"Did you see Mr. Lee, Stephen?"

"No!" (Another oath.)

"I am afraid you will lose that situation."

"Well it don't matter. I intend to get the situation of a husband, to an heiress."

"But that is very uncertain, Stephen," said his mother.

And I, in the parlor below, mentally agreed with her.

"Where's Marcia? Why in thunder don't she get my breakfast?"

"She is making Mrs. Smith's collars; she is in a hurry; if you would secure that situation, Stephen, your mother and sisters would not have to work so hard."

"Marcia might as well get used to it, for neither she nor Patty are going to loaf on my wife's money. I suppose we must take you; but the girls must shift for themselves."

I had heard enough; from the sound of the voices, I knew the speakers were now in the kitchen; so I softly crossed the entry, and made a quick exit by the front door.

Should I go home? Somehow the thought that I may hear a similar conversation at Mrs Rivers' home gave me a faint feeling; but I conquered the nonsensical weakness, and then turned into G—— street

The front door of the house I sought stood wide open. I knew it was wrong but I entered the house unannounced, and, crossing the entry went to the library; the sitting room was next it, and there I knew I should find Mrs. Rivers, who was a dear friend of my aunt's.

As I opened the library door, Mrs. Rivers' voice fell upon my ears.

"My dear boy you are right. You must indeed go."

Go! Where? My heart stood still.

"It is a lucrative situation, and will enable me to give you and the boys many of the comforts you have lacked since father died."

"But I shall miss you very much Paul."

"It is best for me to go mother dear. I have not told you before, but I had better leave the city for awhile. I love where my love if spoken, would appear a mere seeking for wealth. I cannot woo an heiress; to live upon my wife's money, is revolting to every feeling manhood No; were the case reversed and were Lelia Howard poor, she would soon know how deeply I love her. If she remains single until I can win fame and fortune, she may know it later, but now"

Was it indelicate; unmaidenly, I know not, but I passed the threshold between the library and sitting room, and said—

"Now, Paul, she—"

And here like a little idiot, I began to cry. Crying, as a rule, is not becoming; but Paul seemed rather to admire it. There was a general sobbing and embracing; and when Aunt Sarah, came, two hours later, to find her lost niece, she could only say,—

"Well, my dear, I always liked Paul, and I think he will make you happy."

Stephen Grey, some time later, married an heiress, after all, a widow lady, with a son about two years older than her bridegroom. His sisters Marcia and Patty take in sewing, and his mother keeps boarding house.

WHITE VS. BLACKMAILING.

"I AM THE ONE WHO WAS BLED."

A Letter of Vindication.

To the Editor of the Gazette.

Your article in your issue of March the 12th, giving an account of the blackmailing disclosures, at Washington, before the committee of Ways and Means, is timely. It is an excellent feature that these professional informers and blackmailers, as well as the means they have resorted to, to accomplish their villainous designs. In New York city alone over three thousand five hundred merchants have been blackmailed from $2,000 to $271,000 each. It depends upon the wealth and resources of their victim, as to how much they would bleed him. Talk about open-handed highwaymen or horse thieves! They are gentlemen when compared with these blackmailers. They take the chance of getting shot for their conduct; not so not so with the blackmailer and informer. All he desires is a little knowledge of some trifling fact which may be construed against the accused. It matters not how trifling it is, or how inconsistent it may appear, their false swearing supplies the rest, in order to make a semblance of fraud. The case you refer to as having occurred here in our city, is mine. I am the one who was bled out of the $2,000, and Thedore Dorr is the informer. With your kind permission I wish to give a short account of the proceedings. Heretofore I have kept silent since I felt, that should I attempt to explain my own isolate case to the public, they would feel that I was over anxious, and desirous of appearing innocent. But since the recent exposures now going on, at Washington, of hundreds of cases, some of them far more oppressive than mine, I hope the following revelation will so explain their nefarious operations, that the public may judge of the justness of their proceedings.

In 1869, A. K. Dorr, the father of this Theodore Dorr, came to me asking a situation. He stated he could get nothing to do, and was so hard up he begged me to give him something to do. I really did not need his services, but I had known him at Nashville, Tennessee, during the war, when he was in better circumstances, and out of pure kindness gave him a situation, with a salary of $18 per week, I gave him his board, and took him into my family and treated him as one of them. In the fall of that year he was anxious I should take his son Theodore into my employ. He stated he could get his son nothing to do in Lima but to follow the occupation of bar-tender in saloons, and he would much prefer him be under my care, as he was going to the bad. I took him into my employ, as I had taken his father, out of kindness to him, and gave the younger brother employment from a like feeling.

At that time all smoking tobacco was sold by the pound, loosely packed in barrels. It was not put up as it is now, in ¼, ½, and 1 pound packages, and each package stamped as is now required. The government ordered manufacturers to make this change and stamp each package according to its weight. Previous to this it was stamped as a whole amount on the end of the barrel, and the retailer sold out of the barrel as he desired. At the time this change took effect, all the retailers had more or less on hand, in the old form loose in barrels, and the Government, in order to make the working of the law uniform, issued an order that all retailers should purchase stamps from the Collector and stamp the tobacco as the new law required, and when they had purchased a sufficient quantity of stamps, to stamp what tobacco they had on hand, and the Government would then refund the the money.

Now for the sequel. Theodore Dorr, (as I did not consider him competent to do much else) I selected to stamp the smoking tobacco. While he was doing so, a fact which I afterwards learned, he was at this time putting up a job on me. He sent his friend Bowen to the collector, Mr. Moon, and I wish to say right here, that in this Bowen's office the whole plot was matured.

Here was the Rye House gentlemens' headquarters. Here it was that the letters were written to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and where the correspondence was carried on with the detective at Logansport.—Here were also written those letters to General Browne, the United States Attorney, defaming my character.

All my movements were watched and reported promptly to these officers If I went into a lawyer's for consultation, or was seen talking with an attorney it was sure to be so reported, and laid up against me. The spies were active. All depended on their keeping their masters informed

Not to weary your patience, suffice it to say that Bowen called on Mr. Moon, and wanted to see the law in reference to the fine for using one-half pound stamps on one pound packages of tobacco, how much the informer would get for his share of the fine, &c. He (Bowen) told Mr Moon that White was doing this business: that this Dorr was packing the tobacco according to White's instructions. Mr Moon saw the absurdity of the thing at once and so told Bowen; that he himself kept an account of all the stamps White purchased, and when he got through purchasing White should have his money refunded; that such was the law, and of course White had nothing to gain by such a course.

This was a damper on them, as the reader will readily see how easy it was to accomplish his nefarious work. In the event of my being a bona fide purchaser of these stamps all he (Dorr) had to do, and no doubt he had it so done, was just to have a few 1 pound packages with ½ pound stamps on them let the detective call and find them.—Then let Dorr go on the witness stand and swear it was at my instance. He did so, the case was made; all earth could'nt save me as the law was then, that the accused's mouth was closed and the informer's was open to testify as he pleased. This conversation with Mr. Moon occurred two months before I discharged Dorr. Mr. Moon never told me a word of it, until at least one year after the whole tobacco job was over.

On the 3d of February I discharged Dorr for his unfaithfulness. Then he matured the following scheme.—He had worked up stairs, under the supervision of the head clerk, (I of necessity use head clerks for all the different departments). This head clerk had charge of all the goods upstairs, and there he prepared those goods that needed preparing for the salesroom below, and for wholesaling It was necessary then and is now to moisten fine cut tobacco when too dry (as is the custom in all tobacco houses), and examine the caddies of plug tobacco before taking them to the sales room below, and during all this handling of tobacco, this head clerk had picked up and put in a box, where he kept his hatchet, nails &c., about a dozen old plug tobacco stamps am't-ing to $40. Dorr did not go to Mr. Moon this time, but on the 10th day of February, 1870, after he was discharged, wrote to Washington to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue about the stamps in the box, and requested in that letter that the Commissioner send a detective, and that the detective would find Dorr at the Exchange Hotel.

The Commissioner sent Dorr's letter to the Government Detective at Logansport, a Mr. Briar, with instructions to proceed to Wayne to investigate. The detective came here, and along with Mr. Moon, went to the Exchange Hotel and there found Dorr, They took him into a private room, and he, Dorr, told the detective and Collector Moon, what he would swear to, and his only anxiety was if his plot should not succeed, could White send him to the penitentiary.

The detective and Mr. Moon came and searched the house for unstamped tobacco, but found none. They found about 800 caddies of tobacco, each and every one properly stamped. This was on Saturday the 26th day of February, 1870. On the Monday following, the 28th, the examination before Commissioner Whedon took place. The detective subpœnaed three of my clerks, whose names Dorr had given him, to sustain him in his testimony. All three swore entirely contrary to Dorr's statement, and yet with such overwhelming evidence in my favor, I was bound over in the sum of $1,000 to appear at Indianapolis. And then to make a sure case against me, (as no jury in the world would would have committed me on the evidence I had in my favor), what did they do but indict my main witness for complicity. This of course destroyed his testimony and nothing was left for me but to settle with the Government as best I could. They taxed me two thousand, and Dorr, as stated, got one-half of it for informing. And not only that, but had the Government taxed me $5,000 I would have paid it under the pressure.

This same detective Briar, had George Reiter, Cigar manufacturer; Lauley & Rosenthal, Dessauer & Trauerman, cigar makers; Meyer & Bro., druggists; Martin Ferkel, wine merchant; all of this place, arrested and bound over by Commissioner Whedon to appear at Indianapolis on a similar oversight, regarding the regarding the requirements of the revenue law. The first three parties, by compromising at Washington, without indictment. The other two, Meyer Brother & Co., and Martin Ferkel, were indicted at Indianapolis and had to compromise their cases at Washington also. They were not bled to the same extent as I was, because they were fortunate enough to have no employees who were base enough to perjure themselves and swear falsely against them, and make a case out of nothing. It is well known Dorr was indicted here and in the Sheriff's hands for his alleged swearing, also that he was indicted at Indianapolis for the same cause. As the State Court here had no jurisdiction, it was taken to the U. S. Court, but the case, when it came up for trial was dismissed on some technical irregularity. Many a horse thief has got off on just such technical grounds, but he is no less a horse thief. And permit me to say, that I have no unkind word to those Government officials, and others who took part in the case. They were no doubt actuated by pure motives, but misled, did not know but one side of the case and felt as if they were only doing their duty. And these citizens who were led to believe that this Dorr was simply an ordinary witness in the case, and had no mercenary motive in view and could not help doing as he did, will now see his true motive, viz: money. It is right that society should be protected against such characters and know their designs.

Hoping no other citizen shall be imposed on, I am

Truly yours,

J. B. WHITE.

A TIMELY QUESTION.

BY JOHN W. CHADWICK.

If good men were only better,
Would the wicked be so bad?
Here's a story with an answer
To that question strange and sad.

Herod, famed among the wicked,
Called the Great with doubtful right,
When a boy of twenty summers
With banditti made a fight.

Hezekiah, their fierce captain,
Captured he and put to death;
Many a follower then compelled he
To resign his evil breath.

It was well done; who but thinks so?
Thought not so the Sanhedrin.
Herod was an Idumean;
So his deed became a sin.

Let him kill his own banditti;
Never dare to deal with theirs.
So they summoned him to meet them
And to settle his affairs.

Scarcely [illegible] than done here;
Herod came; they wished him back;
For he came all clad in armor,
With his [illegible] at his back.

Cowered the Sanhedrin before him;
Dare not say a single word;
Only Sameas withstood him
With a brave "Thus saith the Lord."

Herod listened while the Rabbi
Execrated all his crimes;
Then he vanished. Summers flitted;
Fell the land on evil times;

Antony and Cæsar ploughed it
With the iron share of war;
Tore it with their cruel factions,
Left it many a dreadful scar;

Till, at length, from Rome came Herod,
Sent by Cæsar to be king;
At the gates his legions thundered,
Famine gnawed them from within.

Many months in vain he battered,
But, at last surrender came;
Then a deed that earned for Herod
Centuries of hateful fame.

Since the Sanhedrin had counselled
Firm resistance to his will,
"Let them perish," he commanded;
"Let their blood the gutters fill."

Only one he granted mercy—
Sameas; the very man
Who had years before withstood him.
Guess the reason if you can.

I have guessed it in the question
Which I venture strange and sad;
If the good were only better,
Would the wicked be so bad?

A TWELFTH-NIGHT CHARACTER.

"Sixth of January—Twelfth-night, is it?" said Robert Kennedy to his friend Mr. Charles Crackshot, as they were taking their ease in as snug a little country hotel as one would wish to find, after a stiffish day's campaign with the snipe, in the pleasant county of Hants. "Whisky punch, ashen fagots, motley characters, fine old English customs, and all that sort of thing. Suppose we have some—I mean the punch."

The proposition was one which Mr. Crackshot did not care to controvert. It was, he said, a thoroughly orthodox and seasonable beverage; and the sooner they had it the better, as he (Mr. Crackshot) was fatigued, and did not feel at all like sitting up into the small hours. The landlord of the Kennedy Arms (Mr. Kennedy's family had long been considerable proprietors in that part of Hampshire), formerly in the private service of the lamented Mr. Gridling, Mr. Kennedy's uncle, was no mean hand at a hot brew. Having manufactured the punch to the best of his ability, he brought in the china bowl, deposited it on the table, and was about respectfully to retire, when Mr. Kennedy suggested that he should taste a glass of the compound that he had himself so cunningly devised.

"My respects to you, sir," said the landlord of Kennedy Arms; and he made an obeisance to both the gentlemen before him.

"And good luck to you, Spriggs, and Mrs. Spriggs, too; any many happy years may you have in your house; and never again such a Twelfth-night as that which you had—how long? Six years, isn't it, ago?"

"Six years exactly, sir. It was not pleasant at the time, sir; but I owe what I have now to it—that is, to your kindness, Mr. Robert."

"A good fellow that," said Mr. Kennedy meditatively, as the discreet Spriggs left the room; "a good fellow, and a devilish useful one, I can tell you. And this decent punch; and, on the whole, I am as comfortable as I wish to be."

"How about that mysterious Twelfth-night six years ago—A. D. 1867, it must have been, Bob? What was it?" asked Mr. Crackshot, who had pulled himself together, and acquired sufficent energy to charge his pipe once more—and his glass.

"My dear Charlie," was the reply; "you will pardon me if I tell you that you are the most inquisitive man I ever met. I don't say this in disparagement of your many excellent qualities; I simply mention it as a fact. I will back you to ask more questions in the course of ten minutes than I ever asked in my life. However, I don't mind answering you on this occasion, and I will tell you; only I shall have to bore you for about twenty minutes."

Mr. Crackshot settled himself comfortably down, and said, "Go ahead;" and Mr. Kennedy commenced his narrative.

"You see, six years ago matters did not stand exactly with me as they stand now. I was myself more or less dependent—well, we will say on circumstances. My Uncle George had not yet abiit ad plures; and, not to put too fine a point upon it, the principle of habeas corpus was not observed so strictly in a certain class of lawsuits as it is in this era of social and legislative reform. Candidly, I was down on my luck; and unless certain relatives exerted themselves, I clearly foresaw a disagreeable amount of personal notoriety, not altogether unconnected with the Insolvency Court, awaiting me in the immediate future. My uncle, Mr. Gridling, had disappointed me. He said I had disappointed him. Still I managed to preserve a fairish front, and consoled myself with the philosophical reflection that matters might have been much worse. I might have been residing by compulsion in the neighborhood of Chancery lane, or an exile across the sea; might have had to take up my quarters at Boulogne. The prospect which I had to face was not a lively one. I was down and I was dull. I had eaten my Christmas dinner at the club. Ever dined at the club on Christmas Day? No? take my advice, then, and don't. You go there, we will say, about half-past four, and find the hall-porter, who has gorged and drunk two hours previous to something more than repletion, asleep in his box. He wakes, more or less, at your inquiry for letters, and resents your appearance as an intrusion. As you cross the hall, en route for the morning-room, you see two or three small page-boys, with very flushed faces, and a couple of waiters, talking and laughing in a manner which argues neither sobriety nor intelligence. Of course, beyond the domestics, there is not a soul in the club. It is just possible that as you sit down to your dinner Mr. MacGrowler, who has quarrelled with his wife, and who is not tolerated by his family, takes the table at the farthest end of the room. Tepid soup, iced fish, lukewarm entree; fuddled servants; shrieks of wild laughter from the subterranean regions of the still-room and kitchens; fires allowed to go out; sulkiness; discomfort generally—that is what dinner at the club on Christmas Day means.

"However, I survived the ordeal. It was two or three days after the new year had come in that I had a letter from my respected uncle Gridling, dated from what he was pleased to call his country house in the Surrey hills, some twenty-five miles from Cheapside. Its contents formed an agreeable oasis amid the desert of, to speak euphemistically, 'business communications,' which lay two or three deep on my table. Why had I not come to him? Would I not come? Did I forget that I was his nearest relative? Surely this was not the season at which uncle and nephew should keep apart from each other. I I had been foolish, but then I had been young. The errors of youth were pardonable, if they were not confirmed. And he had heard with much satisfaction of the manly efforts I had made to put myself right. That was all he wanted. Nothing could be better than the accounts which had reached him from Mr. —— (his solicitor) of my efforts at retrenchment and reform. For himself, each Christmas as it passed caused him sensibly to feel the fact that he was not so young as he had been. This was the kind of letter, and a pleasant surprise it was, as you may imagine. To cut a long story short, the epistle wound up with a request that I would come to Fairfield as soon as I could. He (my uncle) was alone, and was anxious to see me before the Christmas season had altogether passed away. On the morning of the 6th of January, the day which I had fixed to arrive at Fairfield, I received a document of an exceedingly disagreeable character. It intimated that unless a certain sum of £75 9s. 8½d. were paid by noon that day the law must take its course, and my person must satisfy a claim for which my purse was unequal. Messrs. Moss & Mofuz, of Jermyn street, were I knew, men of their word, but I was in too good spirits to think much of the threat. Besides, before the shades of evening fell I knew I should be twenty-five miles removed from their clutch, and in a position not impossibly of comparative solvency. As I got into the train at Charing Cross, I certainly did observe an exceedingly suspicious-looking individual, who had watched me get out of the cab, bestow upon me a glance which seemed to indicate that he took a personal interest in my physiognomy and my welfare. But I thought no more of the circumstance, and as I sat down to lunch at Fairfield, exactly two hours after I had left my own chambers, I felt fairly master of the situation and completely happy.

"Cordiality and affection characterized my reception by my uncle. And as the day wore on, there was, I found, something more than his manner with which I had reason to be pleased. The only other guest was Mr. ——, his solicitor, of whose friendship and good services I was assured. Mr. Gridling fond of his siesta after lunch, and Mr. —— and myself took a stroll.

"'As your uncle's professional adviser, Mr. Kennedy, I am not at liberty to be explicit to you; but this I may say, that there is at least reason why I should congratulate you. It is more agreeable to me than you may suppose to be able to inform you that the impression which once existed in his mind as regards your habits and tastes has been effectually dissipated. As an earnest of his intentions I should not wonder if you were to find on your dressing-table this evening something that may not be unacceptable as a New Year's present. There is one thing I would warn you. That at the present moment there may be claims upon you, to an amount in excess of what you can conveniently liquidate, I am well aware. I think it will be imprudent, however, to insist too much upon this in any conversation which you may have with your uncle. Your best plan will be on my return to London to call on me in Gray's Inn, and I will see what can be done. It would be a thousand pities that your chances—and I tell you, Mr. Kennedy, they are bright ones—with your uncle should be injured, possibly lost, in consequence of any financial effects of which the causes are no longer in existence. Mr. Gridling has the idea that you have touched terra firma. I am not acquainted sufficiently with your affairs to feel it my duty, or indeed within my power, to inform him otherwise.'

"If Mr. —— had not been a lawyer, he ought to have been a Jesuit. A pleasant surprise on my dressing-table; my chances more than bright! Certainly my star was in the ascendant; and as for Moss & Mofuz they might go hang. Why, I should probably be able to settle their claim myself to-morrow. It was getting dusk, and we were turning our steps towards the house, I lingering on the gravel walk outside a few minutes to finish a cigar. I heard the sound of a horse's hoof, and presently a man, riding up at a brisk trot, inquired whether I was 'Kennedy Esquire.' It was a letter sent by train, with instructions for 'special and immediate delivery,' from the man who superintended my chambers. The fellow had done me a really good turn. The note stated briefly that Messrs. Moss & Mofux had been as good as their word—that the writ of ca. sa. was out; that the representatives of the Sheriff of Middlesex had been at my chambers that day, and that it seemed they knew my present whereabouts. He therefore thought it his duty to inform me as soon as possible of this. I don't think that in my life I ever felt more completely upset than by this brief epistle. Still I attempted to assume an air of indifference.

"'This, I suppose,' I said to the messenger, 'came by the 3:40. Do you know whether any London passengers arrived by that train?'

"'Two, sir,' said the man, 'and they wanted a fly to come to Fairfield. But as this was the only 'oss that Mr. Meadows had in, they couldn't have it till I returned. They did say, sir, as how they would take the letter to you themselves; but the station-master, he didn't know them, and he wouldn't hear of it; and curious customers they look, sir.'

"'My good fellow,' I replied, 'if that is the case, ride as slowly as you can to Stagford'—the station some four miles distant—'and here's half a sovereign for you.'

There was no doubt who the two passengers from London were. A pretty dilemma, in truth, I was in. I had probably about an hour yet before me, and at the expiration of that time, so far as I could see, I must be inevitably arrested, and that in my uncle's house, and taken back to London to spend my Twelfth-night in the charming vicinity of Cursitor street. I walked into the passage and up-stairs into my room. There Spriggs was unpacking my portmanteau.

"'Very glad to see you here, sir, again,' was his greeting, 'and to know that all is right between master and yourself. And master said I was to come to his study in a couple of hours, as he wanted to send to you or see you—I forget which, sir.'"

"In a couple of hours! Why, in that time I should be—Heaven only knows where. I suppose my countenance betrayed signs of distress, for Spriggs asked me whether I was unwell.

"'The truth is, my good Spriggs,' I said, I am in a duce of a mess;' and plunging in medias res, I told him the whole complication.

"Spriggs listened attentively, and gave me his opinion that matters were very serious indeed. Would it be impossible, he asked, to 'square' these emissaries of the law, or at least to induce them to wait at Stagford till next morning? Quite, I told him. It was not a quarter to five, and at best there were only twenty minutes to spare. It is no exaggeration to say that on the tactics which I adopted in that brief interval entirely depended my future chances, so far as my uncle's will was concerned. Anything like an arrest for debt, and that under his own rooftree, Spriggs agreed with me in the thinking that Mr. Gridling would not tolerate for a moment, and would effectually ruin me with him. Spriggs meditated for some minutes, and at last he spoke.

"'Mr. Kennedy,' he said, 'sir, you have always been a good friend to me. You say that, to the best of your belief, these bailiff fellers don't know you by sight, sir, but that you fancy some one did watch you as you were leaving Charing Cross this morning. That was no doubt a man sent to identify you; some understrapper who would describe your appearance to the pair who have come to Stagford.' (I wondered what was coming.) 'Now, sir, you and I are about the same height, and figure; you shall lend me that light greatcoat which you wore this morning sir, and for the next twenty-four hours I will be Robert Kennedy, Esq.

"I asked Spriggs to explain himself still further.

"'What I mean is this, sir. I will walk down the drive to the lodge gate, and wait till the fly with this lot comes. They will see me stop. 'Mr. Kennedy,' they will say, 'we want a word with you;' and off we shall go to London. The mistake won't be found out till we are twenty-five miles off, and then there will be no more trains to-night. My belief, sir, is that the letter which you will receive from master in an hour's time will make you able to settle this little matter a good many times over the first thing to-morrow morning.'

"It was a sufficiently startling proposal. I did not know what to say to it, but there was no time to hesitate. In five minutes I had accepted Spriggs's offer, and Spriggs had left me disguised as Bob Kennedy. For some little while I sat meditating matters. I took out my watch; it was twenty minutes past five. By this time Spriggs must have come up with my pursuers. I reflected again; again I took out my watch. It was now close on six, and by this time Spriggs must have been on the point of entering the railway carriage of the last train to town, unless, indeed, by some accident the stratagem had been discovered, and the officers of the Middlesex Sheriff were again on their road to Fairfield. In the midst of these meditations I was interrupted by a knock at my door. My worthy uncle entered, with a letter in his hand.

"'Robert,' he said, 'I did not know you were here, and had intended to leave this on your dressing-table. I told Spriggs to take it, but I can't find him. I suppose he has gone out. There, my boy, open it presently.' And so saying, my uncle departed.

"The envelope contained a check for £500.

"As for the confusion which Spriggs' unexpected absence created in my uncle's household, I will say nothing of it. We had a convival evening enough, but I own I rather expected the door to open every moment, and some myrmidon of the law to lay his hand upon my shoulder, informing me that Spriggs had been arrested by mistake. Let me pass over this. By eight o'clock next morning I was at Stagford Junction—four miles nearer London than Stagford terminus. Before nine I was in London. At ten minutes past nine my uncle's check was cashed; and after that, swiftly as hansom could take me from the Strand to Chancery lane, I was with Spriggs in his temporary confinement in Cursitor street. Strangely enough, so admirably had Spriggs filled his role, the mistake had not been discovered. I paid the sum, with expenses, and at 11 I was at Fairfield once more. Spriggs contrived to explain his absence to my uncle's satisfaction. Later in the day I went into business matters with my uncle's solicitor, an arrangement was soon after arrived at. Since then I have been able to thank Spriggs in the substantial manner he deserved. I set him up in this hotel—a slight recompense enough for the Twelfth-night character which he assumed in my interest."

"Is this a true story, Bob?" asked Mr. Crackshot, knocking the ashes out of his pipe.

"True, every word of it," was the reply. "Ask Spriggs, if you doubt."

And the landlord of the Kennedy Arms, who that moment entered to see whether the two gentlemen required anything further, confirmed, in a few emphatic sentences, the narative.—Belgravia.

CHARLES SUMNER.

His Last Day in the United States Senate.

[Washington Cor. Chicago Times.]

Mr. Sumner arose yesterday Tuesday at his usual hour, and, after looking over his mail and receiving a few visitors, he took the F street line of cars, which pass his house, and rode to the Senate Chamber and took his seat at an unusually early hour, the reason for which soon after appeared. He remarked to your correspondent, who met him in the car, that he was feeling unusually well this bright, frosty morning; and only two days before, also remarked that he regarded himself in better health than for many years past. His fine physical presence seemed to give every assurance of that.

In half an hour after the Senate met on yesterday, Mr. Boutwell arose and said: "I also desire to lay before the Senate a resolution passed by the Legislature of Massachusetts, and ask that it be laid on the table and printed." The Chief Clerk read as follows:

"Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in the year 1874. Resolve rescinding and annulling a resolution passed Dec. 18, in the year 1872, relating to army registers and national flags.

"Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives in general court assembled, that the resolution passed on the 18th day of December, 1872, at the extra session of that year, relating to a bill introduced in the Senate of the United States, concerning the army register and regimental colors of the United States, be and hereby is rescinded and annulled."

Mr. Boutwell said: "I wish to call the attention of the Secretary to the fact that there is a letter from his Excellency the Governor, which should be read also."

The President—The letter will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
EXECUTIVE MANSION,
BOSTON, March 8, 1874.

"SIR: By vote of the 27th ult. the General Court requested me to forward to our Senators and Representates in Congress copies of the resolution passed by the present Legislature, rescinding the resolve passed by the Legislature of 1872, concerning the army register and national battle flags. It gives me pleasure to comply with this request, and herewith I inclose a copy of said resolution. I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

"W. B. WASHBURN.

"To Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Washington, D. C."

This public announcement to Congress that the Massachusetts Legislature had rescinded the resolution of censure passed on Mr. Sumner for introducing the bill indicated gave great satisfaction, if an exultant and pleased look could show it; but he said nothing to the Senate, as was expected, and only received the congratulations of Senators Fenton and Hamilton. But he seemed to feel as if this act had added to his existence, and was certainly one of the proudest moments of his life.

A dull financial debate then set in, and Mr. Sumner wandered around the chamber and over to the Democratic side, where he seldom used to go, and sat down in a seat by Senator Goldthwaite, of Alabama, his old classmate in college, and turning to Senator Bogy, of Missouri, he said: "I am glad to meet you in the Senate, and I should be pleased to have you call on me at my house. I am always at home in the evening." To Mr. Goldthwaite he passed the compliments of the day, and then went over to Senator Sargeant's seat, with whom he had never been intimate; but as they fought the Centennial bill together, he decided to ask the California Senator if he had received any anonymous and insulting letters for his course on that bill. "I have received several," said Mr. Sumner, "and they annoy me." Mr. Sargeant replied that he had not only received them by mail but by express, but paid no attention to them. It struck Senator Sargeant that he was not in his usual health, or he would not have allowed himself to become worried over such a trifling matter. He said good-bye to Mr. Sargeant, and a few minutes past 3 o'clock he took a seat near Mr. Ferry, of Connecticut, who had an affection of the spinal chord, somewhat similar to that of Mr. Sumner. They had often talked about the malady, and, both being affected, suggested various remedies, which each had found afforded relief. He told Mr. Ferry that the night previous (Monday) he felt badly, and had sent for his physician to administer a hypodermic injection of morphia, and asked him what he thought of such treatment, adding that it generally gave him ease.

Dreams.

Some philosopher, who evidently knows how it is himself, interprets dreams as follows:

If a man dreams the devil is after him, it is a sign he had better settle his subscription bill.

If he dreams of an earthquake, and a turmoil generally, it is a sign that he is going to get married.

If he (being a married man) dreams of some fearful mysterious danger, it is a sign that his mother-in-law is coming to spend a few days with her darling daughter.

If he dreams that his head is in danger and his hair all falls out, it is a sign he will have a quarrel with his wife.

If he dreams of being accosted by a strange man, who insists on talking with him, it is a sign that he had better know all the policemen.

If he dreams of making a fool of himself, it is a true sign that it is so.

The Feet.

The best remedy for cold feet is to dip them every night and morning in a basin of cold water, and afterward rub them dry with a coarse towel. To harden the feet, tannic acid has been used with success. Employ it in the proportion of five grains to a fluid ounce of water. To correct offensive smell of the feet, bathe them in a weak solution of permanganate of potassa; one scruple to eight ounces of water. For absorbing excessive perspiration of the feet, mix together seven ounces of the carbonate of magnesia, two ounces of powdered calcinen' alum, seven ounces of orris root, and half a drachm of powdered cloves.

The Anti-Rum War in Dayton.

A correspondent at Dayton, O., thus describes the manner of carrying on the crusade against whisky in that city. It will give the reader a fair idea of the manner in which this campaign is being waged all along the line, and of the terrible earnestness with which these praying women go about their work:

The women moved from headquarters in four columns, marched up Jefferson and Main, and deployed in front of the establishments heretofore assailed. The scenes generally were less animating and exciting than yesterday, the rabble seeming indisposed generally to renew their ribaldries. The women form for action near the curbstone, and are speedily encompassed by a crowd who watch with varying manifestations and emotions. The line of men file into the bars to quench real or affected thirst, and the clink of foaming glasses chimes in with the soft pathetic notes of the worshipful women, but the plaintive voice of prayer, when the women, on bended knees, supplicate the mercy of God, produces an instant and indescribable hush even in the bar-rooms, and as the eloquent pleadings ascend, the influence quickly strikes the nearest rank of spectators, permeates and pervades to the uttermost rim of the ragged semi-circle formed about them. There are moments when the women weep and pray, when their influence is thrillingly oppressive, and men, even, who do not approve of saloon devotions, are unconsciously but irresistably affected. The resolute crusaders will not desist from the labor they have undertaken. In the West End suburb one coarse woman sat at the open window of her saloon, drinking beer, while prayer and praise were progressing, making vulgar remarks, and occasionally flinging the rinsings of her glass at the earnest devotees, or flinging fragments of pretzels at them spitefully.

At the close of the day, the prayer-bands return to the church and report publicly, and receive orders to renew the assault the next morning. They join in a parting prayer and separate to their several homes.

WHEN any antidote or remedy for any particular class of disease obtains a wide-spreading notoriety, it is but reasonable to suppose that it must merit the popularity it receives. It is within our province to mention that DR. J. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS, so long and favorably known as the safest and most reliable remedial agent for the cure of Liver, Kidney, Bladder, and Glandular Diseases, Mental and Physical Debility, and all complaints emanating from a corrupt state of the blood, etc., are in great demand. So satisfied are we of the intrinsic worth of this medicine, that we do not hesitate to notice it in our columns. It is well to mention that this medicine is compounded of roots, herbs, and flowers of California, and has no fiery material or alcohol used in its preparation. We can add no better eulogium than the fact that we use it constantly in our own family, and each member thereof partakes of it, when necessary, according to directions.—New York Paper. 34

THE West is becoming mentally and morally independent of the East. Twenty years ago the Illinois farmers, if the idea of organization had been suggested to them, would have carefully perused the New York papers to see what it was best to do. Twenty years ago the Ohio ladies would not have dared to pray in front of a saloon until they learned that their sisters in Massachusetts were on their knees. Now, both men and women at the West are ready to take the lead.—Buffalo Express.

An Outgrowth of Other Disease!

Catarrh sometimes exists alone, but is more frequently a symptom of other diseased conditions. The following letter explains it:

COLLINGWOOD, Onondaga Co., N. Y., Jan. 25, 1872.
DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—Allow me to give you a brief history of the effect of your medicine called "Golden Medical Discovery" in my case. I am now in my seventy-fourth year, and naturally of firm constitution. Within the last few years, from over-exercise, I have been afflicted with a complication of diseases almost incredible to relate. In the first place, Catarrh, to a degree that, to me, it seemed that my voice passed out at the ears, to which was added its natural ally—Bronchitis, to which, at no great length of time, were added Neuralgic pains in the head and shoulders and bloating of the lower limbs, the most of which was superinduced by a torpid state of the liver. I had the advice of several eminent physicians, and tried almost every known remedy for such complaints without relief. A rapid loss of strength and waste of flesh, reminded me that I could not long withstand the combined force of disease which was fast bearing me down. I gave up all business, made my will, had my grave-stone placed in position and lettered, except date of exit, and resigned myself to my couch to await events. Not long after this, I saw your advertisement, procured your remedies—I am now on the second half-dozen bottles of Golden Medical Discovery—have a good appetite, have gained fifteen pounds of flesh—no more talk out of my ears, no more bloating of the limbs, can walk two or three miles with ease, and feel that you have given me a lease of ten or fifteen years—subject, however, to the ratification of the Court above. That you may live long to do good to suffering humanity, is the sincere wish of

Your unknown friend, LUTHER COLE.

Hygienic Notes.

GLYCERITE of lime, used in burns is said by De Breyne to soothe the pain and to prevent inflammation or diminish its intensity; it is prepared from recently slaked lime, one part; glycerine, fifty parts; chlorinated hydrochloric ether, one part.

REMEDY FOR CORNS AND BUNIONS.—Squeeze out the juice of two good lemons; put it in a bottle, add one dozen small pearl buttons—old ones will do as well as new; shake the bottle well a few times until the buttons are all dissolved, when it is ready for use. Apply with the finger to the corn or bunion twice a day until a cure is effected. I have never known it to fail of accomplishing the desired result. It is very penetrating. Keep closely corked.—Mrs. H. S. B., in Rural New Yorker.

THUMB-SUCKING.—I have observed that peculiar and rather common deformity of the chest is caused by the habit of sucking the thumb in infancy and early childhood. The weight of the arm on the thorax of the child during sleep produces depression of the ribs in the line occupied by the arm when the thumb is placed in the mouth. As this is a very important effect of "thumb-sucking" never hitherto pointed out, I think it desirable to place this thing on record for the benefit of other observers.—British Medical Journal.

ARNICA HAIR WASH.—An exchange vouches for the following: When the hair is falling off and becoming thin from frequent use of castor, macassar oils, etc., or when premature baldness arises from illness, the arnica hair wash will be found of great service in arresting the mischief. It is thus prepared: Take elder water, half a pint; sherry wine, half a pint; tincture of arnica, half an ounce; alcoholic ammonia, one drachm—if this last named ingredient is old and has lost its strength, then two drachms instead of one may be employed. The whole of these are to be mixed in a lotion bottle, and applied to the head every night with a sponge. Wash the head with warm water twice a week. Soft brushes only must be used during the growth of the young hair.

DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.—W. S. Raymond, M. D., sends the Country Gentleman the following remedy which he says has seldom failed: One-half pound Epsom salts; 1 ounce sweet spirits niter—measurement; ½ ounce sulphuric acid; ½ tablespoon oil sassafras; alcohol enough to cut; ½ tablespoon cochineal; 1½ pints rain water. Dose, tablespoonful three times a day, before each meal. Beware of such food (as much as possible) as will give you trouble after eating. Take plenty of out-door exercise, and, above all, be as cheerful as possible. Eat no bread which has been baked for a period less than 24 hours, and if addicted to coffee drinking, substitute tea for it. Eat plenty of green apples, if they can be had, and on arising in the morning take two or three swallows of good, cold water. By observing these, I am sanguine a cure will be affected.

WHOOPING COUGH IN THE LAST STAGE.—A writer in the Medical Journal, London, states that in cases of whooping cough in the last stage—that is, after the third week—he has had one ounce of the strongest liquid ammonia put into a gallon of water in an open pan, and the steam kept up by means of half a brick made red hot throughout, and put into the boiling water containing the ammonia, the pan being placed in the middle of a room, into which the patients were brought as the ammonia steam was passing off. This method, he says, was used in the evening, before bed-time, and it proved so efficacious in abating the spasmodic attack, and after three or four days terminating the malady, as to establish, beyond doubt, the value of this mode of inhaling ammonia as a therapeutic agent in tranquilizing the nervous system in the whooping cough.

The Currencies of Europe.

The total amount of gold coin circulating in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland at the close of 1872 was £84,551,000 sterling; silver, £15,000,000; bronze, £1,148,000; excess of bank-notes over coin reserves, £40,540,000; total circulation in coin and notes, £141,239,000; being equivalent in United States gold coin to $686,421,540. The metallic currency, coin and bullion of France is given at 4,000,000,000 francs; notes of the Bank of France in circulation on Dec. 26, 1873, 2,807,689,625 francs; total, 6,807,689,625 francs. Deduct metallic reserve in bank Dec. 28, 759,962,419 francs, and the currency circulation is 6,047,727,206 francs, equivalent in United States gold coin, at twenty cents to the franc, to $1,209,545,441. In the twenty-two States composing the North German Confederation the supposed aggregate of coin is 632,435,362 thalers. The coin held in reserve by the banks to protect their note circulation is 100,000,000 thalers, leaving in the hands of the people 532,435,362 thalers. The notes in the hands of the people amount to 253,159,504 thalers, equivalent in United States gold coin to $557,772,098. The German Government in the last two years has coined about 334,000,000 thalers in gold.

From the above it will appear that in England the gold and silver circulation is £103,500,000 against £37,700,000 in notes; in France 4,000,000,000 francs of metallic currency against 2,807,689,625 francs in notes; in Germany, 632,435,362 thalers of metallic currency against 253,159,142 thalers of paper currency.

In the United States there is virtually no metallic currency, and the note circulation, including national bank notes, legal tenders, fractional currency and other treasury notes, exceeds $800,000,000.

The Truth About Macduff and Macbeth.

Macduff was an historical character, and the claims of the Earls of Fife and Wemys to be descended from him are tolerably well authenticated; but the witches' prophecy to Banquo, "Thou shalt get Kings, though thou be none," was not verified by events. "Early authorities show no such persons as Banquo and his son Fleance, nor have we reason to think that the latter ever fled farther from Macbeth than across the flat scene, according to the stage directions. Neither were Banquo or his son ancestors of the house of Stuart." Instead of being a usurper, Macbeth was a legitimate claimant of the throne; instead of being the victim of a midnight and treacherous murder, Duncan was slain in fair fight at a place called Bothgowan, near Elgin, in 1039; instead of being a tyrant, Macbeth was a firm, just and equitable ruler; instead of being killed at Dunsinane, he fell, two years after his defeat there, at Lumphanan.

A Mile in Thirty-One Seconds.

The following story of the achievement in respect of speed in an ice-boat on the Hudson in the vicinity of Staatsburg is told by the Poughkeepsie Eagle: "Thursday last the wind blew very fresh from the south, and the owner of the new ice-boat Cyclone determined to take advantage of the favorable opportunity for timing his yacht. The Hudson at this point is very wide, and at the course selected its breadth is one mile. Having made every preparation for the feat to be accomplished, the reef points were shaken out of the sails, and every stitch of canvass spread to the gale. With two men on the windward runner to keep the boat down to the ice, the helm was turned, the sails filled, and in a moment, with every inch of canvas, drawing, she was under full headway. Like an arrow from a bow, she darted away on the course, clouds of pulverized ice following in the track of her runners as they hummed over the surface of the river, and in what seemed but an instant the river had been crossed, and the mile accomplished in the almost incredible time of thirty-one seconds, being at a rate of two miles in a minute and two seconds. Persons on shore compared the speed of the flying racer to that of a meteor flashing through the sky, and watched her movements with eager interest. The owner afterward put the boat through some movements on the ice, and astonished, as well as paralyzed, the lookers-on by sailing all the way across the river on one runner, the force of the wind throwing her over on her beam ends, and raising the windward runner from ten to twelve feet above the ice. Although but few were found willing to partake of the amusement, all seemed disposed to coincide in the opinion that ice yachting is the most exhilerating of sports; and the evolutions of which one of these yachts is capable, the most graceful of anything they had ever witnessed."

A Champion Birth-Room.

There is a room in the house now occupied by Francis Gibson, in Spring township, Perry county, Pa., in which occurred the births of John B. Gibson, Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania; George Gibson, Commissary of the United States; Dr. John Bernheisel, the Mormon who first represented the Mormons in Congress; the Hon. John Bigler, Governor of California from 1852 to 1855; and the Hon. William Bigler, Governor of Pennsylvania from 1852 to 1855, who is now living in Chesterfield, Pa. Is there any other room in the Unitnd States that can make a claim to furnishing the birth-place of so many prominent persons?

A Good Memory.

While journeying by rail, not long since, I witnessed the following incident: One night after I had scrambled into my sleeping berth, I heard loud and angry voices proceeding from the rear of the car. I tell you this is a sleeping car, and you can't come in without a ticket." "Begorra, I had a ticket." "Where is it?" "I've lost it." "If you really had the misfortune to lose your ticket, perhaps you can remember your berth." There was an interval of silence, Paddy evidently employing his thinking powers, "Och, be jabers!" he exclaimed at length, "I was born on the 26th day of October, 1848."

Remedy for a Cold.

A hot lemonade is one of the best remedies in the world for a cold. It acts promptly and effectually and has no unpleasant after effects. One lemon properly squeezed, cut in slices, put with sugar, and covered with half a pint of boiling water. Drink just before going to bed, do not expose yourself on the following day. This remedy will ward off an attack of the chills and fever if used promptly. We give it on the recommendation of one of the Judges of our courts, who is a just man and never takes bribes.

A TIMELY QUESTION.

BY JOHN W. CHADWICK.

If good men were only better,
Would the wicked be so bad?
Here's a story with an answer
To that question strange and sad.

Herod, famed among the wicked,
Called the Great with doubtful right,
When a boy of twenty summers
With banditti made a fight.

Hezekiah, their fierce captain,
Captured he and put to death;
Many a follower then compelled he
To resign his evil breath.

It was well done; who but thinks so?
Thought not so the Sanhedrin.
Herod was an Idumean;
So his deed became a sin.

Let him kill his own banditti;
Never dare to deal with theirs.
So they summoned him to meet them
And to settle his affairs.

Scarcely sooner said than done 'twas;
Herod came—they wished him back;
For he came all clad in armor,
—With his henchmen at his back.

Cowered the Sanhedrin before him;
Dare not say a single word;
Only Sameas withstood him,
With a brave "Thus saith the Lord."

Herod listened while the Rabbi
Execrated all his crimes;
Then he vanished. Summers flitted;
Fell the land on evil times;

Antony and Cæsar ploughed it
With the iron share of war;
Tore it with their cruel factions,
Left it many a dreadful scar;

Till, at length, from Rome came Herod,
Sent by Cæsar to be king;
At the gates his legions thundered,
Famine gnawed them from within.

Many months in vain he battered,
But, at last surrender came;
Then a deed that earned for Herod
Centuries of hateful fame

Since the Sanhedrin had counselled
Firm resistance to his will,
"Let them perish," he commanded;
"Let their blood the gutters fill."

Only one he granted mercy—
Sameas; the very man
Who had years before withstood him.
Guess the reason if you can.

I have guessed it in the question
Which I venture strange and sad;
If the good were only better,
Would the wicked be so bad?

A TWELFTH-NIGHT CHARACTER.

"Sixth of January—Twelfth-night, is it?" said Robert Kennedy to his friend Mr. Charles Crackshot, as they were taking their ease in as snug a little country hotel as one would wish to find, after a stiffish day's campaign with the snipe, in the pleasant county of Hants. "Whisky punch, ashen fagots, motley characters, fine old English customs, and all that sort of thing. Suppose we have some—I mean the punch."

The proposition was one which Mr. Crackshot did not care to controvert. It was, he said, a thoroughly orthodox and seasonable beverage; and the sooner they had it the better, as he (Mr. Crackshot) was fatigued, and did not feel at all like sitting up into the small hours. The landlord of the Kennedy Arms (Mr. Kennedy's family had long been considerable proprietors in that part of Hampshire), formerly in the private service of the lamented Mr. Gridling, Mr. Kennedy's uncle, was no mean hand at a hot brew. Having manufactured the punch to the best of his ability, he brought in the china bowl, deposited it on the table, and was about respectfully to retire, when Mr. Kennedy suggested that he should taste a glass of the compound that he had himself so cunningly devised.

"My respects to you, sir," said the landlord of Kennedy Arms; and he made an obeisance to both the gentlemen before him.

"And good luck to you, Spriggs, and Mrs. Spriggs, too; any many happy years may you have in your house; and never again such a Twelfth-night as that which you had—how long? Six years, isn't it, ago?"

"Six years exactly, sir. It was not pleasant at the time, sir; but I owe what I have now to it—that is, to your kindness, Mr. Robert."

"A good fellow that," said Mr. Kennedy meditatively, as the discreet Spriggs left the room; "a good fellow, and a devilish useful one, I can tell you. And this decent punch; and, on the whole, I am as comfortable as I wish to be."

"How about that mysterious Twelfth-night six years ago—A. D. 1867, it must have been, Bob? What was it?" asked Mr. Crackshot, who had pulled himself together, and acquired sufficent energy to charge his pipe once more—and his glass.

"My dear Charlie," was the reply; "you will pardon me if I tell you that you are the most inquisitive man I ever met. I don't say this in disparagement of your many excellent qualities; I simply mention it as a fact. I will back you to ask more questions in the course of ten minutes than I ever asked in my life. However, I don't mind answering you on this occasion, and I will tell you; only I shall have to bore you for about twenty minutes."

Mr. Crackshot settled himself comfortably down, and said, "Go ahead;" and Mr. Kennedy commenced his narrative.

"You see, six years ago matters did not stand exactly with me as they stand now. I was myself more or less dependent—well, we will say on circumstances. My Uncle George had not yet abiit ad plures; and, not to put too fine a point upon it, the principle of habeas corpus was not observed so strictly in a certain class of lawsuits as it is in this era of social and legislative reform. Candidly, I was down on my luck; and unless certain relatives exerted themselves, I clearly foresaw a disagreeable amount of personal notoriety, not altogether unconnected with the Insolvency Court, awaiting me in the immediate future. My uncle, Mr. Gridling, had disappointed me. He said I had disappointed him. Still I managed to preserve a fairish front, and consoled myself with the philosophical reflection that matters might have been much worse. I might have been residing by compulsion in the neighborhood of Chancery lane, or an exile across the sea; might have had to take up my quarters at Boulogne. The prospect which I had to face was not a lively one. I was down and I was dull. I had eaten my Christmas dinner at the club. Ever dined at the club on Christmas Day? No? take my advice, then, and don't. You go there, we will say, about half-past four, and find the hall-porter, who has gorged and drunk two hours previous to something more than repletion, asleep in his box. He wakes, more or less, at your inquiry for letters, and resents your appearance as an intrusion. As you cross the hall, en route for the morning-room, you see two or three small page-boys, with very flushed faces, and a couple of waiters, talking and laughing in a manner which argues neither sobriety nor intelligence. Of course, beyond the domestics, there is not a soul in the club. It is just possible that as you sit down to your dinner Mr. MacGrowler, who has quarrelled with his wife, and who is not tolerated by his family, takes the table at the farthest end of the room. Tepid soup, iced fish, lukewarm entrees; fuddled servants; shrieks of wild laughter from the subterranean regions of the still-room and kitchens; fires allowed to go out; sulkiness; discomfort generally—that is what dinner at the club on Christmas Day means.

"However, I survived the ordeal. It was two or three days after the new year had come in that I had a letter from my respected uncle Gridling, dated from what he was pleased to call his country house in the Surrey hills, some twenty-five miles from Cheapside. Its contents formed an agreeable oasis amid the desert of, to speak euphemistically, 'business communications,' which lay two or three deep on my table. Why had I not come to him? Would I not come? Did I forget that I was his nearest relative? Surely this was not the season at which uncle and nephew should keep apart from each other. I I had been foolish, but then I had been young. The errors of youth were pardonable, if they were not confirmed. And he had heard with much satisfaction of the manly efforts I had made to put myself right. That was all he wanted. Nothing could be better than the accounts which had reached him from Mr. —— (his solicitor) of my efforts at retrenchment and reform. For himself, each Christmas as it passed caused him sensibly to feel the fact that he was not so young as he had been. This was the kind of letter, and a pleasant surprise it was, as you may imagine. To cut a long story short, the epistle wound up with a request that I would come to Fairfield as soon as I could. He (my uncle) was alone, and was anxious to see me before the Christmas season had altogether passed away. On the morning of the 6th of January, the day which I had fixed to arrive at Fairfield, I received a document of an exceedingly disagreeable character. It intimated that unless a certain sum of £75 9s. 8½d. were paid by noon that day the law must take its course, and my person must satisfy a claim for which my purse was unequal. Messrs. Moss & Mofuz, of Jermyn street, were I knew, men of their word, but I was in too good spirits to think much of the threat. Besides, before the shades of evening fell I knew I should be twenty-five miles removed from their clutch, and in a position not impossibly of comparative solvency. As I got into the train at Charing Cross, I certainly did observe an exceedingly suspicious-looking individual, who had watched me get out of the cab, bestow upon me a glance which seemed to indicate that he took a personal interest in my physiognomy and my welfare. But I thought no more of the circumstance, and as I sat down to lunch at Fairfield, exactly two hours after I had left my own chambers, I felt fairly master of the situation and completely happy.

"Cordiality and affection characterized my reception by my uncle. And as the day wore on, there was, I found, something more than his manner with which I had reason to be pleased. The only other guest was Mr. ——, his solicitor, of whose friendship and good services I was assured. Mr. Gridling fond of his siesta after lunch, and Mr. —— and myself took a stroll.

"'As your uncle's professional adviser, Mr. Kennedy, I am not at liberty to be explicit to you; but this I may say, that there is at least reason why I should congratulate you. It is more agreeable to me than you may suppose to be able to inform you that the impression which once existed in his mind as regards your habits and tastes has been effectually dissipated. As an earnest of his intentions I should not wonder if you were to find on your dressing-table this evening something that may not be unacceptable as a New Year's present. There is one thing I would warn you. That at the present moment there may be claims upon you, to an amount in excess of what you can conveniently liquidate, I am well aware. I think it will be imprudent, however, to insist too much upon this in any conversation which you may have with your uncle. Your best plan will be on my return to London to call on me in Gray's Inn, and I will see what can be done. It would be a thousand pities that your chances—and I tell you, Mr. Kennedy, they are bright ones—with your uncle should be injured, possibly lost, in consequence of any financial effects of which the causes are no longer in existence. Mr. Gridling has the idea that you have touched terra firma. I am not acquainted sufficiently with your affairs to feel it my duty, or indeed within my power, to inform him otherwise.'

"If Mr. —— had not been a lawyer, he ought to have been a Jesuit. A pleasant surprise on my dressing-table; my chances more than bright! Certainly my star was in the ascendant; and as for Moss & Mofuz they might go hang. Why, I should probably be able to settle their claim myself to-morrow. It was getting dusk, and we were turning our steps towards the house, I lingering on the gravel walk outside a few minutes to finish a cigar. I heard the sound of a horse's hoof, and presently a man, riding up at a brisk trot, inquired whether I was 'Kennedy Esquire.' It was a letter sent by train, with instructions for 'special and immediate delivery,' from the man who superintended my chambers. The fellow had done me a really good turn. The note stated briefly that Messrs. Moss & Mofuz had been as good as their word—that the writ of ca. sa. was out; that the representatives of the Sheriff of Middlesex had been at my chambers that day, and that it seemed they knew my present whereabouts. He therefore thought it his duty to inform me as soon as possible of this. I don't think that in my life I ever felt more completely upset than by this brief epistle. Still I attempted to assume an air of indifference.

"'This, I suppose,' I said to the messenger, 'came by the 3:40. Do you know whether any London passengers arrived by that train?'

"'Two, sir,' said the man, 'and they wanted a fly to come to Fairfield. But as this was the only 'oss, that Mr. Meadows had in, they couldn't have it till I returned. They did say, sir, as how they would take the letter to you themselves; but the station-master, he didn't know them, and he wouldn't hear of it; and curious customers they look, sir.'

"'My good fellow,' I replied, 'if that is the case, ride as slowly as you can to Stagford'—the station some four miles distant—'and here's half a sovereign for you.'

"There was no doubt who the two passengers from London were. A pretty dilemma, in truth, I was in. I had probably about an hour yet before me, and at the expiration of that time, so far as I could see, I must be inevitably arrested, and that in my uncle's house, and taken back to London to spend my Twelfth-night in the charming vicinity of Cursitor street. I walked into the passage and up-stairs into my room. There Spriggs was unpacking my portmanteau.

"'Very glad to see you here, sir, again,' was his greeting, 'and to know that all is right between master and yourself. And master said I was to come to his study in a couple of hours, as he wanted to send to you or see you—I forget which, sir.'

"'In a couple of hours! Why, in that time I should be—Heaven only knows where. I suppose my countenance betrayed signs of distress, for Spriggs asked me whether I was unwell.

"'The truth is, my good Spriggs,' I said, I am in a duce of a mess;' and plunging in medias res, I told him the whole complication.

"Spriggs listened attentively, and gave me his opinion that matters were very serious indeed. Would it be impossible, he asked, to 'square' these emissaries of the law, or at least to induce them to wait at Stagford till next morning? Quite, I told him. It was not a quarter to five, and at best there were only twenty minutes to spare. It is no exaggeration to say that on the tactics which I adopted in that brief interval entirely depended my future chances, so far as my uncle's will was concerned. Anything like an arrest for debt, and that under his own rooftree, Spriggs agreed with me in the thinking that Mr. Gridling would not tolerate for a moment, and would effectually ruin me with him. Spriggs meditated for some minutes, and at last he spoke.

"'Mr. Kennedy,' he said, 'sir, you have always been a good friend to me. You say that, to the best of your belief, these bailiff fellers don't know you by sight, sir, but that you fancy some one did watch you as you were leaving Charing Cross this morning. That was no doubt a man sent to identify you; some understrapper who would describe your appearance to the pair who have come to Stagford.' (I wondered what was coming.) 'Now, sir, you and I are about the same height, and figure; you shall lend me that light greatcoat which you wore this morning sir, and for the next twenty-four hours I will be Robert Kennedy, Esq.

"I asked Spriggs to explain himself still further.

"'What I mean is this, sir. I will walk down the drive to the lodge gate, and wait till the fly with this lot comes. They will see me stop. 'Mr. Kennedy,' they will say, 'we want a word with you;' and off we shall go to London. The mistake won't be found out till we are twenty-five miles off, and then there will be no more trains to-night. My belief, sir, is that the letter which you will receive from master in an hour's time will make you able to settle this little matter a good many times over the first thing to-morrow morning.'

"It was a sufficiently startling proposal. I did not know what to say to it, but there was no time to hesitate. In five minutes I had accepted Sprigg's offer, and Spriggs had left me disguised as Bob Kennedy. For some little while I sat meditating matters. I took out my watch; it was twenty minutes past five. By this time Spriggs must have come up with my pursuers. I reflected again; again I took out my watch. It was now close on six, and by this time Spriggs must have been on the point of entering the railway carriage of the last train to town, unless, indeed, by some accident the stratagem had been discovered, and the officers of the Middlesex Sheriff were again on their road to Fairfield. In the midst of these meditations I was interrupted by a knock at my door. My worthy uncle entered, with a letter in his hand.

"'Robert,' he said, 'I did not know you were here, and had intended to leave this on your dressing-table. I told Spriggs to take it, but I can't find him. I suppose he has gone out. There, my boy, open it presently.' And so saying, my uncle departed.

"The envelope contained a check for £500.

"As for the confusion which Spriggs' unexpected absence created in my uncle's household, I will say nothing of it. We had a convival evening enough, but I own I rather expected the door to open every moment, and some myrmidon of the law to lay his hand upon my shoulder, informing me that Spriggs had been arrested by mistake. Let me pass over this. By eight o'clock next morning I was at Stagford Junction—four miles nearer London than Stagford terminus. Before nine I was in London. At ten minutes past nine my uncle's check was cashed; and after that, swiftly as hansom could take me from the Strand to Chancery lane, I was with Spriggs in his temporary confinement in Cursitor street. Strangely enough, so admirably had Spriggs filled his role, the mistake had not been discovered. I paid the sum, with expenses, and at 11 I was at Fairfield once more. Spriggs contrived to explain his absence to my uncle's satisfaction. Later in the day I went into business matters with my uncle's solicitor, an arrangement was soon after arrived at. Since then I have been able to thank Spriggs in the substantial manner he deserved. I set him up in this hotel—a slight recompense enough for the Twelfth-night character which he assumed in my interest."

"Is this a true story, Bob?" asked Mr. Crackshot, knocking the ashes out of his pipe.

"True, every word of it," was the reply. "Ask Spriggs, if you doubt."

And the landlord of the Kennedy Arms, who that moment entered to see whether the two gentlemen required anything further, confirmed, in a few emphatic sentences, the narrative.—Belgravia.

CHARLES SUMNER.

His Last Day in the United States Senate.

[Washington Cor. Chicago Times.]

Mr. Sumner arose yesterday Tuesday at his usual hour, and, after looking over his mail and receiving a few visitors, he took the F street line of cars, which pass his house, and rode to the Senate Chamber and took his seat at an unusually early hour, the reason for which soon after appeared. He remarked to your correspondent, who met him in the car, that he was feeling unusually well this bright, frosty morning; and only two days before, also remarked that he regarded himself in better health than for many years past. His fine physical presence seemed to give every assurance of that.

In half an hour after the Senate met on yesterday, Mr. Boutwell arose and said: "I also desire to lay before the Senate a resolution passed by the Legislature of Massachusetts, and ask that it be laid on the table and printed." The Chief Clerk read as follows:

"Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in the year 1874. Resolve rescinding and annulling a resolution passed Dec. 18, in the year 1872, relating to army registers and national flags.

"Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives in general court assembled, that the resolution passed on the 18th day of December, 1872, at the extra session of that year, relating to a bill introduced in the Senate of the United States, concerning the army register and regimental colors of the United States, be and hereby is rescinded and annulled."

Mr. Boutwell said: "I wish to call the attention of the Secretary to the fact that there is a letter from his Excellency the Governor, which should be read also."

The President—The letter will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
EXECUTIVE MANSION,
BOSTON, March 3, 1874.

"SIR: By vote of the 27th ult. the General Court requested me to forward to our Senators and Representates in Congress copies of the resolution passed by the present Legislature, rescinding the resolve passed by the Legislature of 1872, concerning the army register and national battle flags. It gives me pleasure to comply with this request, and herewith I inclose a copy of said resolution. I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

"W. B. WASHBURN.

"To Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Washington, D. C."

This public announcement to Congress that the Massachusetts Legislature had rescinded the resolution of censure passed on Mr. Sumner for introducing the bill indicated gave great satisfaction, if an exultant and pleased look could show it; but he said nothing to the Senate, as was expected, and only received the congratulations of Senators Fenton and Hamilton. But he seemed to feel as if this act had added to his existence, and was certainly one of the proudest moments of his life.

A dull financial debate then set in, and Mr. Sumner wandered around the chamber and over to the Democratic side, where he seldom used to go, and sat down in a seat by Senator Goldthwaite, of Alabama, his old classmate in college, and turning to Senator Bogy, of Missouri, he said: "I am glad to meet you in the Senate, and I should be pleased to have you call on me at my house. I am always at home in the evening." To Mr. Goldthwaite he passed the compliments of the day, and then went over to Senator Sargeant's seat, with whom he had never been intimate; but as they fought the Centennial bill together, he decided to ask the California Senator if he had received any anonymous and insulting letters for his course on that bill. "I have received several," said Mr. Sumner, "and they annoy me." Mr. Sargeant replied that he had not only received them by mail but by express, but paid no attention to them. It struck Senator Sargeant that he was not in his usual health, or he would not have allowed himself to become worried over such a trifling matter. He said good-bye to Mr. Sargeant, and a few minutes past 3 o'clock he took a seat near Mr. Ferry, of Connecticut, who had an affection of the spinal chord, somewhat similar to that of Mr. Sumner. They had often talked about the malady, and, both being affected, suggested various remedies, which each had found afforded relief. He told Mr. Ferry that the night previous (Monday) he felt badly, and had sent for his physician to administer a hypodermic injection of morphia, and asked him what he thought of such treatment, adding that it generally gave him ease.

Dreams.

Some philosopher, who evidently knows how it is himself, interprets dreams as follows:

If a man dreams the devil is after him, it is a sign he had better settle his subscription bill.

If he dreams of an earthquake, and a turmoil generally, it is a sign that he is going to get married.

If he (being a married man) dreams of some fearful mysterious danger, it is a sign that his mother-in-law is coming to spend a few days with her darling daughter.

If he dreams that his head is in danger and his hair all falls out, it is a sign he will have a quarrel with his wife.

If he dreams of being accosted by a strange man, who insists on talking with him, it is a sign that he had better know all the policemen.

If he dreams of making a fool of himself, it is a true sign that it is so.

The Feet.

The best remedy for cold feet is to dip them every night and morning in a basin of cold water, and afterward rub them dry with a coarse towel. To harden the feet, tannic acid has been used with success. Employ it in the proportion of five grains to a fluid ounce of water. To correct offensive smell of the feet, bathe them in a weak solution of permanganate of potassa; one scruple to eight ounces of water. For absorbing excessive perspiration of the feet, mix together seven ounces of the carbonate of magnesia, two ounces of powdered calcined alum, seven ounces of orris root, and half a drachm of powdered cloves.

The Anti-Rum War in Dayton.

A correspondent at Dayton, O., thus describes the manner of carrying on the crusade against whisky in that city. It will give the reader a fair idea of the manner in which this campaign is being waged all along the line, and of the terrible earnestness with which these praying women go about their work:

The women moved from headquarters in four columns, marched up Jefferson and Main, and deployed in front of the establishments heretofore assailed. The scenes generally were less animating and exciting than yesterday, the rabble seeming indisposed generally to renew their ribaldries. The women form for action near the curbstone, and are speedily encompassed by a crowd who watch with varying manifestations and emotions. The line of men file into the bars to quench real or affected thirst, and the clink of foaming glasses chimes in with the soft pathetic notes of the worshipful women, but the plaintive voice of prayer, when the women, on bended knees, supplicate the mercy of God, produces an instant and indescribable hush even in the bar-rooms, and as the eloquent pleadings ascend, the influence quickly strikes the nearest rank of spectators, permeates and pervades to the uttermost rim of the ragged semi-circle formed about them. There are moments when the women weep and pray, when their influence is thrillingly oppressive, and men, even, who do not approve of saloon devotions, are unconsciously but irresistably affected. The resolute crusaders will not desist from the labor they have undertaken. In the West End suburb one coarse woman sat at the open window of her saloon, drinking beer, while prayer and praise were progressing, making vulgar remarks, and occasionally flinging the rinsings of her glass at the earnest devotees, or flinging fragments of pretzels at them spitefully.

At the close of the day, the prayer-bands return to the church and report publicly, and receive orders to renew the assault the next morning. They join in a parting prayer and separate to their several homes.

WHEN any antidote or remedy for any particular class of disease obtains a wide-spreading notoriety, it is but reasonable to suppose that it must merit the popularity it receives. It is within our province to mention that DR. J. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS, so long and favorably known as the safest and most reliable remedial agent for the cure of Liver, Kidney, Bladder, and Glandular Diseases, Mental and Physical Debility, and all complaints emanating from a corrupt state of the blood, etc., are in great demand. So satisfied are we of the intrinsic worth of this medicine, that we do not hesitate to notice it in our columns. It is well to mention that this medicine is compounded of roots, herbs, and flowers of California, and has no fiery material or alcohol used in its preparation. We can add no better eulogium than the fact that we use it constantly in our own family, and each member thereof partakes of it, when necessary, according to directions.—New York Paper. 34

THE West is becoming mentally and morally independent of the East. Twenty years ago the Illinois farmers, if the idea of organization had been suggested to them, would have carefully perused the New York papers to see what it was best to do. Twenty years ago the Ohio ladies would not have dared to pray in front of a saloon until they learned that their sisters in Massachusetts were on their knees. Now, both men and women at the West are ready to take the lead.—Buffalo Express.

THE oldest fireman in Utica died the other day, and he wanted to be buried with his red shirt on so as to be ready for an alarm.

An Outgrowth of Other Disease!

Catarrh sometimes exists alone, but is more frequently a symptom of other diseased conditions. The following letter explains it:

COLLINGWOOD, Onondaga Co., N. Y., Jan. 25, 1872.
DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—Allow me to give you a brief history of the effect of your medicine called "Golden Medical Discovery" in my case. I am now in my seventy-fourth year, and naturally of firm constitution. Within the last few years, from over-exercise, I have been afflicted with a complication of diseases almost incredible to relate. In the first place, Catarrh, to a degree that, to me, it seemed that my voice passed out at the ears, to which was added its natural ally—Bronchitis, to which, at no great length of time, were added Neuralgic pains in the head and shoulders and bloating of the lower limbs, the most of which was superinduced by a torpid state of the liver. I had the advice of several eminent physicians, and tried almost every known remedy for such complaints without relief. A rapid loss of strength and waste of flesh, reminded me that I could not long withstand the combined force of disease which was fast bearing me down. I gave up all business, made my will, had my grave-stone placed in position and lettered, except date of exit, and resigned myself to my couch to await events. Not long after this, I saw your advertisement, procured your remedies—I am now on the second half-dozen bottles of Golden Medical Discovery—have a good appetite, have gained fifteen pounds of flesh—no more talk out of my ears, no more bloating of the limbs, can walk two or three miles with ease, and feel that you have given me a lease of ten or fifteen years—subject, however, to the ratification of the Court above. That you may live long to do good to suffering humanity, is the sincere wish of

Your unknown friend, LUTHER COLE.

IT is a rare thing that physicians give any countenance to a medicine, the manufacture of which is a secret. About the only exception we know of is Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. This, we believe, all indorse, and many of them use it in their practice with great success.—[Com.

PERSONS requiring purgatives or pills should be careful what they buy. Some pills not only cause griping pains, but leave the bowels in a torpid, costive state, Parsons' Purgative Pills will relieve the bowels and cleanse the blood without injury to the system.—[Com.

WISHART'S
PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.
Nature's Great Remedy
FOR ALL
THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES!!
It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medicinal properties are retained. Tar even in its crude state has been recommended by eminent physicians of every school. It is confidently offered to the afflicted for the following simple reasons:
1. IT CURES,—not by abruptly stopping the cough—but by dissolving the phlegm and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter causing the irritation. In cases of seated CONSUMPTION it both prolongs and renders less burdensome the life of the afflicted sufferer.
2. Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain, and subduing inflammation.
3. IT PURIFIES AND ENRICHES THE BLOOD. Positively curing all humors, from the common PIMPLE or ERUPTION to the severest cases of Scrofula. Thousands of affidavits could be produced from those who have felt the beneficial effects of PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL in the various diseases arising from IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD.
4. It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.
All who have known or tried Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's remedies require no references from us, but the names of thousands cured by them can be given to any one who doubts our statement. Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Great American Dyspepsia Pills and WORM SUGAR DROPS have never been equalled. For sale by all Druggists and Storekeepers, and at

Hygienic Notes.

GLYCERINE of lime, used in burns is said by De Bruyne to soothe the pain and to prevent inflammation or diminish its intensity; it is prepared from recently slaked lime, one part; glycerine, fifty parts; chlorinated hydrochloric ether, one part.

REMEDY FOR CORNS AND BUNIONS.—Squeeze out the juice of two good lemons; put it in a bottle, add one dozen small pearl buttons—old ones will do as well as new; shake the bottle well a few times until the buttons are all dissolved, when it is ready for use. Apply with the finger to the corn or bunion twice a day until a cure is effected. I have never known it to fail of accomplishing the desired result. It is very penetrating. Keep closely corked.—Mrs. H. S. B., in Rural New Yorker.

THUMB-SUCKING.—I have observed that peculiar and rather common deformity of the chest is caused by the habit of sucking the thumb in infancy and early childhood. The weight of the arm on the thorax of the child during sleep produces depression of the ribs in the line occupied by the arm when the thumb is placed in the mouth. As this is a very important effect of "thumb-sucking" never hitherto pointed out, I think it desirable to place this thing on record for the benefit of other observers.—British Medical Journal.

ARNICA HAIR WASH.—An exchange vouches for the following: When the hair is falling off and becoming thin from frequent use of castor, macassar oils, etc., or when premature baldness arises from illness, the arnica hair wash will be found of great service in arresting the mischief. It is thus prepared: Take elder water, half a pint; sherry wine, half a pint; tincture of arnica, half an ounce; alcoholic ammonia, one drachm—if this last named ingredient is old and has lost its strength, then two drachms instead of one may be employed. The whole of these are to be mixed in a lotion bottle, and applied to the head every night with a sponge. Wash the head with warm water twice a week. Soft brushes only must be used during the growth of the young hair.

DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.—W. S. Raymond, M. D., sends the Country Gentleman the following remedy which he says has [illegible]: One-half pound Epsom salts; 1 ounce sweet spirits niter—measurement; ½ ounce sulphuric acid; ½ tablespoon oil sassafras; alcohol enough to cut; ½ tablespoon cochineal; 1½ pints rain water. Dose, tablespoonful three times a day, before each meal. Beware of such food (as much as possible) as will give you trouble after eating. Take plenty of out-door exercise, and, above all, be as cheerful as possible. Eat no bread which has been baked for a period less than 24 hours, and if addicted to coffee drinking, substitute tea for it. Eat plenty of green apples, if they can be had, and on arising in the morning take two or three swallows of good, cold water. By observing these, I am sanguine a cure will be affected.

WHOOPING COUGH IN THE LAST STAGE.—A writer in the Medical Journal, London, states that in cases of whooping cough in the last stage—that is, after the third week—he has had one ounce of the strongest liquid ammonia put into a gallon of water in an open pan, and the steam kept up by means of half a brick made red hot throughout, and put into the boiling water containing the ammonia, the pan being placed in the middle of a room, into which the patients were brought as the ammonia steam was passing off. This method, he says, was used in the evening, before bed-time, and it proved so efficacious in abating the spasmodic attack, and after three or four days terminating the malady, as to establish, beyond doubt, the value of this mode of inhaling ammonia as a therapeutic agent in tranquilizing the nervous system in the whooping cough.

The Currencies of Europe.

The total amount of gold coin circulating in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland at the close of 1872 was £84,551,000 sterling; silver, £15,000,000; bronze, £1,148,000; excess of bank-notes over coin reserves, £40,540,000; total circulation in coin and notes, £141,239,000; being equivalent in United States gold coin to $686,421,540. The metallic currency, coin and bullion of France is given at 4,000,000,000 francs; notes of the Bank of France in circulation on Dec. 26, 1873, 2,807,689,625 francs; total, 6,807,689,625 francs. Deduct metallic reserve in bank Dec. 28, 759,962,419 francs, and the currency circulation is 6,047,727,206 francs, equivalent in United States gold coin, at twenty cents to the franc, to $1,209,545,441. In the twenty-two States composing the North German Confederation the supposed aggregate of coin is 632,435,362 thalers. The coin held in reserve by the banks to protect their note circulation is 100,000,000 thalers, leaving in the hands of the people 532,435,362 thalers. The notes in the hands of the people amount to 253,159,504 thalers, equivalent in United States gold coin to $557,772,098. The German Government in the last two years has coined about 334,000,000 thalers in gold.

From the above it will appear that in England the gold and silver circulation is £103,500,000 against £37,700,000 in notes; in France 4,000,000,000 francs of metallic currency against 2,807,689,625 francs in notes; in Germany, 632,435,362 thalers of metallic currency against 253,159,142 thalers of paper currency.

In the United States there is virtually no metallic currency, and the note circulation, including national bank notes, legal tenders, fractional currency and other treasury notes, exceeds $800,000,000.

The Truth About Macduff and Macbeth.

Macduff was an historical character, and the claims of the Earls of Fife and Wemys to be descended from him are tolerably well authenticated; but the witches' prophecy to Banquo, "Thou shalt get Kings, though thou be none," was not verified by events. "Early authorities show no such persons as Banquo and his son Fleance, nor have we reason to think that the latter ever fled farther from Macbeth than across the flat scene, according to the stage directions. Neither were Banquo or his son ancestors of the house of Stuart." Instead of being a usurper, Macbeth was a legitimate claimant of the throne; instead of being the victim of a midnight and treacherous murder, Duncan was slain in fair fight at a place called Bothgowan, near Elgin, in 1039; instead of being a tyrant, Macbeth was a firm, just and equitable ruler; instead of being killed at Dunsinane, he fell, two years after his defeat there, at Lumphanan.

A Mile in Thirty-One Seconds.

The following story of the achievement in respect of speed in an ice-boat on the Hudson in the vicinity of Staatsburg is told by the Poughkeepsie Eagle: "Thursday last the wind blew very fresh from the south, and the owner of the new ice-boat Cyclone determined to take advantage of the favorable opportunity for timing his yacht. The Hudson at this point is very wide, and at the course selected its breadth is one mile. Having made every preparation for the feat to be accomplished, the reef points were shaken out of the sails, and every stitch of canvass spread to the gale. With two men on the windward runner to keep the boat down to the ice, the helm was turned, the sails filled, and in a moment, with every inch of canvas, drawing, she was under full headway. Like an arrow from a bow, she darted away on the course, clouds of pulverized ice following in the track of her runners as they hummed over the surface of the river, and in what seemed but an instant the river had been crossed, and the mile accomplished in the almost incredible time of thirty-one seconds, being at a rate of two miles in a minute and two seconds. Persons on shore compared the speed of the flying racer to that of a meteor flashing through the sky, and watched her movements with eager interest. The owner afterward put the boat through some movements on the ice, and astonished, as well as paralyzed, the lookers-on by sailing all the way across the river on one runner, the force of the wind throwing her over on her beam ends, and raising the windward runner from ten to twelve feet above the ice. Although but few were found willing to partake of the amusement, all seemed disposed to coincide in the opinion that ice yachting is the most exhilerating of sports, and the evolutions of which one of these yachts is capable, the most graceful of anything they had ever witnessed."

A Champion Birth-Room.

There is a room in the house now occupied by Francis Gibson, in Spring township, Perry county, Pa., in which occurred the births of John B. Gibson, Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania; George Gibson, Commissary of the United States; Dr. John Bernheisel, the Mormon who first represented the Mormons in Congress; the Hon. John Bigler, Governor of California from 1852 to 1855; and the Hon. William Bigler, Governor of Pennsylvania from 1852 to 1855, who is now living in Chesterfield, Pa. Is there any other room in the Unitnd States that can make a claim to furnishing the birth-place of so many prominent persons?

A Good Memory.

While journeying by rail, not long since, I witnessed the following incident: One night after I had scrambled into my sleeping berth, I heard loud and angry voices proceeding from the rear of the car. I tell you this is a sleeping car, and you can't come in without a ticket." "Begorra, I had a ticket." "Where is it?" "I've lost it." "If you really had the misfortune to lose your ticket, perhaps you can remember your berth." There was an interval of silence, Paddy evidently employing his thinking powers, "Och, be jabers!" he exclaimed at length, "I was born on the 26th day of October, 1848."

Remedy for a Cold.

A hot lemonade is one of the best remedies in the world for a cold. It acts promptly and effectually and has no unpleasant after effects. One lemon properly squeezed, cut in slices, put with sugar, and covered with half a pint of boiling water. Drink just before going to bed, do not expose yourself on the following day. This remedy will ward off an attack of the chills and fever if used promptly. We give it on the recommendation of one of the Judges of our courts, who is a just man and never takes bribes.

SPLENDID and UNPARALLELED TRIUMPHS
OF THE
WHEELER & WILSON
Sewing Machine Co.,
NEW YORK.
Over Eighty-one Competitors,
AT THE World's Exposition, Vienna, 1873, &c.

1. The Knight's Cross of the Imperial Order of "Francis Joseph," conferred by his Apostolic Majesty the Emperor of Austria, upon the Honorable Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Company, as the founder and builder of Sewing Machine Industry.

2. [illegible] recommended by the International Jury for this Sewing Machine only, for their important contributions to the material and social welfare of mankind.

3. The Grand Medal for Progress, awarded for their New No. 6 Sewing Machine, being for progress made since the Paris Exposition of 1867, at which the only Gold Medal for Sewing Machines was awarded to this Company. Hence the Vienna award marks Progress not from a low level or inferior medal, but from a Gold Medal, the highest award made at Paris.

4. The Grand Medal for Merit, for the development of Needle Industry and excellence and superiority of manufactured samples exhibited.

5. A Grand Medal for Merit, for excellence and superiority of Cabinet work, the only award of the kind in this section.

6. Medals for several Co-operators, of the Wheeler & Wilson Company for superior ability.

7. The Official Report, published by the General Direction of the Vienna Exposition, signalizes the supremacy of the Wheeler & Wilson Company for quantity and quality of manufacture, and position in the Sewing Machine business, as follows:

OFFICIAL REPORT, VIENNA EXPOSITION, SEWING MACHINES, &c.
(GROUP 13, SEC. 2, B.)

"The greatest Sewing Machine Manufactory in the world is that of Wheeler & Wilson, New York, which alone has brought already over 900 000 of their Sewing Machines into practical use. The complete production of the parts by machinery is so regulated that each complete machine may be used as a sample for exhibition. This firm produces 600 well adjusted machines daily.

"The latest production of this firm, and which is the wonder of the Vienna Exposition, is their new No. 6 Sewing Machine. This universal machine sews the heaviest leather harness and the finest gauzes with a truly pearl stitch.

"Wheeler & Wilson have received the highest prizes at all World's Expositions, and at the Vienna Exposition were extraordinarily distinguished."

FURTHER DISTINGUISHED HONORS.

"The MARYLAND INSTITUTE has awarded WHEELER & WILSON the GOLD MEDAL for their New No. 6 Sewing Machine. Other Sewing Machines received nothing."

"SAVANNAH, November 4, 1873.

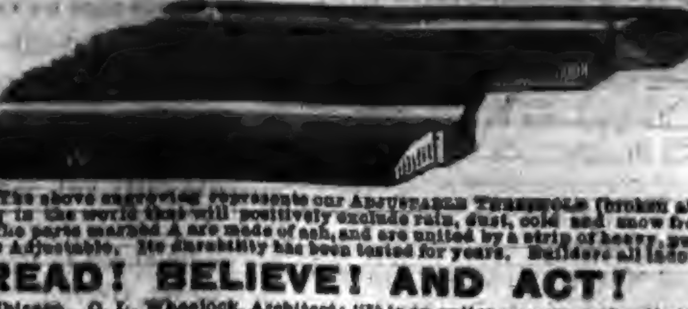
TO CARPENTERS! HOW TO MAKE MONEY!



DESCRIPTION.—The above engraving represents our ADJUSTABLE THRESHOLD (broken at one end). It is the only thing in the world that will positively exclude rain, dust, cold and snow from coming under the door. The parts marked A are made of ash, and are united by a strip of heavy, pure rubber, marked B, which is Adjustable. Its durability has been tested for years. Builders all indorse it.

Bowman, New Orleans, La.: "I can sell a number. There is money in it." Thos. Terwilliger, Deckertown, N. J.: "What will you take for Orange Co., N. Y., and what will you supply Thresholds for?"

The foregoing testimony speaks for itself. We need not add a word. Applications for County Rights are increasing. If you want one or more counties, speak quick. Our prices are very low, as we own the right for the United States. There is plenty of money can be made out of it. One man in Indiana made over $50 in one day. Others are doing remarkably well. [illegible] not pay all the money down, we sell on monthly payments. [illegible] Name your territory and send for terms. Retail price for single doors is $2.50.

☞ A rare opportunity is offered to parties possessing capital, who desire to purchase the right for one or more States, and engage in manufacturing and selling. A large return can soon be realized on the sum invested. Send for particulars. Address

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

The Auburn Courier

Thursday, March 26th, 1874

Judge Louis Dent, brother-in-law of the President, died last Sunday.

The Emperor William is seventy-seven years of age, and is of the opinion that the peace of Europe is dependent on the size of the German army.

An engine in the Pennsylvania Railroad company's yards, at Altoona, Pa., got started in some way, and ran through the round house, across an open space and into a large machine shop, in which over 500 men were at work. One man was killed an another wounded. The engine smashed everything in its course.

The National Crop Reporter says there was an increase of 9 4-10 in the area sown with winter wheat last fall in the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, and Ohio. In Illinois the increase is 22 per cent. Iowa shows a decrease of 19 per cent, to be attributed to the severe draught last summer. The condition of the fruit trees is good, and a fine yield is expected.

A man by the name of Underwood came from Cleveland to Detroit and commenced paying attention to a beautiful and accomplished young lady by the name of Miss Pridgeon, with intention of marrying her. Before accomplishing his object Miss P. received a letter from Underwood's divorced wife, in Cleveland, warning her of his direputable character, and she rejected him, whereupon he stabbed her through the heart, killing her instantly.

An exchange makes this excellent point: "Our little army number 25,000 men, but the staff of officers count 633, many of them of the rank of brigedier general. When the Prussian army numbered 400,000 men, its staff was composed of 100 officers, all told. The Russian army of 800,000 men had a staff of 300 officers. The reader can see by this comparison where so much of the army expenses go to. Our army is considered all head and no tail.'"

There is some prospect that the question of currency will have some practical solution in a few days. The Committee of Ways and Means have agreed to put upon its passage under a suspension of the rules, the bill legalizing the issue of the $44,000,000 reserve, making the volume of the currency $400,000,000. The indications are that the bill will pass by an overwhelming majority. As this is the precisely the measure most in favor on the first day of the session, the three month s' discussion has been so much wasted time.

There is at this moment in the vaults of the New York banks a sum of more than $20,000,000 (greenbacks) above the legal bank reserve, that cannot be lent because nobody can use it profitably. The greenback excess above the legal maximum of $356,000,000 is now $26,000,000. The $6,000,000 not accounted for in the New York banks is lying idle in Boston and Philadelphia. This unusable money cannot get to the South and West, because these sections are already in debt to the commercial centers.

Alexander T. Stewart is reported worth at least $50,000; Cornelius Vanderbilt $40,000,000; William B. Astor, $100,000,000; and John Jacob Astor Jr., $250,000,000. An exchange remarks that "the aphorism "A fool for luck and a poor man for children," projects another, "A sage for misfortune, and a millionaire for paucity of offspring.". The latter half of the latter adage will apply to the three richest Manhattenese.

John Jacob Astor had but two sons and three daughters. Wm. B. Astor has the same number. Alexander T. Stewart is childless. Cornelius Vanderbilt has two sons, if one always counts one, and two or three daughters, not more than nine or ten children in all to represent," all this immense wealth.

The Cambridge City Tribune says: The Van Amburg menagerie is preparing to leave its quarters here for the summer campaign.

Logansport is agitating the question of water works.

Logansport has a debt of $318,000.

The New York World truthfully remarks that we can think of nothing so fitted to mortify human pride and abate the exultation of success as the fact that every one of the four most efficient of upbuilders of the Republican party lost its confidence and alienated its managers before their eyes were closed in the last sleep. Seward, Chase, Greeley, Sumner, were regarded as standing outside the pale of the Republicans organization in the last years of their lives, although the party was indebted to them for all its early successes and its final triumph. A party which thus casts aside its honored leaders has outlived its original principles.

In discussing the late speech of Mr. Dawes, the St. Louis Democrat, (a Republian paper) says: "Politicians may rail at Mr. Dawes and accuse him of infideltiy to his party, but they cannot thus dispose of his facts and logic. The Republican party has an overwhelming majority in both houses, and it must assume the responsibility of initiating and carryidg out the measures necessary to relieve the government from the financial embarrassments which surround and threaten it. We must manage to get more money into the treasury, and stop the leaks through which it is wasting. Mr. Dawes plainly shows where the leaks are." That is a fact, and the people know just how to stop them.

Funeral of Senator Sumner.

The obiequies of Senator Sumner took place at Boston, at half past three o'clock Monday afternoon in King's Chapel. The remains were conveyed from Doric Hall in a hearse drawn by four black horses, escorted by a force of mounted State constables, followed by a procession of executive and legislative authorities, the congressional committee and delegation, United States officials, municipal authorities, and other bodies. The pall bearers were ex-Governor Clifford, ex-Governor Bullock, ex-Governor Claflin, ex-Governor Washburne, ex-Chief Justice Bigelow, N. P. Banks, Robert C. Winthrop, Charles Francis Adams, John G. Whittier and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

DOLEFUL LAMENTATIONS.

The defeat of the Grant party in New Hampshire has evoked some doleful lamentations from the Radical press. The Boston Journal (Republican) says:

"And now we have the result. Will it be heeded at Washington?—for certainly nothing else seems to be. Let it be remembered that it required an honorable effort to keep this warning from New Hampshire from being worse than it is. Many and many Republicans, utterly depressed in heart, took pains to go and cast his vote, just because he did not want any interference to be drawn favorable to the Democracy, and he hoped that the present adverse influences at Washington would pass away. We, also, have the same hope; and if this admonition from the people shall contribute to that end, it will afford some mitigation of a local defeat and put a stop to others."

The Concord, New Hampshire Monitor (Republican) thus comments the defeat of its party in the State:

"We charge the repulse we have suffered to the shortcomings, and unavoidable in part there is no doubt, of the national government. We were too heavily handicapped with Sanborn contracts, Jayne and Binghamp blackmailing, western inflation schemes, the moiety system, and the failure of congress to meet the wants of the masses by legislation, demanded by the hard times. Nor is it exaggeration to state that the Simmons fight lost us a thousand votes.

The Democrats of the Massachusetts legislature show that if they are not in power, it is not because they don't deserve to be. They nominated that splendid lawyer, Judge Curtis, for Sumner's place, and he is one of the few men that could fill it.. Hoar, however, seems to have the chance, and his selection would be an improvement of a marked kind on the stuff the Republican party has lately selected for the places of trust. He is an honest man, and capable beyond the commen run of politicians.—State Sentinel.

We trust that the following, from the Columbus Dispatch, will be given general circulation by the press:

"Governor Allen returns all the free passes he receives. Old as he is, he is determined for awhile yet to keep out of the ranks of the deadheads. His white head is as clear on this point as it was when the same head was dark, and when he refused all extra-mileage, 'Old Bill Allen is a rare model for these days."

It is through such gratifying paragraphs as these that we are reconciled to having given our support last fall to "an old fossil."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Pioneer Sketches

—OF—

DeKALB COUNTY

NUMBER FOUR.

John P. Widney states that he and some others came up with a load of provision, late in November, 1836, when the river was swollen with the fall rains, and the "slush ice" was running, and ice froze on the poles whenever they drew them out of the water. These icy poles had to be used with the bare hands, as gloves or mittens could not be used. In this way it required a full week to come up.

Provisions were very scarce and dear at Fort Wayne, at the time. Flour rose to $14 per barrel, and sometimes "wormy" at that. Corn was $1,50 per bushel in the ear, and much of it rotten. Salt was $2,25 per bushel, and other things in proportion.

Living thus distant from mill and market, and that market so high, it may be readily imagined that the settlers would all sometimes be reduced to straits in the provision line; and that those scarce of cash, must necessarily have seen very hard times, in that respect. Such was actually the case. There were but few families, I suppose, but that sometimes were pinched with hunger, without the immediate means on hand to satisfy it. Several days together, had nearly all of them, sometimes to subsist upon potatoes instead of bread; and some would even have been glad to get potatoes. It was reported that one family, now in comfortable circumstances, had to live live several weeks on vegetables, gathered from the woods, and cooked as "greens," with milk and beech bark. Imagine to yourself the cabin of the settler visited in such circumstances, by severe fevers and agues; sometimes prostrating the whole family for weeks, and you will not wonder that some were discouraged, and wished themselves back again at their comfortable eastern homes.

Are you a "new comer" into our country? And would you like a picture of the cabin of the early day? Well, you shall have a rough sketch of one.—Say we have it 16 feet by 18 in size, and just high enough for the joists, below the first rib, and then "cobbed off" as usual". One man cuts the logs in perhaps half a day, or at most a day. Another, with a yoke of cattle and a log chain, "snakes" them out, as fast as cut, to the little spot cleared off for the cabin. The next day they cut a large white oak that will 'rive' and, sawing it into blocks, four feet long, these are split into "bolts," and these bolts riven into "shakes" or clapboards. Well, the next day the neighbors come in, from five or six miles around, and throw up the logs, and "notch them down in their natural rough state, and one man perhaps, "skutches down the inside of the logs as fast as they are put down in their place; while yet another cuts a straight grained ash; and splits puncheons, two inches thick, for the floor, and dresses off one side with his axe. Before night the house is cobbed off, the clapboards is laid on the ribs, and the heavy "weight poles" laid on to keep them in their place, and "knees" placed to keep these poles from rolling down; these knees commencing against the "butting pole" at the eave of the cabin, which butting pole" at the "eave bearer" (projecting some two feet on each side of the building,) against large pins driven into these eave bearers. The "raising" being now over, the owner next builds a "back wall" of "niggerheads" (as the rough stones were called,) gathered perhaps from a half a mile around, as they are sparsely scattered over the surface, or out of the bed of the creek or river, or perhaps not taking the trouble to gather these niggerhead, he builds the wall of "mud," made of clay dug from the inside of the cabin, just in front of where he expects to have his hearth. The wall is, say, six feet wide and four feet high; built against the end wall of the cabin, equa-distant from the corners. Now he seeks a small tree, with a "crook" similar to a sleigh runner, and cutting it of a proper length splits it for the "arms" of his chimney. These are placed one at each end of his back wall, with one end of each arm in a crevice between the logs of the cabin, and the other lodged against the rough joist, the crook being downward, entering the crevice a little below the top of the back wall. Splitting the "sticks" for his chimney, about the size of plastering lath, he now commences building alternate layers of sticks and mud on the arms, above described, about three feet by six at first, but gradually drawing in until it is about two feet by four, and then running up, perpendicularly, until the top of his chimney peers above the roof, out of the hole there left for it. Making his hearth of clay, well beaten down, he next lays his puncheon floor; makes his clapboard door, or hangs up a quilt in place of it; puts in his six light sash, with glass or greased paper to transmit the light.

MRS. J. H. FORD, Prest.

Mrs. F. Buchanan, Sec.

The ladies social of the Presbyterian church met at the residence of Mr. Swineford, our popular hotelist, and were pleasantly entertained by his admirable wife, on yesterday afternoon.

A gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Tolan, remarked the other day, on his arrival here that the prospects for Auburn were brighter and more encouraging than any other town he has noticed for some time. And we believe him.

The principal enjoyment of Fort Wayne papers these times is toadying to what they call brilliant weddings. Persons living in that city are sure of a column notice, and more according to extant of pocket book.

M. Houston has now full control of the meat market owned by Mr. Long, and having fitted it up so as to keep fresh meats, neat, clean and nice, is now ready to supply all with the best of fresh meat at the lowest rates. See card.

Whatever may have been the rumor that caused us to remark, last week, that the barbers would open their shops on Sunday, we are now assured that this will not be done. Our barbers generally are of that class who "Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy."

From the Logansport Pharos we learn that two attempts have recently been made on the Detroit, Eel River and Illinois Railroad, to throw passenger trains off the track by placing obstructions thereon. Mr. Southard, General Superintendent, offers a reward of $100 for the arrest of any person found interfering with the track.

Mr. Lear, of Fort Wayne was here the other day to see about a location for the manufacture of brick. He says he likes Auburn, but is offered a good chance at Huntington. He thinks the figures pretty high here for real estate, and don't feel like paying $100 just for one foot from the top of an acre of ground. If we had a few more cheeky speculators, it would assist materially in keeping the town within its present bounds.

The literary exercises connected with our school every Friday evening is becoming quite a popular resort, and much good is evidently resulting therefrom. We beg leave to suggest that the exercises commence earlier and close earlier. Ten and eleven o'clock is most too late an hour in which to indulge in these things.

Our little joke about the temperance movement at Waterloo, was greatly appreciated by our friends there, except the obtuse Charles W., whose tender sensibilities have been shocked by what he calls indecency. Quite a number of the citizens of Waterloo will hardly consider what Charles says in the light of a compliment, because we know they enjoyed it. But the idea of so foul mouthed a cur as Charles Washington talking about indecency. "We tumble."

Corn in Illinois can be bought for 30 cents of the farmer and is worth 90 in New York. Now if it does not take the cost of two bushels in Illinois to get the price of one in New York, then we don't know how to figure. And yet Charley Washington says it only costs about one-fourth of the price in Illinois to get it to market. The farmer is forced to sell his crop at one-third its value, in New York. If we meant pumpkins it evidently was the pumpkin head of Charles W.

Another great person has been found in our midst. His name is Edward Everett. We do not know whether he is the son of the great orator, but he can write like a machine. There is one thing we would do however, if we had such a machine, [illegible]. He sends us a communication, but with the assistance of several histories, dictionaries, and our full force we have been trying to make out what the writer says, but it looks more like the marks on a tea chest than 'ritin'. Come in, Edward, and let us know what you mean.

SOMETHING BEAUTIFUL.—We called at the millinery establishment of Mrs. Martin and Hogue the other day, and found it well supplied with a large and varied assortment of those things that go to make beautiful women still more handsome. They have a fine display of millinery and fancy goods, that ought to satisfy the taste of the most critical. There are flowers, and ribbons, and laces, and hues and colors to suit every complexion. And still better they manufacture them into those attractive articles of dress that never fail to please the eye. What is woman without these little evidences of taste that so modestly become her. Then go straightway to this establishment and make your selections and have one of those delightful bonnets made according to the new spring fashion. It don't cost much, because they have put down their goods to the lowest prices. No man with half a heart will allow his wife to dress shabby, or fail to bestow those little attentions that the fair sex so manifestly appreciate. Rooms over Davenport & Co.'s drug store.

MR. EDITOR:—The scripture puzzle published last week by John Harvey, brings to my mind a riddle my mother used to tell. It ran thus:

> There was a man of Adam's race
> Who had a certain dwelling place,
> T'was not in heaven nor yet in hell,
> Nor on earth where mortals dwell.

What animal, person or thing did God create perfect yet without a soul, but did in after time give it a soul, and after three days took it away again. Ask the Whale.

W. M.

MR. EDITOR:—In your last week's paper I read a scriptural puzzle and an answer solicited. The name of that wonderful animal is recorded in the 12th chapter and 40th verse in the Book of St. Matthew, and also referred to in the Book of Jonah, 1st chapter, 17th verse. LETTIE W.

The splendid barn of T. C. Elson, about one mile west of Auburn, was consumed by fire on last Tuesday about noon. There were 300 bushels of wheat and a quantity of oats, corn and hay burned with it. The loss will amount to $1,500. A buggy and other articles on the barn floor was saved. A boy about eleven years old, playing with another boy about the barn, lit a match near the straw pile adjoining the barn, when the straw got on fire and in a moment all was in flames. It was terribly careless, and yet the boy was innocent enough in intention. We regret this misfortune to our friend T. C., especially at this time as he was laboring unceasingly to pay off the debt incurred in the purchase of that farm.

WATERLOO ITEMS.—The Haines Brothers of Sedan, candy manufacturers, are making arrangements to locate at Waterloo. ... Philip Morell has sold out his boot and shoe establishment to Lieb & Camp. ....C. A. O. McClellan, Esq., has sold his large steam flouring mills to C. B. Abbott, of Jonesville, for $19,150 ....The Temperance crusade has opened. The Press says: In a few cases the druggists signed the "mildest" of the pledges offered by the crusaders, judging that they would not interfere with business to any great extent. No converts were secured, we understand, among the saloon men, they unitedly refusing to take any pledges, further than to live up to the present temperance law, as nearly as possible.

BUTLER ITEMS.—The News says: Forty-eight car loads of freight passed through this place on Monday night, off the Eel River road....Farmers generally claim that wheat sown broadcast has almost entirely frozen out this winter, while that put in by drills bids fair to make crop.... George Heusler is filling up the room recently occupied by O. T. Clark, with hardware, stoves, &c. His prospects for a good trade are flattering. We hope Mr. H. will sell at figures which will attract rather than drive away the trade from our place....Business rooms are in demand and a dozen could be leased at good figures were there some one to erect them. ....If a young man from Butler visits Waterloo, and goes by the way of Auburn, and while there slips quietly into the Clerk's office, and returns with a slight blush on the cheek, don't it look a little suspicious?

The ladies were out in full force again last Monday, at Waterloo, and they seem determined to accomplish some good.—The signs are favorable.

Remember the new Millinery goods at Mrs Little's.

Perhaps one of the most brilliant and instructive performances ever given to an Auburn audience was that of Christie & Johnson's minstrels, on last Monday evening. The delicacy in which the whole programme was conceived, the remarkable adaptation of each of the eminent artists to their particular role, was simply superb. To assure our readers of these facts, we only need mention the names of Dick Lunsford, Bob Bayles, and Gettel, of Paris, sometimes vulgularly called Butler Center. The fine conception of the characterization was sublime, so fine that it wasn't distinguishable to the naked eye. There was a pathos in the songs, a humor in each joke so innocently perpetrated, a coloring in each make up, that can never be approximated by any other troupe. The modesty that [illegible] upon the veteran members of the troupe would have been indeed pitiful to behold had it been in sight. We are gratified that we can speak so flatteringly of this remarkable combination of cheek. A petition will be circulated among our citizens to have them appear again at an early day, though we are sorry to see a desire upon the part of a few inappreciative ones to have it indefinitely postponed. It is rumored that the troupe will open a four week's engagement at the Opera House in Butler Center. We are sorry we said anything about chopping cord wood. It was terribly rough on the wood.

MR. EDITOR.—In your last issue there is an article under "Religious," over "W. M B." and about the "Devil."

The last sentence is, "In all candor and brotherly love I am enquiring after truth" He may be enquiring after truth, but I think he has taken the poorest way to secure it.

Suppose one of the students, after having the principal of our school explain a problem in mathematics, and not understanding him fully, or having some difficulty with regard to it, should write an article addressed to his instructor, publish it in the county paper, requesting him to explain through the columns of the COURIER, and not even give his name so he may know who is making inquiry, would you think that his real object was to acquire information?

Would you not think that if he was "seeking after truth" that he would go to his teacher and see him personally, or address a note to him stating his difficulties and receive the desired information? and not purposely conceal himself under three capital?

Now, if Mr. W. M. B. realy desired light on the subject, why did he not go to to Brother Long personally and converse with him, or if he could explain his wants better on paper, address him through the Postoffice, (I am of the opinion that Bro. L. did not need to have it printed in order to read it) and is he not extremely modest to be willing to receive the desired information in the obscurity that W. M. B. gives him?

If it had not been for that last sentence which the writer was thoughtful enough to add, I for one should have done him the extreme injustice of having thought that he did it to provoke a public discussion of the subject, rather than inquire after truth, (otherwise he would not have the explanations in the COURIER instead of by mail,) and to tell what he knew about the Devil rather than seeking for light on the subject.

As I do not wish information I subscribe myself, A. B. C.

A Merited Tribute.

"Prof. J. H. Smart, of Fort Wayne, is said to be a Democratic candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, in opposition to Prof. Hopkins."—Indianapolis News.

"Well, why not in opposition to Hopkins or any other man? Prof. Smart has proved himself one of the smartest school superintendents in the State, is a thorough scholar, a thorough gentleman, and, withal, very popular."—Peru (Ind.) Republican.

All of which we endorse, but we do not think it will be an opposition to Mr. Hopkins, as we think he will step aside and allow the only man that can fill the bill as his successor to take his place.

NOBLE COUNTY.

(Items from the Albion New Era.)

E. D. Hartman, Esq., former Prosecuting Attorney for this Circuit, who was engaged in the practice of his profession at South Bend for several years, has returned to DeKalb county, and is enjoying a lucrative practice.

The Noble Circuit Court is still in session. Judge Best and the "bar" have rushed off a heap of business, and the docket is exceedingly "thin," as to number; but the sensational cases are yet to be tried. An interesting "breach-of-promise" case is ahead, as well as the shooting affair in York township.

The Albion school will open on the 13th of April, under the management of H. S. Bortner, principal—with a corps of competent assistants,—and continue until June 22d.

The following will explain itself. It shows what can be done in the way of getting at the truth in Kendallville:

A Kendallville dispatch to the Chicago Inter Ocean of Tuesday, states that the temperance work has commenced there. It says:

The Rev. O. P. Downs came up into this part of the State about two weeks ago and commenced lecturing on the evils of intemperance at Auburn, DeKalb county, and it was apparent to everybody that from the way he handled the subject, the temperance element could not long remain dormant. He is the ablest lecturer we ever had here. At Auburn the saloons are all closed but one, and the proprietor of that one has run off.

WHITLEY COUNTY.

The Post goes for Rev. Meredith for preaching against the dramatic entertainment, thusly:

Charity covers a multitude of sins. Let those who are without faults cast the first stone. Men and women are not what they seem, but what they are. Apply it, reader.

The fools ain't all dead yet, even in the synagogues. The same paper says:

To-day, March 18th, Mr John North, familiarly known as "Uncle John," and his wife celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedded life.

The Commercial gives the names of those who signed petitions for permits, but up to later date it don't seem to have accomplished very much for the temperance cause in that place.

Tom. Mays, the good-looking editor of the Auburn Courier, in company with H. E. Altenberg and George Patterson, from Auburn, favored us with a call on Tuesday.

ALLEN COUNTY.

The mysterious death of an old man named Andrew Tiernan, whose body was found in the canal a few days ago with a deep gash upon the head, is creating a good deal of excitement. The Daily Sentinel of last Thursday says:

The preliminary examination of Frank Hagan, Eugene Sovine and Theodore Johnson, the parties charged with committing the murder of Tiernan last Friday night, was begun about half past two this afternoon.

That city has been favored with the sacred oratorio of Belshazzar, under the direction of Mr. Butterfield, of Chicago. So well was it rendered that it required four nights to gratify the public, the houses being crowded.

The temperance movement is becoming animated in the city, and we believe there are a good many saloonists who fear the result. The German element will do all they can to resist it, of course. The Gazette gives an extended account of the mass meetings held in the city last week, and states that the women have organized and mean business. It is proposed to raise a fund of $100,000 to assist in the great cause.

DEFIANCE COUNTY, OHIO.

The Democrat says: Track layers on this road are now laying about one-half mile of track per day. On Monday the track was laid to within a mile of Holgate, a new town thirteen miles east of Defiance. The east bank of the Anglaize river will probably be reached some time next month. The heavy job of tressling through Defiance and the two bridges at at this point will undoubtedly delay matters considerably.

In about two weeks the Baltimore, Pittsburg & Chicago Railway Company will send a construction train to this point over the T. W. & W. Railroad to commence laying track west of Defiance. The object is to reach the Maumee river about seven miles distant to facilitate the construction of the bridge across that river.

Men arriving every day to work on the Baltimore.

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

The remains of Senator Sumner were taken from New York to Boston on Saturday, March 14, in a special train. Ten thousand people were at the depot in Boston. The body was received by a committee appointed by the State and municipal authorities, and escorted to Doric Hall in the State House, where it lay in state. Saturday noon a public meeting was held in Faneuil Hall in honor of the deceased statesman. The Mayor of the city presided. Among the Vice-Presidents were Wendell Phillips, Robert C. Winthrop, Richard H. Dana, B. R. Curtis, Sidney Bartlett, and William Lloyd Garrison. Addresses were made by R. H. Dana, J. B. Smith, A. H. Rice, the Rev. E. E. Hale, ex-Mayor Gaston, Ralph Waldo Emerson, N. P. Banks, and others. Appropriate resolutions were offered and adopted. The funeral took place at 3 o'clock on Monday, the 16th.

It appears, according to the result of an autopsy made of the body of the late Senator Sumner, by Dr. Brown-Sequard and other medical and surgical experts, that his death was not caused, as has been supposed, by the lingering effect of the assault made upon him eighteen years ago by Preston S. Brooks, of South Carolina....Christian Sharpe, the inventor of the famous Sharpe rifle, died recently at Vernon, Conn., aged 63.

The casket containing the remains was placed in a hearse drawn by four white horses, and this was followed by 150 colored men on foot, including Frederick Douglass, Senator Pinchback, of Louisiana, and John F. Cook, the Register of the District of Columbia. The Congressional Committee and the Massachusetts delegation and their families, as mourners, and others, took their places in carriages, and the cortege moved to the Capitol. The crowd abou the Capitol was larger than was ever witnessed before, not excepting during the noted impeachment trial of ex-President Johnson, and it was estimated that 5,000 persons, at least, could not gain admission even to the corridors of the Senate. The catafalque was brought into the Senate Chamber a few minutes before 12, and placed immediately in front of the Vice-President's desk. The body having been placed on the catafalque, the cross sent by Miss Nellie Grant was placed upon the casket. This cross was composed of calla lilies, camelias, white rosebuds and other delicate flowers. Appropriate religious services were performed, a benediction was pronounced by Dr. Sunderland, after which Mr. Carpenter, the presiding officer, rose and said: "Now the Senate of the United States intrusts the remains of Charles Sumner to its Sergeant-at-arms and the committee appointed to convey them to his home, there to commit them, earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust, in the soil of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. 'Peace to his ashes.'" The coffin was then closed, and the flowers having been replaced, it was removed from the chamber, followed by the committees appointed by the Senate and by the House to accompany the remains to Boston, every one standing as the coffin was removed from the chamber. The scene was a most solemn and impressive one.

The committee had spent two days in perfecting the bill, and it had received the approval, he said, of a majority of the members....On motion of Thurman, the record of the Senate was amended so that Stewart's appointment as member of the District of Columbia Investigation Committee shall be that of member simply, and not of Chairman, the Committee having elected Allison Chairman....The currency debate was resumed in the Senate, the ball being opened by Logan, who argued in favor of free banking and an increase in the volume of the currency.

House.—A bill was passed exempting Kansas and Missouri from the operation of the act of May, 1872, which forbids the pre-emption of iron and coal mines....Consideration of the General Appropriation bill was resumed. Willard (Vt.) offered amendments for the reduction of the pay of doorkeepers and messengers in the Capitol, all of which were rejected....Coburn, Chairman of the Military Committee, reported a bill to provide for the gradual reduction of the army, which was made the special order for the first Tuesday in April....In the evening session, the debate on the bill to regulate inter-State railroad commerce was opened by Scudder, who opposed the bill on legal, constitutional, and practical grounds. The debate was continued by Holman and Cotton in support of the bill in its general features.

Wednesday, March 18.—Senate.—The Chair laid before the Senate the memorial of Mrs. D. R. Lawrence, of New York, announcing that the "tidal wave" of temperance would soon reach Washington, and asking that a band of praying women be received at the bar of the Senate, and that the present occupant of the chair, with Senators Chandler and Sprague, be appointed a committee to receive them. [Laughter.] Referred to the Committee on Finance. Windom introduced a bill for the relief of certain settlers on railroad lands....Wright introduced a bill providing for the opening and improving of certain water-routes. ....The finance question was again discussed by the Senate without reaching any conclusion.

House.—The session of the House was devoted exclusively to debate on the bill to regulate the inter-State railroad commerce, on which subject several written speeches were delivered. The evening session was given to the bill to revise and consolidate the statutes. The attendance at both sessions was very small, and the proceedings devoid of any general interest.

Thursday, March 19.—Senate.—A favorable committee report was made on the bill for an immediate appropriation of $90,000 to improve the mouth of the Mississippi river....The bill to prevent the extermination of fur-bearing animals in Alaska was passed; also, the bill to authorize the employment of aliens as engineers and pilots. ....A resolution was adopted calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information regarding the number of soldiers and citizens killed by Indians, and the number of Indians captured or killed during 1873....Ten thousand dollars were appropriated to pay the expenses of the District of Columbia Investigating Committee....The Army Appropriation bill was under consideration in the Senate.

House.—If the House no business of note was transacted. The most of the day was consumed in a quarreling fight over the mileage clause in the appropriation bill. Smith (Pa.) wanted the amount reduced to $20,000. Mellish moved to strike out the item for mileage, denouncing it as the great American swindle. Parker (Mo.) objected to being called a swindler, but the Chair decided Mellish's language not unparliamentary. Niblack moved to reduce the amount to $60,000. Rejected—86 to 89. Holman moved the repeal of the law allowing mileage, but a point of order was made, and the amendment was not received.

The Home Doctor.

Barley water is very beneficial for patients suffering from inflammatory diseases. Place two ounces pearl barley in two quarts boiling water; boil down to one quart, and strain. A little lemon juice and sugar may be added if desirable. It may be drank at pleasure.

A refreshing drink in fevers is thus prepared: Boil an ounce and a half of tamarinds, three ounces of cranberries, and two ounces of stoned raisins, in three pints of water, till the water is reduced to two pints. Strain, and add a bit of lemon peel, which must be removed in an hour, as it imparts a bitter taste if left too long.

Essence of beef is best made of sliced lean beef. Put a sufficient quantity into a stout bottle to fill up its body; cork it loosely, to permit the escape of steam, and place the bottle in a pot of cold water. Attach the neck of the bottle by means of a string, to the handle of the pot, to keep the bottle upright. Boil for an hour and a half or two hours, then pour off the liquor from the meat, and skim it. Season with salt to suit the taste of the patient. Essence of beef thus prepared is very nourishing.

Perspiration of the feet, and the unpleasant odors arising from them, may be successfully treated by bathing them twice or thrice a week in warm water to which has been added a quart of bran to a gallon of water. When woolen stockings are worn by persons whose feet perspire profusely, they should be changed every day, and the feet washed every evening in cold water, and the soles vigorously rubbed with a coarse towel.

Warts may be removed by touching them three times a day with a stick of moistened pencil caustic. To cure catarrh, purchase a nose douche at a drug store, and with it apply, every morning and evening, tepid water in which has been dissolved salt in the porpotion of two tablespoonfuls to a pint of liquid.

An excellent article for offensive breath, when caused by decaying teeth, is prepared by mixing one ounce of chlorinated soda with twelve ounces of water. The mouth should be rinsed with the preparation two or three times a day, but do not swallow it. The most certain remedy is to remove the bad teeth, as they will taint the breath no matter what means are adopted to prevent it.

Inflamed eyelids are cured by bathing them night and morning with a wash composed of twelve grains sulphate of zinc, two drams laudanum, and twelve ounces salt water. Here is another remedy: Prepared calomel, one scruple; spermaceti ointment, half an ounce. Mix well in a mortar, and anoint the eyelids with the preparation each night before retiring, also placing a small quantity in the corners of each eye. In the morning wash with a linen rag dipped in warm water.. While using either of the above remedies a cure will be facilitated by keeping the bowels open with a mild purgative.

Amusing Incident.

A gentleman who is not celebrated for his benevolence, although he is very wealthy, the other evening got into a Fifth avenue omnibus to go up-town. As the stage was full and he near the door he reached forward, and touching a man on the shoulder asked him to pass a one dollar bill up to the driver for his fare, remarking, "I'm sorry to trouble you, but I have no change." The person to whom this request was made smiled, bowed, and, taking a small book from his pocket, wrote something in it, and put the dollar-bill in his pocket. All the passengers smiled audibly, and the gentleman demanded his money with one or two expressions such as "fool," "swindler," etc. The person alluded to smiled and bowed again, but did not give up the dollar. The passengers laughed louder. The gentleman grew furious, and pulled the strap, shouting, "Driver, driver! call a policeman." Suddenly, the man with the note-book, his face glowing with pleasure, handed the gentleman a slip of paper, on which was written, "I am deaf and dumb. I thank you for your generosity." The joke was too much for old stingy. He laughed with the rest, and, telling the driver to go ahead, passed up a second dollar, with his own hand, to the driver to be changed, the deaf and dumb man seeming to be as much amused as the other passengers. —New York Hearth and Home.

Texas.

> "When every other land rejects us,
> That is the land that takes us (Texas)."

The New Orleans Picayune estimates that since 1870 100,000 negroes have gone to Texas, and 300,000 whites. In Alabama the departure of blacks is consolidating a permanent Democratic power, and in Mississippi and Louisiana, where the blacks were more numerous than the whites in 1870, the white vote will soon be the largest. Georgia finds it difficult to spare this labor, although her white laboring population is on the increase. The colored population are among the most restless people in the world, though caring but little for the North, and very rarely coming north of the Mason and Dixon line. In Texas they are tempted by a more virgin soil, a better climate, but most of all, we think, allured by the old story which followed the civil war, of "forty acres and a mule" to everyone who would vote the Republican ticket and pitch into the Democracy. The mule-and-land story having lost its charm in Louisiana, Alabama, and other States, the once "Lone Star" is pointed out as the true El Dorado, where the broad acres and the mules can be found.—New York Express.

The Temperance Crusade—Ancestry of the Praying Women.

The Rev. John Hussey contributes an interesting article to the Independent on the extraordinary movement against intemperance, now in progress in portions of Ohio and Indiana, in which he shows that the pious women who are conducting this singular campaign are descended from praying "stock." We make the following extract:

Southern Ohio was perhaps the last place where one would have supposed that such a movement could begin. The people of the section where this work took form belong less than any other people of our country north of the Ohio river, except those of some parts of Southern Indiana, to the New England type. Between the Siota and Miami river lies the "Virginia Military Reservation," granted by the General Government to the State of Virginia, in place of claims which the latter State relinquished to the Northwestern Territory. This large territory was settled originally by Virginians who had Revolutionary claims. The land was owned in very large tracts, and has been more or less subdivided. The old Virginia families having always been very influential, especially in the counties of Highland, Fayette, and Ross. Early in this century many came to Southern Ohio from other Southern States. The Friends or Quakers came from Virginia and Western North Carolina in such numbers as to exhaust some of their settlements in these States, and purchased of the old Virginians in Ohio smaller bodies of land, forming a line of settlements from Lawrence county through Jackson, Ross, Highland, Clinton, to Warren. The great body of the Quakers are now in the three latter counties. These plain Christians have been an important element in the prayer movement, but were not much concerned in its first origin, as few of them are found either in Hillsborough or Washington, the two places where success was first achieved. Somehow there is a law of nature which "old families" are prone to violate. Family pride is not apt to be an active element in the busy industries of life. Too much leisure invites dissipation, and many of the scions of our excellent old families have gone under before the destroying evil of intemperance. Hardly a prominent family in Hillsborough but has felt the keen shafts of this adversary. In some, all the members have died intemperate, or are in danger of doing so. If it were not improper, I could connect with the names of most of the women who are prominent in carrying on the movement in two of the largest places in which this work has been highly successful, some one dear as life cut down in youth or manhold; with some of whose names the country at large is not unfamiliar; of all professions—physicians, lawyers, and not omitting a shining example of the clerical profession—some in public life, others renowned in war. The religious element is an important one, and has given soul to the whole movement. The churches of all the principal denominations are many of them large, and have for two generations wielded a powerful influence. The three principal religious bodies are Presbyterians, Methodists and Quakers.

The Liquor Business.

The manufacture of spirits is placed under the surveillance of the Internal Revenue Department; the distiller is subjected to numerous stringent regulations with a view to prevent the evasion of the very high taxes. There is doubtless no better subject for taxation than spirits, since they may in general be looked upon as purely articles of luxury. The consumption of intoxicating liquors is increasing day by day. In the United States the sale of whisky during the year ending June 30, 1871, was estimated at 60,000,000 gallons of imported spirits, 2,500,000 gallons imported wines; 10,700,000 gallons ale, beer, and porter; 65,000,000 barrels native brandies, wines, etc., estimated to be worth $31,500,000, a total valuation of $600,000,000. At present the tax on each gallon full-proof alcohol is 70 cents, which has to be paid by the distiller, and for which, as a receipt, a stamp is pasted and nailed on the barrel containing the spirit. The manufacture of spirits is supervised by a United States officer, called Storekeeper, as he has also to store the barrels containing the manufactured alcohol until the Gauger has gauged and properly stamped them. Very often it is found that the officers and the owners of the distilleries are working together, dividing the profits made by swindling the Government out of the tax, either by refilling old stamped barrels or selling without any stamp at all. Though the fine is very high, this nefarious business is still transacted every day, often reaching gigantic proportions, as lately shown in the suit of the United States against the Pekin distillers.—Chicago Tribyne.

A Brief Temperance Lecture.

The Duke of Orleans, the eldest son of King Louis Phillippe, was the inheritor of whatever rights his father could transmit. He was a noble young man—physically noble. His generous qualities had rendered him universally popular. One morning he invited a few companions to breakfast, as he was about to take his departure from Paris to join his regiment. In the convivialties of the hour he drank a little too much wine. He did not become intoxicated—he was not in any respect a dissipated man; his character was lofty and noble—but in that joyous hour he drank just one glass too much. In taking the parting glass he slightly lost his balance of body and mind. Bidding adieu to his companions, he entered the carriage; but for that one extra glass of wine he could have kept his seat. He leaped from the carriage; but for that one glass of wine he would have alighted on his feet. His head struck the pavement. Senseless and bleeding he was taken into a beer-shop close by and died. That extra glass of wine overthrew the Orleans dynasty, confiscated their property of one hundred millions of dollars, and sent the whole family into exile.

The following astonishing piece of philology is traveling through the newspapers: "The word husband" is composed of two Anglo-Saxon words, hus and bonds, meaning house-boor!

Beauties of Rag Carpet.

Some women much prefer to use a bit of rag carpet in place of a regular-made mat at their doors. It is a good idea. If there is anything better calculated to attract a man's attention than a rag carpet at a door, we don't know of it. It causes more hard feeling and is productive of more hard and unforgiving words than any article about the house excepting always the family hammer. Three pieces of rag carpet thus situated will bankrupt an upright man inside of a fortnight, and turn a happy home into an uproaring and outrageous bedlam. Not one man in one hundred can go through a door thus protected without catching his foot in that carpet to the great danger of flinging himself violently to the door and flattening his nose. And it not only twists his legs, but it drags over the sill, and catches the door as he shuts it, and starts his temper afresh. It being too degrading and unmanly to stoop down and remove the obstacle with his hand, he gives it a kick, and is surprised to see how easy it is to miss it. He fetches another and more vicious kick at it, and succeeds in removing about an inch of it. Then he swings the door to, and setting his teeth together, attempts to shut it over the obstacle. The more the obstruction resists him the more desperately he pushes. This is on the generally received and very agreeable theory that inanimate things are human in so far as it is human to be vicious and obstinate. It is the principle which induces a boy to pound a stick of wood which flies up and hits him having convinced himself that the building will not sufficiently give to permit of shutting the door without removing the carpet, the carpet is kicked away. It is never laid away. And it is either kicked the whole length of the hall, or tumbled in a heap just outside the sill where the next person appearing catches both feet into it, and shoots into the room with hair erect, eye-balls protruding, and feet madly and passionately endeavoring to recover their balance.—Danbury News.

Railroad Across the Andes.

One of the grandest works of this age is now being constructed across the Peruvian Andes, connecting the Pacific Ocean with the Amazon river by means of a railroad, and opening the whole interior of Peru to the commerce of the world. Hitherto that rich and immensely productive country, so graphically described in the United States reports of Lieuts. Herndon and Gibbon, has been virtually locked up to foreign trade; the transportation of one ton of freight from the interior of Peru to the seaport, Lima, costing about three times as much as the transportation of the same amount of freight from Lima to Europe. The railroad in question was begun in 1870, and has already cost over $70,000,000. It is estimated that it will be finished in 1876. Over 10,000 laborers, mostly Chinese, are constantly employed on it. The enormous difficulties that have to be overcome in the construction of this road may be estimated from the fact that the Andes rise there to a height of 20,320 feet above the level of the sea. The road itself rises 17,000 feet, and is by far the highest railroad in the world. Even the Mont Cenis Railroad sinks into insignificance when compared with this Peruvian undertaking. The road has also the highest viaduct in the world, it being 580 feet long and 300 feet high in the center. It rests on three pillars, of which the first is 166, the second 183, and the third 253 feet high; is built of iron, and was manufactured in the United States.

A Burst of Eloquence.

A lawyer in Milwaukee was defending a handsome young woman accused of stealing from a large unoccupied building in the night time, and thus he spoke in conclusion:

"Gentlemen of the jury, I am done. When I gaze with enraptured eyes on the matchless beauty of this peerless virgin, on whose resplendent charms suspicion never dared to breathe; when I behold her radiant in the glorious bloom of lustrous loveliness which angelic sweetness might envy but could not eclipse; before which the star on the brow of the night grows pale, and the diamonds of Brazil are dim; and then reflect upon the utter madness and folly of supposing that so much beauty would expose itself to the terrors of an empty building in the cold damp dead of night, when innocence like hers is hiding itself among the snowy pillows of repose; gentlemen of the jury, my feelings are too overpowering for expression, and I throw her into your arms for protection against this foul charge, which the outrageous malice of a disappointed scoundrel has invented to blast the fair name of this lovely maiden, whose smiles shall be the reward of the verdict which I know you will give!"

The jury acquitted her without leaving their seats.

Hypodermic Use of Whisky.

A man was brought into the wards of surgery (Bellevue Hospital), of which Dr. Figeuro is house surgeon, having a crushed foot and ankle, as the result of being traversed by a railroad car wheel. Previous to his admission, the patient had lost a great quantity of blood, and it was feared that he could never be rallied to the amputating point. Among the measures adopted for his restoration were hypodermic injections of whisky, and these proved very efficient, not only for their immediate assistance in obtaining the stimulation of the alcohol, but they seemed to tide the man over a point at which his stomach had become very irritable and rejected whatever was put into it. An ordinary dose administeerd in this manner is from fifteen to thirty drops. This man's pulse was raised sufficient to warrant amputation of the leg, which was done, after applying Esmarch's apparatus for arresting hemorrhage. The apparatus was particularly adapted to this case, for the reason that it was desirabe to retain all the blood possible, for the loss had already been too great. No blood was lost, and but four turns were given to the rubber cord.—New York Record.

How the Farmers are Preparing to Paddle their Own Canoe.

Grange News and Notes from all Points of the Compass.

A SUCCESSFUL CO-OPERATIVE ENTERPRISE.

J. Weaver writes from Durant, Iowa, to the Industrial Age:

During the winter of 1871-2, a number of persons belonging to Granges, in the vicinity of Wilton, Muscatine county, Iowa, opened a co-operative store. How great a success it has been you will realize on noting the following table: The store opened March 4, 1872. The paid-up capital invested in goods on that day was about $700. The sales the first day were $15; second, $22, etc., the whole aggregating $122 for the week. On the 1st of January, 1873, we had sold, for cash, a little over $19,000. The average profit was computed at 4½ per cent., which included freight. On settlement, at the annual meeting of the stockholders, held the first Monday of January, 1873, there was a cash balance on hand of $400, after paying every expense. This amount entered into the stock of the ensuing year. The sales from January 1, 1873, to January 1, 1874, were $35,850.30; expenses, $3,338.77; invoice, $4,807.22; cash on hand, $1,686.35. In the expense account is included 10 per cent. interest on a cash capital of about $3,700. The average profit of this year I am not now prepared to give; but may say that it was much less than the preceding year. It is conceded that the goods were turned over during the year about eight times. Summary of stock January 1, 1874:

Goods on hand	$4,807.22
Cash	1,686.35
Furniture	170.00
Total	$6,663.57

The rent and interest were at the same rate as previous year, and the miscellaneous expense much greater. The manager's and clerk's hire was $1,480. We had no insurance, as rates were too high. We now occupy a brick building, so situated as to render insurance of no great importance. You thus see how great this enterprise, based on true co-operative principles, has become, in the short space of nineteen months, from a small beginning. The prospects for the coming year are still greater.

1st. The cash principle.

2d. The exclusion of mere selfishness, or rings. All the world may trade alike, without discrimination in favor of anyone.

3d. Each one finds all the profit article, except necessary expense.

The interest—10 per cent.—allowed stockholders is generally acknowledged to be too high; but we hope that will be rectified before long.

This is one example of complete co-operative success. Why should it not be imitated all over our country, and extended to other branches of business, such as insurance, savings banks, pork packing, manufacturing, etc. We need one great co-operative store at Chicago, or some other commercial center, where subordinate or country co-operative stores might get their supplies at first hands, as near as possible, and to facilitate exchanges.

WOMEN IN THE GRANGE.

In the 1,818 granges of Iowa it is said that there are no less than 25,000 women, each of whom is intrusted with a vote. The women are thus rapidly preparing for the ballot by instruction in parliamentary practice, debate and general business. There are some 7,000 granges in the country, to which belong nearly 100,000 women.

WISCONSIN.

STRENGTH OF THE ORDER.

H. E. Huxley, Secretary of the State Grange, reports the order in a most flourishing condition. The number of granges has increased from 346 in January to over 400. The Secretary has also on file duplicates of petitions sent on to Washington for approval and record which will raise the entire number in the State to 430. The State Secretary is sending out commissions to lodge-deputies in every county having organized lodges. These deputies are authorized to establish granges in all places where required, and to travel into quarters where they have not been established.

CO-OPERATION.

Outagamie county numbers 7 granges, with a membership of over 500. Arrangements have been made for purchasing implements and farm-machinery for all the lodges during the coming summer, purchases to be made directly of manufacturers, who concede at once a reduction of 25 per cent. from the prices formerly paid local agents. To this favorable reduction on former steals they expect to gain still more in arrangements on freights. Recently these farmers had their first experience in purchasing through the officers of their Council. Many of them were in want of land-plaster. They made out their wants, and sent in to the business agent of the Council, who found that sixty tons were demanded. This at former rates, bought through an agent, would have cost $990, delivered at the station at Appleton. Purchased through the Council, it was delivered at the same place for $672, a saving of $318 on former modes of dealing, in the first trial.

FARMERS PADDLING THEIR OWN CANOES.

A letter from Waukesha, Waukesha county, says: "There are ten granges of the Patrons of Husbandry in this county, eight of which have been instituted within the past month. There are also five town insurance companies, for the mutual insurance of farm property. The farmers appear greatly disposed to paddle their own canoes in this section."

FARMERS' INSURANCE COMPANY.

Less than a year ago the farmers of Oakland formed an insurance company for their mutual protection. They now have a paid-up stock of $70,000, and carry seventy-three policies on buildings in the township. They take risks at one-fourth of 1 per cent.

INDIANA.

MEETING OF NORTHERN INDIANA GRANGERS.

The Masters of a large number of granges in Northern Indiana recently met in Fort Wayne for the purpose of organization and perfecting themselves in the work of the order. During the session the bill presented to the house by Hon. J. P. C. Shanks, for the establishment of a United States Court at Fort Wayne, was discussed and indorsed by them. A general exchange of views on topics involving the future prosperity and good of the order was indulged in, and the delegates dispersed with a firmer faith than ever that the great farmer's movement is bound to succeed.

1,450 GRANGES ORGANIZED.

The Louisville Courier-Journal's New Albany correspondent writes as follows:

"Deputy Frank C. Johnson reports fourteen hundred and fifty granges organized in the State, and not fourteen hundred and fifty grangers, as stated. There is considerable difference between a grange and a granger.

"The candidates for office this fall are going to have a hard time of it between the temperance movement and the grange movement. They will find it no easy matter to occupy an independent position, and if they attempt it, the chances are they will be beaten; and if they take sides they are beaten certain. The fact is, they will be 'damned if they do, and they will be damned if they don't.' We have paid but little attention to the candidates' struggle which is now going on in this county, but, from general observation, we are satisfied that our candidates are having a rough time of it, and don't know in the morning but what they will be wrecked before night on the temperance or grange platform."

POLITICAL OWLS.

The Indiana Granger is responsible for this:

"We very often see owls sitting on some neighboring tree, watching the movements of the farmers' chickens. The politicians are keeping the owls company, by watching farmers' movements."

GRAIN WAREHOUSE.

The grangers of Howard county are preparing to build a grain warehouse at Kokomo, with a capacity of 60,000 bushels.

ILLINOIS.

VIEWS OF FORD COUNTY GRANGERS.

The following preamble and resolution were adopted at a recent meeting of the Ford county Grangers, in session at Eldridgeville:

WHEREAS, In every stage of oppression, our repeated petitions have been answered in silence, or by such law as seem to meet our wants, but are, in fact, only legal snares for courts to disagree upon and corporations to disobey; therefore.

Resolved, That we will use all lawful and peaceful means to free ourselves from the tyranny of monopoly, and will never cease our efforts for reform until honesty and fair-dealing reign instead.

THE ROCK ISLAND COUNTY FARMERS.

The Farmer's Association of Rock Island county held its annual meeting last week. S. M. Smith, Secretary of the State Association, made a lengthy address, full of his accustomed vigor. He denounced the old political parties as corrupt, and called on farmers and workingmen to assert their rights to independent action. He predicted that the great contest between the farmers and the old parties would take place within the next six months, the struggle being to secure control of Congress. He advised the people to nominate no man for Congress who sought the place, but to choose deliberately, and give preference to young and vigorous men.

KANSAS.

GOOD WORDS.

The closing paragraph of the annual report of the Kansas State Agent has the true ring:

"Our order is in its infancy and rapidly spreading, and no one can fathom its possibilities for good in the future. What is most needed at the present time, is to perfect and systematize our business branch. It cannot be denied, in our own State at least, that this feature has been a prominent one in swelling our membership; and we ought to use every means in our power to make co-operation in buying and selling among agriculturists a success; and at the same time remembering always that the achievements of our order, in a social and educational point of view, are not to be computed in dollars and cents. And thus may we be enabled in due time to solve the mystery of why it is 'that the producing classes of our land enjoy so little of that weal of which they, and they only, are the creators;' and in the words of a leading journal, may we not hope, 'the hour is about to strike when labor will assert its rights and demand not only its whole share of what it produces, but that society shall accord to it all the dignity which it attaches to any occupation.'"

SMASHING THE MONOPOLY RINGS.

One link after another is dropping out of the monopoly rings, and when they are completely broken asunder, and competition is fully restored to its legitimate place in trade, we may expect still larger reductions in prices. The Climax Reaper and Mower Company have discontinued their agencies and are selling direct to farmers in any quantity at two-thirds their usual rates. We have just been shown a new and perfect corn planter which will be sold for about half the usual price. So the grange movement is not only benefiting its members but everybody else.—Spirit of Kansas.

THE NEW SENATOR.

The Kansas City Times gives an account of an interview of its correspondent with Senator Harvey. In this interview Mr. Harvey said, "I go to Washington as the equal of Mr. Ingals. I have always considered myself as the farmers' candidate. I am a farmer, and always have been a farmer myself, and am now elected by the farmers." Doesn't this about settle the status of Mr. Harvey, politically?

MINNESOTA.

Senator Donnelly is pressing a bill through the Minnesota Legislature allowing railroads seven per cent. interest on their actual cost in their earnings. The balance to go to the State. The bill passed the Senate. On this point the Senator said:

"This excludes all fictitious investments; all bogus lands; all watered stocks; all stealing capitalized; all dishonest inflations of every kind. It brings us down to the 'bed rock.' The question is, dollar for dollar, what did the road cost? On that let us pay interest. But to pay interest on bonds swollen to cover fraud and peculation were to offer a permanent premium for dishonesty; to annually tax labor to enrich rascality. If shrewd men have stood between the corporations and the capitalists, and, with no resources but superior energy and cunning, have amassed fortunes and mortgaged the roads to cover their earnings, that is no affair of ours. Let them settle it with the men who furnished the money."

DELAWARE.

THE FARMERS PREPARING TO ORGANIZE.

Granges are about to be established in Delaware. The old blue hen and chickens are about waking up. When the granges are introduced in the old State, the whipping post will soon be abolished, and Delaware be counted as enlightened as its neighboring States. A recent number of the Milford News and Advertiser says:

"The best class of farmers down this way seem to be prepared to accept the grange movement; and as soon as it makes its appearance here in an authorized form there is no question but that they will go almost bodily into it. They are strongly inspired with the idea that agriculturists as a class fare worse in the trade and commerce of the world than any other; and that this grows largely out of the want of a properly organized co-operative effort to support and sustain their own interest and welfare. The organization of the Patrons of Husbandry is this thought crystallized into action, and, unless this moving idea is exploded or shown to be erroneous, nothing will retard or suppress the movement."

MARYLAND.

MEETING OF THE STATE GRANGE.

The State Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry was in session in Baltimore recently. The State officers and representatives from 47 out of 82 subordinate granges were present. The Master delivered his address congratulating the order upon its rapid growth since its last meeting, stating that there were now over 2,000 members in the State. He also gave a complete history of the proceedings of the National Grange lately in session in St. Louis. The proceedings were of a harmonious nature throughout the session, which lasted several days.

WEST VIRGINIA.

SENTIMENTS OF THE GRANGERS.

The State Grange of West Virginia, at its late session, adopted the following among other resolutions:

"6. Resolved, That we pledge ourselves that neither party dogmas, political prejudices, nor individual consideration shall turn us from pressing upon our representatives in Congress the great importance of immediate action upon the vital questions of the hour, namely:

"'The payment of the Government debt in bonds by the issue of legal-tender notes in such sums as the country may need.'"

THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

THE MOVEMENT SPREADING.

The Farmers' Movement has taken firm root, and is rapidly spreading in Oregon and California. In the former State 180 granges are reported. Nearly twice as many have been organized in California, and new lodges are being formed every day. In Washington Territory twenty-seven granges are in working order, and the number, the State Secretary states, will be tripled before the summer is over.

COLORADO.

STRENGTH OF THE ORDER.

There are forty-six granges of Patrons of Husbandry in Colorado. They represent a membership of 2,000. New granges are being constantly organized.

ARKANSAS.

THE ORDER FLOURISHING.

Reports from Arkansas represent the order as rapidly growing in that State. Deputy Joseph E. Borden, of Hempstead county, is earnestly engaged in the work of organizing lodges.

NEW YORK.

RECRUITS.

The New York Day-Book, like Mr. Beecher's paper and the Golden Age, is out strongly for the Farmers' Movement.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GRANGERS' RALLY.

Unfurl your banners once again,
Ye men of Labor's Rights unshaken;
Your country calls, nor calls in vain
While patriot fires your souls awaken.
Your country calls you from the field
Which tyrants spurn, but plow and sabre,
Hold sacred for the land which yields
Her Equal Rights for Law and Labor!
Then in one strain, in deep refrain,
From Northern hills to Southern valleys,
Shout not in vain, "For Northern grain
And Granger's rights your Country rallies!"

The People call on every side
To rouse the sluggish heart to action;
They shout, from old Niagara's tide
To Rocky mountains—Death to Faction!
From Carolina's cotton plains,
To where New England's corn is gleaming,
That voice ascends in bugle-strains,
For Labor's Rights to all proclaiming!
With mighty strain, in deep refrain,
From Western hills to Eastern valleys,
Shout not in vain, "For Eastern grain
And Grangers' Rights the People rallies!"

They who despise your honest toil,
And on your sacred rights would trample—
The rights your hands won from the soil
And made a nation's proud example—
Remember! they would spurn you now,
While yet for plunder crouching, pleading,
And now to power would basely bow,
The while your country's wounds are bleeding!
Then, in one strain, in deep refrain,
From Southern fields to Western valleys,
Shout not in vain, "For Western grain
And Grangers' rights the Nation rallies!"

The trumpet peal of Right rings out,
Your country's soil's declared in danger!
Unite your strength, the people shout,
In answer to the fearless Granger.
The patriot cause inscribed on high,
Your eagle-banner's folds displaying,
Awake again the battle cry,
Your country's trumpet call obeying.
Then wake the strain again, again!—
From Western plains to Southern valleys,
That not in vain for Southern grain
And Grangers' rights the Union rallies!

CLEARLY STATED.

The Ford county (Ill.) Journal, in a most excellent article, thus clearly states the case now before the people:

"The farmers ask for no legislation that will not alike benefit the merchant, mechanic, day laborer, and farmer. They ask for just and equitable laws. Laws that will benefit the greatest number; and these they have resolved to have. They ask for honesty and integrity in officials, and these they will have by electing incorruptible men to fill the offices, from the highest to the lowest. They demand that themselves and all other classes shall receive a reasonable reward for their labors, and they do not intend to cease the warfare until they come off victorious."

WHAT THESE GRANGERS ARE DOING.

They are furnishing themselves with circulating libraries, are cultivating sociality at their meetings and festivals, are uniting in deeds of benevolence and charity, are getting up singing schools and cultivating music, are in a hundred ways contributing to the refinement, moral, social, and intellectual elevation of their members. They are debating the leading questions of the day; making themselves familiar with the modes of doing business, and by combinations are advancing their material interests. These are some of the things that the Grangers are doing.

PITTING from small-pox may be prevented during the progress of the disease by gently breaking the pustules and covering them with styptic collodion. Painting the face once or twice a day with glycerine will also prevent pitting. We are not cognizant of any method to remove the pitting marks after the patient has recovered.

A California Episode.

Mr. Dod Grile (Ambrose Bierce) has published a book, from which the following California anecdote is taken:

One day in '49 an honest miner up in Calaveras county bit himself with a small snake of the garter variety, and either as a possible antidote, or with a determination to enjoy the chief remnant of a wasted life, applied a brimming jug of whisky to his lips, and kept it there until, like a repleted leech, it fell off. The man fell off likewise. The next day, while the body lay in state upon a pine slab, and the bereaved partner of the deceased was unbending in a game of seven-up with a friendly Chinaman. The game was interrupted by a familiar noise, which seemed to proceed from the jaws of the corpse:

"I say—Jim!"

Bereaved partner played the king of spades, claimed "high," and then looking over his shoulder at the melancholy remains, replied:

"Well, what is it, Dave? I'm busy."

"I say, Jim," repeated the corpse in the same measured tone.

With a look of intense annoyance, and muttering something about "people that could never keep dead more'n a minute," the bereaved partner arose and stood over the body with his cards in his hand.

"Jim," continued the mighty dead, "how fur's this thing gone?"

"I've paid the Chinaman $2.50 to dig the grave," responded the bereaved.

"Did he strike anything?"

The Chinaman looked up.

"Me strikee pay dirt; me no bury dead 'Melican man in 'em grave; me keep 'm claim."

The corpse sat up erect.

"Jim, get my revolver and chase that pigtail off. Jump his damn sepulchre and tax his camp $5 each for prospecting on the public domain. These Mongolyun hordes has got to be put under. And I say, Jim, if any more serpents come foolin' round here, drive 'em off. 'Taint right to be bitin' a fellow when whisky's $2 a gallon. Dern all foreigners, anyhow."

And the mortal pulled on its boots.

Cotton in the Crescent City.

Mr. Fulton, writing to the Baltimore American, says: "One of the greatest curiosities to the stranger in visiting New Orleans is the cotton-press, or rather the immense masses of cotton deposited at these establishments. The press itself is merely to compress the size of the bales to about one-half the bulk they occupy when they come from the plantations, and one minute is about the time required to pass a bale through and rehoop it, thus enabling a ship to carry twice as much cotton as it could in former times. But what astonishes the stranger most is the extent of these establishments, some of them covering as much as twenty acres of ground, surrounded by broad, deep sheds, which are not only piled up with cotton, but immense piles are everywhere exposed, which are covered with sailcloth when it rains. For about two miles along the river front above New Orleans these press establishments occupy every spot of ground, and many thousands of bales are even piled outside, along the road. Trains of cotton wagons are constantly bringing loads from the steamers to the presses, and other wagons are hauling the compressed bales off to the foreign shipping, which lines the river front for about four miles. It was but the other day that the steamer Robert Lee arrived at New Orleans with 5,800 bales of cotton, and the whole receipts at this season of the year are about 30,000 bales per day. All of this cotton must go to these presses to be inspected and compressed.

Coffee.

There is really more mental force in a cup of coffee than the uninitiated dream. I have always had grounds for respecting the scientist who decided, after years of testing its efficacy, that coffee prevented the waste of muscular tissue. Though I do think that Schiller, with all his philosophy, made a mistake in diluting it with old cognac. A united aroma of Java and Maracaibo is sufficient in itself, to say nothing of the fumes of luscious Mocha. The French manner of distilling coffee is a fine art, understood in its perfection only by a native or a Swiss expert who has served an apprenticeship in Parisian cafes. Those who resort to a boiling process should never use anything but an earthen vessel or porcelain-lined coffee-pot. It should be carefully cleared and kept closely covered to preserve the fragrance, which otherwise goes to waste with the steam. The rank expression which coffee oftentimes indulges comes from the tin in which it is boiled and left standing. If possible, the cups in which it is served should be heated, to prevent stagnation of the delicate effervescence.

Parepa's Last Illness.

Private letters from London give some further particulars of the last illness of Mme. Parepa Rosa. On Christmas Eve she passed a long evening singing the music of Elsa in "Lohengrin." She was taken sick the next day; and though at first after the birth of her dead child she appeared to be doing well, the symptoms soon became so unfavorable that Mr. Rosa, who had rejoined his opera company in the provinces, returned to London. Several days before her death Madame Rosa lost consciousness, and never regained it, calling constantly in her delirium for her child. The physicians express the opinion that even if her life could have been spared she would have remained a mere wreck, and possibly have become blind.

The Lesser Evil.

Dr. Hall advocates some rather startling ideas concerning cold air. He is most earnestly against cold bed-chambers, which he says imperil health and invite fatal diseases. To this—giving a contrast of some fifty degrees between the temperature of the lungs and the air of the room—the writer ascribes frequent and fatal attacks of inflammation of the lungs, and concludes with the assertion (which will astonish some) that it is even safer to sleep in a bad air all night with a temperature over fifty than in a pure air with a temperature under forty. For the bad air may sicken you, but cannot kill you; while the cold air can and does kill very often.

Important Supreme Court Decision.

The noted and long-pending Bartemeyer case, from Iowa, which, it was expected, would overturn the Excise law of many of the States, has been disposed of by the United States Supreme Court by an opinion of which the following is the substance:

"The usual and ordinary legislation of States regulating or prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, raised no question under the Constitution of the United States prior to the Fourteenth Amendment of that instrument. The right to sell such liquor is not one of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, which by amendment States are forbidden to abridge, but if a case were presented in which a person owning liquor or other property at the time the law was passed by a State absolutely prohibiting any sale of it, it would be a very grave question whether such a law would not be inconsistent with the provision of that amendment which forbids a State to deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. While the case before the court attempts to present that question, it fails to do it, because the plea, which is taken as true, does not state in due form or positive allegation the time when the defendant became owner of the liquor sold, and secondly, because the record satisfies us that this is a moot case to obtain the opinion of this court on a grave constitutional question without the existence of facts necessary to raise that question in such case. When the Supreme Court of the State to which the writ of error is directed has not considered the question, this court will not feel at liberty to go out of its usual course to decide."

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion.

Better Than Whisky.

"Bill Arp" writes: Gentlemen, there is one thing about drinking. I almost wish every man was a reformed drunkard. No man who has never drank liquor knows what a luxury cold water is. I have got up in the night, after I had been spreeing around, and gone to the pump burning with thirst, feeling as if the gallows, and the grave and infernal regions were too good for me, and when I took up the bucket in my hands, with my eyebrows trembling like I had the shaking ague, and put the water to my lips, it was the most delicious draught that ever went down my throat.

I have stood there and drank, until I could drink no more, and gone back to bed thanking God for the pure, innocent and cooling beverage, and cursing myself from the inmost, for ever touching the accursed whisky. In my torment of mind and body, I have made vows and promises and broken them within a day. But if you want to know the luxury of cold water, get drunk and keep at it until you are on fire, and then try a bucketful at the pump in the night. You want a gourd full—you'll feel like the bucket ain't big enough, and when you begin to drink an earthquake couldn't stop you. I know men who will swear to the truth of what I say; but you see its a thing they don't mean to talk about; it's too humiliating.

Canton.

The streets of this city are wider than those of most other Chinese cities, and are lined with the most costly goods, such as silks, embroidery, gold and silver work, precious stones, rich cloths, of every description, abundantly testifying both to the enterprise of the merchants and the wealth of a city that can support so great a number of such establishments. These streets and shops are comparatively clean and elegant. The streets are shaded from the sun by a continuous awning extending from roof to roof above, and are lighted at night by huge lanterns, with embroidered silken sides, and chandeliers of glittering glass, so that day or night, they resemble the long halls of an arcade, or the corridors of some vast exhibition rather than public streets. Besides its other ornaments, each shop is adorned with a gilded shrine in the most conspicuous place, where incense is constantly kept burning to the god of wealth.

Epicurean Coffee.

There is such a thing as science even in coffee-making, and the French understand it better, perhaps, than any other people in the world. They can combine different coffees, like the parts of a fine wine, to produce certain rare bouquets, or aromas, for the epicure. Not more than half a pound of coffee should be roasted at a time for domestic use; it should be ground only just before going into the pot; an ounce should be allowed for every three cups; in its mixture with the white of an egg to clear it there should be some warmth before the water is added, and it should never be allowed to reach a boil. Observe these rules, which are based on scientific reasons, and you may make from an inferior coffee-bean a beverage far superior to what generally goes by that name. It will never be black nor bitter, and can be kept indefinitely without staling.

New Safety Lock.

Prokop of Graz has constructed a lock on a new principle, which he claims renders it proof against picking, or copying the key. The peculiarity, as gathered from a condensed description, consists in a keyhole curved upward instead of straight, with a corresponding compound curved key.

HEAT AND LIFE.—The English Journal of Science notes that the stokers of steamers in hot countries, laborers in steel works, iron mills, etc., can work without visible detriment, to health in temperatures of from 100 to 212 deg. To this it may be added that, in some parts of California, Americans can farm in the sun all day, with the thermometer ranging over 110. In fact, it is the humidity of the atmosphere in heated terms that works detriment to health and life. In a permanently dry air there are no sunstrokes or congestions at a high temperature.

THE following is the amount of currency in circulation in Great Britain, Germany, and France: Great Britain, $686,421,540; Germany, $557,773,098; France, $1,200,545,441.

THE INEBRIATE.

Not a sous had he got, not a guinea or note,
And he looked confoundedly flurried
As he bolted away without paying his shot,
And the landlady after him hurried.

We saw him again at dead of night,
When home from the Club returning;
We twigged the Doctor beneath the light
Of the gas-lamp brilliantly burning.

All bare and exposed to the midnight dews,
Reclined in the gutter we found him,
And he looked like a gentleman taking a snooze,
With his Marshall cloak around him.

"The Doctor's as drunk as the d—," we said,
And we managed a shutter to borrow;
We raised him, and sighed at the thought that his head
Would "consumedly ache" on the morrow.

We bore him home, and put him to bed,
And we told his wife and his daughter
To give him next morning, a couple of red
Herrings, with soda-water.

Loudly they talked of his money that's gone,
And his lady began to upbraid him;
But little he recked, so they let him snore on
'Neath the counterpane just as we laid him.

We tucked him in, and had hardly done,
When, beneath the window calling,
We heard the rough voice of a son of a gun
Of a watchman "One o'clock!" bawling.

Slowly and sadly we all walked down
From his room in the uppermost story;
A rushlight we placed on the cold mantelstone,
And we left him alone in his glory!

"You ought to let me pass free, considering the benevolent nature of my profession," said a physician to a toll-gate keeper. "No, no," was the reply; "you send too many dead-heads through here now."

"YOU'RE the leanest man I ever saw," said an Alabama judge to a lank and starved-looking culprit; "what were you brought up on?" "On a charge of vagrancy, I believe, your Honor," was the meek reply.

A TRAVELER stopping over night with a Texan farmer whose estate was miles and miles in extent, said to him, "You must have begun life early to accumulate such an estate as this?" "Yes," replied the farmer, "I began life when I was a mere baby."

A GEORGIA ITEM.—"Bill Bridges, of Dahlonaga county, attempted to knock down a pine tree by riding head-foremost against it with his chestnut race-horse. The pine tree still waves, but Bill's chestnut race-horse sleeps in the valley, beneath the green turf."

A GREEN BAY (Wis.) politician, who wants to stand well with his grangers, sings:

"The hickory berry vine entwines
The brown nuts of the turnup tree;
The cashmere heifer skips and plays
To the tuneful blast of the feathery bee
On tall boughs 'mid the buckwheat buds
We hear the low of the finny plover,
While the bay bull hitched to the rumbling scythe
Husks out the golden clover."

TO A LONG-WINDED ORATOR.

On some far-distant northern shore, we're told,
The winter wind is so intensely cold,
That, when one speaks (it is a strange affair!)
The words, congealing, harden in the air,
And there, undreamt of and unheard, they stay
Till spring, revolving, melts their chains away,
When forth in joyous liberty they burst,
Each to the ear that it was meant for first.
Oh! what a boon would Heaven to us assign,
If thus 'twould manage with that voice of thine
If, when thou speak'st, the words that from thee hie
Would hang concreted midway in the sky!
But, joy ecstatic! bliss beyond compare!
If spring, revolving, would but leave them there —Fun.

Hints to Housewives.

1. The nearest way to your husband's heart—and pocket—is through his understandings. So if you desire a new frock, never forget to have his slippers well warmed on his return from the city.

2. Everybody knows how heat affects the hand. So when you go to church wear your very oldest gloves to the hot evening services, and be careful to keep stiff new ones for the morning devotions when the plate goes round.

3. How to get a new bonnet. Give your hubby nice little tasty dishes every day for dinner, and stick to the cold mutton yourself. When he asks the reason, shake your head, sigh, and say, "I am obliged to economize, my dear." Keep on like this for a week, then, after you have given him his second edition of grog, hint that your "poor old bonnet is getting so shabby."

4. Recollect that connubial bliss is like raspberry jam, it will keep a long time if properly preserved.

Pork and Potatoes.

"Landlord," said a transient guest at a cross-roads tavern, as he drew near the end of his dinner, "won't you give me a little more meat to eat with this potato?" A moment later he said: "There was more pork than I wanted; let me trouble you for a little more potato to eat with this pork." And shortly afterward: "Well, I've got some potato left, and it seems a pity to leave it—just a small piece of pork, if you please." It ran on so for some time. At length the landlord stopped short in front of his guest, and remarked: "Look here, stranger, 'taint no use. I'm willing to do anything in reason to make that pork and potato come out even; but I've made up my mind, the way you eat, it can't be did. You're bound to lap over one or the other every time. Now just make up your mind which you'd rather leave, and leave it and quit. I've got enough pork and dotatoes, but if you keep on you'll bust."

THE Atlantic Monthly says the only swindle about hearing the murmur of the sea in a shell is a humbug. For, if you will hold a beaver hat, or a goblet, or a pickle bottle, or an oyster can to your ear, you will hear the same delicious murmur.

The Grangers are increasing.

An Anti-Fashion Crusade.

The following is an attempt at answering a conundrum propounded in the annexed paragraph, which is now going the rounds of the press. The paragraph readeth thusly:

"Women are slaves, not to men, but to fashion. Dress is their glory; and their deadly foe. They delight in it and are injured by it. Is there no remedy for this crying evil? Must Christian women be forever held by these fetters of oppression? Is reform impossible? Can we not organize relief, have a 'strike,' invent some method of deliverance? As for resisting fashion, not one in a thousand will ever do it. The only possible relief is to regulate it, corner it somewhere and somehow, and subject it to the control of reason, and the laws of health."

"Can we not organize relief," and get up a "corner," &c.? Of course we can "organize relief," and get up a "corner." As the quizzical old farmer suggested to the romantic couple who were struck with wonder by the water falling over Niagara, "What's to hender?"

The women themselves have indicated the way in which relief may be obtained. The right thing to be done is for the men to organize the masculine piety of the land for a crusade against "dress," that "deadly foe" of women, just as the women have organized feminine piety for a crusade against intemperance, that "deadly foe" of man.

"Sister woman" is doing so much towards saving "brother man" that it is but simple justice for "brother man" to do something to save "sister woman."

Let the men imitate the noble example the women have set in thus organising; then direct their organized efforts with discreetness and energy in a crusade against "fashion," and the thing is done. 'Tis as easy as counting beans.

Perhaps a good way to set the ball rolling would be to call a mass-convention of stingy husbands, impecunious fathers, in short, of the philanthropic and "truly good" of all classes, to meet at Fountain Square, or some other suitable place, to take the subject into consideration.

Should their numbers permit, they might organize themselves in bands of tens, of fifties, and of hundreds, to attack this "crying evil" in all its forms. They should traverse the streets and public places, and wherever and whenever they find a women whose caparison is too much fussed and feathered, or who is too heavily weighted with balloon bustles, silks, jewelry, &c., they should at once make an assault with the weapons of exhortation and entreaty.

They should "rastle" with her in prayer, and sing to her the sons of Zion, until she shall sign a pledge that she will once and forever put aside all superfluity in the way of personal adornment.

Detatchments of crusaders should also stationed at stores where dry goods, millinery, patterns, jewelry, &c., are sold, for the purpose of giving free concerts, and laboring with those who make it their business to supply our "Christian women" with the "fetters of oppression."

They will need summon all their fortitude to be able to stick, until by prayer and psalm-singing these wicked merchants shall be made to see the error of their ways, repent and sign a pledge to abandon the work of the devil and to sin no more.

When once enlisted, however, these soldiers of reform will not, of course, be dismayed by any obstacle they may encounter, or the magnitude of the job they have undertaken.

They may find encouragement by remembering that it took but a week for a party of us men to shake down the walls of old Jericho, the only weapon used being a big noise—which the same was produced by a half a dozen plus one of the "truly good" blowing upon an equal number of rams' horns, with a grand vocal accompaniment by the boys.

This method just accords with the modern notion of the proper way of carrying on reform.—Cin. Times.

"A distinguished member of the Kentucky Legislature" is reported in the Louisville Commercial as having candidly "acknowledged the corn." Reappearing, after an absence from his seat of three days, he said "he had been sick." "What's the matter with you?" he was asked. "Well, some folks call it nervous chills; others pronounce it a kind of affection of the heart; but, to be candid, I call it a plain case of old-fashioned drunk."

Soldier Servants.

It has become fashionable, under the semi-monarchy existing at Washington, for the Government officials to use enlisted soldiers for servants. It is a convenient and cheap mode of securing "help." The soldier is paid and taken care of out of the public treasury, but instead of being employed in the legitimate business of taking care of the public property or in defending the homes of the settlers on the Western borders against the murderous attacks of the savages, he is kept in Washington to act in capacity of coachman, waiter, or errand boy of some Federal official. This is not mere assertion. The fact has been known for years, but now it has come to the notice of the country in a manner that it cannot be denied or overlooked.

During the discussion of the Army Bill in Congress the other day, Mr. Wheeler, a Republican member from the St. Lawrence district, New York, said:

"The theory of the Committee on Appropriations is that these men shall go to recruit the frontier regiments. If that will not suffice, then I will tell you where there are plenty of missing ramrods, Go, sir, to the houses of prominent officials in Whashington, and take out from there the enlisted men of the army who are serving as private servants. Put the army uniform on them, and send them to their regiments where they belong."

A Member—"That is what should be done"

Mr. Wheeler—"There is where the missing Ramrods are; and there are plenty of them about this Capitol."

Soon after, Hon. Clarkson N. Potter got the floor, and made the following emphatic declaration:

"I have heard it stated by a distinguished member of the Administration party (I am not at liberty to give his name, but if I am in error, the gentleman in charge of this bill will be able to correct me), there are in the city of Washington alone over one thousand enlisted men hanging around passages and stairways and in domestic service. Let those men also be sent to the frontier.

It is not enough that Federal office-holders have their salaries doubled and their horses kept at the Government stable. They demand soldiers for coachmen and waiters at their private mansions. According to the above statement, a full regiment of soldiers are in Washington, being used for the convenience of Federal officials. The men who make use of our enlisted soldiers should be impeached, disgraced and punished. The taxpayers have not only been cheated, but the army service degraded. Such developments appeal to the pride of the country. How will the people endure the rule of such sham "Republicans?" Albany Argus.

Can a man pass the age of sixty without a woman steps over his line of life to bless or blast? The part which a wife played in the existence of Charles Sumner was a sad one. It might not be dragged to view now but for the woman's own act. Only two or three days ago his divorced wife made application, through her attorneys, for privilege to marry again. The divorce was of Sumner's seeking and by the Massachusetts law she could not take a second husband while the first lived without special permission from the courts. Sumner went to his death cheered by no womanly word; no wifely prayers. His pillow was smoothed by the highest of the land, and to men whom the country honors stood by and groaned in spirit as he passed away. And the woman who had been his wife, whom he put away on account of incompatibility, was at that time wondering how long it would be ere the Court would hear and decide the petition which should give her to the arms of a younger man. Can anybody die without making somebody glad?

An anecdote told on Tom Marshal will bear repetition in the present temperence movement, It is this: After intemperance had brought Tom Marshall quite low, through the influence of friends he reformed, and was appointed State Lecturer for the Sons of Temperance. Some time during his labors in this direction; he met with some of his college chums, and was induced, from consideration of olden times to take a drink. He took several and then started for the hall. He wrapped at the door, and the Irish janitor slid open the wicket, when Tom put his face close down and gave the pass word. The janitor drew back without opening the door. Tom a little impatient exclaimed, "why don't you open the door—isn't the sign right?" The janitor replied "yes bejabers, the sign is right, but the smell isn't."

How He Addresses You.

You must know that in the South the African is wont to designate strangers to whom he is indifferent by the euphonious title of "boss." It is, perhaps, a kind of compromise with his inclination to cling to the old word "mas," and, at the same time, embodies as much respect as he cares to bestow on the "casual," whom he is called to serve. When he is familiar with your face, he will call you "captain," if you are young; "major," if you middle-aged, and "general" or "judge," if you are advanced in years; and has been known to heap these titles upon strangers under the genial influence of the respect provoking twenty-five cents. But at one o'clock in the morning, in hurrying you from one sleeping car to another, it would take the potent influence of a brand-new dollar bill to wring from him any salutation save the accustomed "boss."—A Ramble in Virginia; Edward King, Scribners for April.

Don't Quarrel.

One of the most easy, the most common, and the most perfectly foolish things in the world, is to quarrel, no matter with whom, man, woman or child; or upon any pretence, provocation or whatsoever. There is no kind of necessity in it, no manner of use in it, and no species or degree of benefit to be gained by it. And yet, strange as the fact may be, theologians quarrel, and politicians, lawyers, doctors and princes quarrels, the church quarrels, and the State quarrels; nations and tribes, and corporations, men, women and children, dogs and cats, birds and beasts, quarrel about all manner of things, and on all occasions. If there is anything in the world that will make a man feel bad, except pinching his fingers in the door, it is unquestionably a quarrel. No men ever fails to think less of himself than he did before one; it degrades him in his own eyes, and in the eyes of others, and what is worse, blunts his sensibility to disgrace on the one hand, and increases the power of passionate irritability on the other. The reason people quarrel about religion, is, because they really have so little of it, and the harder they quarrel, the more abundantly do they prove it.

The following is a specimen of printer's technical terms; it does not mean, however, as much as it would seem to the unitiated:

Jack, put General Washington on the galley and then finish the murder of the young girl you commenced yesterday—Set up the ruins of Herculaneum and distribute the small pox; you needn't finish that runaway match have the high water in the paper this week. Put a new head to General Grant, and Lock up Jeff. Davis—slide the old dead matter into hell and let that pi alone until after dinner. Put the fair ladies to press, and then go to the devil and put him to work on Deacon Fogy's article on "Eternal Punishment."

Business Law.

The following compilation of business law is worth a careful preservation, as it contains the essence of a large amount of legal verbiage:

It is not legally necessary to say on a note "for value received."

Contracts made on Sunday cannot be enforced.

A note by a minor is void.

A contract made by a minor is also void.

A contract made with a lunatic is void.

A note obtained by fraud, or from a person in a state of intoxication, cannot be collected.

If a note is lost or stolen it does not release the maker; he must pay it, if the consideration for which it was given and the amount can be proven.

An indorser of a note is exempt from liabilities if not served with a notice of dishonor within twenty-four hours of its non-payment.

Notes bear interest only when it is so stated.

Principals are responsible for the acts of their agents.

Each individual in a partnership is responsible for the whole amount of debts of the firm.

Ignorance of the laws excuses no person.

It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

The law compels no one to do impossibilities.

An agreement without consideration is void.

Signatures made with a lead pencil are good in law.

A receipt for money is not always conclusive.

THE RUM CRUSADE.

So this women's agitation
Is a bone of aggravation
To the trafficker in Rum!
And there's every indication
That the present situation
Is the very distant hum
Of the mighty tribulation
In the larger yet to come;

Go, in imagination,
To the "local habitation"
Of the trafficker in Rum!
See, the ladies of creation,
In a praying deputation,
To the premises they come!
'Tis a painful visitation
Though, undoubtedly, to some.

Yet, there is no hesitation
In the room of defamation
Of the trafficker in Rum!
But a word of explanation,
And a brief of interrogation,
Ere the praying is begun—
To the utter consternation
Of the trafficker in Rum!

All in vain, denunciation!
All in vain, [illegible]
From the trafficker in Rum!
For this women's deputation,
In the work of reformation,
I believe are deaf and dumb
To all the profanation
And the base insinuation
From the trafficker in Rum!

"Hold! I pray, a brief cessation
For a reconciliation,"
Says the trafficker in Rum!
"Not," says the deputation,
With a firm determination,
"Till the enemy succumb,
Shall we quit your habitation,
Mister trafficker in Rum!

Now, it needs no divination
To discern the situation
Of the trafficker in Rum!
For, did woman's combination
Ever fail of consummation?
Nay, all history is mum!
Then it bodes annihilation
To the trafficker in Rum!

So, this woman's agitation
Is a bone of aggravation;
Yet, I say as I begun,
That there's every indication
That the present lamentation

BE GOOD TO YOURSELF.

"Good by!" the driver said,
And the coach went off in a whirl!
And the coachman bowed his handsome head—
"Be good to yourself!—my girl!"

And many a fond good-bye have I heard,
From many an aching heart;
And many a friendly farewell word,
When strangers come to part.

And I've heard a thousand merry quips,
And many a senseless joke;
And many a fervent prayer from lips
That, all a-tremble, spoke;

And many a bit of good advice,
And many a proverbial phrase;
And many a wish—of little price—
For health and happy days;

But musing how the human soul,
What e'er the fates may will,
Still measures by its self-control,
Its great good or ill.

Of benedictions, I protest,
'Mid many a shining pearl,
I like the merry coachman's best—
"Be good to yourself—my girl!"

MY PRAYER.

I'm not a cock-sparrow with a nest in a waterspout, and my half-dozen young ones tucked up warm in amongst hay, and wool, and hair, with a new suit o' clothes growing out o' their skins—best o' quality, best o' fit, and certain to come again regularly every year at moulting time. Victuals, too, in plenty waiting to be fetched from hundreds of doors in the shape of crumbs.

No: I'm not a cock-sparrow; but, 'pon my word, I've been ready sometimes to envy the birds hopping about in the gutters when I've been down, and stood in some quiet corner off the noisy street, listening to their chirping and twittering. They've seemed so different to me, and to have such an easy time of it. No rent to pay; no need to trouble themselves about anything; only got to take a peck here and a peck there, and then find a corner where the wind don't blow, tuck your head under your warm wing, and then go to sleep.

You see things had gone hard with me for a long time. Some people, who are given to talking a great deal and thinking a very little, say that a man has only to be industrious to get on. If ever there was a mistake, it's this, and for the simple reason that for every bit of work that wants doing there are half-a-dozen men waiting to do it, although it's only enough for one. I'd tried as hard as any man could try, but it all seemed thrown away, that trying of mine, and it used to be quite a matter of course for me to go home and find the wife looking pale, and trying very hard to make believe that there was nothing the matter, when all the time there had been some upset while I'd been away.

Now it was the landlord who had been to say that we must turn out. Another day one of the little ones—Dick that was, little curly-haired chap—had run his head against the saucepan of water his mother was taking off the fire, and was scalded horribly. Only a week had gone by, and I went home to find Tilly down with measles, and for the next month I'd only got to go home, and find first one and then another down, till we had a regular sick house, and all the time me out of work.

They say it never rains but it pours, and so I found it. We'd hardly got the last one through the sickness, before poor Polly slipped on the stairs, fell, and that night I came home light-hearted and happy, as I hadn't been for months, to find my poor girl lying down and looking very white and drawn of face.

"Why, Polly," I says, "what is it now?" and I ran to the bedside, and got hold of her hand as it lay on the counterpane.

"Nothing much, Dick, only I feel a bit faint. I slipped on the stairs—better soon."

She said no more, for all her time was taken up with trying to keep her poor face from working, and contriving to hide from me the agony she was in.

It did not need that though, for as I told you I took hold of her hand, when a horrible sickly sensation came over me, the room swam round, and the great drops of perspiration stood on my forehead, because of the pain I knew I must be giving her, as the arm I lifted came up in a strange, awkward way, making me in my horror let it fall directly back on to the bed.

Poor Polly! and she trying to hide all her suffering from me, for her arm was broken.

"It might have been worse," she said, smiling, after I had got a doctor to come and set it. "It might have been worse, Dick," she said. "Suppose it had happened and you without work!"

For I had been telling her of my luck in getting taken on a job of road-making, but seeing how weak and ill she was, and in what trouble with pain, I hadn't the heart to tell her where.

I was a bit out of heart myself about where it was, and if she had been well, perhaps—I'm not sure—I might have told her all about it; but as it was, of course it would have been like poisoning her peace of mind, for my job was on the permanent way of one of the London lines, and I fully expected that a whole lot of my work would be in tunnels with the trains roaring by night and day.

I went on the very next morning, and it was just as I expected. Our first job was in a tunnel half a mile long, and about in the middle, where the way was a little sunk from the level.

Our party, which consisted of six, had picks, shovels, and great levers, and we had, besides, four of these naphtha lamps—portable gas some people call them—same as you've seen used at fairs or stalls in the busy streets; and in this fashion we walked [illegible] of the tunnel.

There was one thing I couldn't help noticing about the men of our gang, and that was the peculiar dull, heavy way with which they moved arm or leg, while their heads seemed to be never at rest. They'd good call for it though, as I soon learned, every man working at railway jobs having to divide his time in two, half being for the job on hand, half being taken up in looking out for danger.

We hadn't gone fifty yards into the tunnel, which got blacker and closer, and more wet and reeking with damp, at every step, before I began to hear a dull, heavy roar. We were walking on the right-hand side between the metals, so as to meet any train upon the line, and my first movement was to step on to the other line—"four-foot" we call it—so as to be out of the way till the train had come by.

"Here, hold hard!" shouted the leader of our gang, and he laid a hand on my shoulder and dragged me back; for I hadn't seen that there was another train coming into the tunnel, and that it was dashing up swiftly, giving us just time to creep back in the holes left in the tunnel wall, like doorways, here and there, before it went by with a rush.

I couldn't help it—perhaps it was through it's all being so new to me—anyhow, I came over all of a tremble, and felt that scared, I could hardly hold the pick I had brought with me.

What would Polly feel if she knew I was here? I thought, and I felt quite pleased that I had not told her what it was I had to do.

The next minute we were making on further into the tunnel, but we had not gone far before there was the loud hollow roar coming again through the darkness; then, like a couple of faint stars, we could see the engine-lights; the word was given, and we got into the man-holes once more. Then the faint stars grew and grew till they flashed and glimmered on the wet brick walls—grew and grew till they seemed coming to burn us up—and then there was a roar and a flash, and the whole train was by, and we were all walking on.

It was very slow work, for there was a train about every three minutes, and we had to get into a safe place pretty well half a minute before it passed. Long enough, you'll say; but it was the custom with the men to get out of the way in good time, to be on the safe side; so that, counting both ways, I think seven trains passed us before we got to the place where we were to begin.

To a new hand, it was a dismal, cellar-like place; the air smelt burnt and foul, and as if the engines had used it up half-a-dozen times over, leaving only bad steam in its stead. Our lamps were hung up on iron rods we brought with us, and stuck in the six-foot way between the two lines, and there we stood ready to begin.

It puzzled me to think how we should ever get the job done, for it seemed as if we should be able to give about half-a-dozen strokes with a pick and then leave off; and ours was likely to be a longish bit of work, for the line had settled, so that what we had to do was to clear away the ballast, then with the long levers bodily hoist up a length of rail, and the wood sleepers it rested on, and shovel the gravel underneath.

Well, it was like this for hour after hour; just a few strokes of shovel or pick, and then the shriek of an engine and its two bright eyes glowing in the distance, and seeming for all the world to me there in the darkness like the horrors of a fever or nightmare, or something of that kind. I couldn't get myself to think and feel that it was real, I kept expecting to wake up in bed to attend on Polly, or on one of the children that was sick. I couldn't, of course, make out what that hollow roar or those two bright flaming eyes had to do with it, but there they were, seeming to fascinate me; as they came nearer and nearer the noise grew louder and louder, and then the train dashed by, seeming to take my breath with it, leaving me crouching close to the slimy wall, as if longing to force myself into it, till the ganger's voice roused me into knowing where I was with his husky voice and his "Get on, my lads."

How I got through that day I never seemed to know; but though I breathed freely when outside the tunnel, and took all the reckless jokes of my mates in good part, there was a regular load at my heart, and I could only think of going in next day with a sort of shudder, for I'd got it into my head that one of those trains would be the death of me, and the shriek of the engine, and the hollow roar of those coming and of those going away, rang in my ears till I got to my own door.

I found Polly very bad, though she wouldn't own to it. Her face was burning, and her eyes looked bright and unnatural, but she would have it that she was going on all right, and, in spite of the pain I was sure she was in, kept on talking cheerful till the children had gone to bed, and then, poor girl, she broke down, and lay crying for her helplessness, with her poor feverish head on my arm, and me doing what little I could to comfort her, which wasn't much. After a time she began to doze off, and I hadn't the heart to move her; but after about an hour she roused up a little, and I thought she was going to ask me for something; but she rambled off into all sorts of things, going back to our country days, and frightening me, for she began to talk of green leaves and grass and flowers.

That was a weary night: I had come home and almost ill, but there was no room for two of us to be ill then, so I nursed her as well as I could, and towards morning she dozed off into a quiet sleep, leaving me to think of what I had better do.

I was obliged to go to work, so the only arrangement I could make, was to invite a neighbor to step in and attend to her, and six o'clock saw me with the ganger and his lot on the way once more to the tunnel.

Thinking of what I had left at home, I determined to fight down the feeling of fear I had on the day before, telling myself that I was a coward, and that the job was done by other men, so why should I be afraid. It was all no use though, for, do what I would, every train that came by gave me a regular shock.

You see, the sitting up all night, after being fagged the day before, made me the more unfit than I should have been; and what with wondering whether the doctor would remember to call, and our neighbor to go in, and the children to do all I had told them, I often got into such a muddled state that it was like being wakened out of sleep when the ganger called to us to stand aside.

It was the custom there to work very slowly and easily, or else I am sure they would have had something to say about the sleepy way in which I handled my shovel; and over and over again a train was close on me before I moved.

I should think that it was getting on for twelve o'clock that, as I was shovelling away there, everything seemed to pass away from me, and I was back watching by Polly's bedside. My arms were busy enough handling the tool, but my mind was gone, and if ever a man went fast asleep standing up, I did then. Fast asleep? Yes, and dreamed too; for I seemed to be telling the children not to make so much noise, for they were drawing something about in the next room. The lights were burning, and the place was very hot and stuffy, owing to the kettle having boiled over, and poor Polly's eyes seemed to gleam with fever in the most unnatural way.

They frightened me at last, those eyes did, coming nearer and nearer to me as they did till they seemed to burn me, and I wanted to get away from them; only I told myself it wouldn't be kind if I did when she was so ill, so I stood and looked full at them for what seemed a terrible long while, till I knew that I could bear it no longer, and then, with a start, I woke to find that I was staring right at a coming train with the two glaring, flashing lights, and the thundering, hollow roar.

Of course it only took a few moments, but it was like an age to me. And there's all that cellary-looking, slimy-walled place, and the naphtha lamps, and the ruddy faces of my mates, and me fascinated and forced, like to stare at that coming engine, burning, snorting, and droping hot coals—that scene is all burned into my memory so deep, that I can never forget it as long as I live.

The ganger shouted, my mates yelled out to me but I couldn't move; I could only stand staring at the horrible monster, which I knew must kill me the next moment, and then it came upon me just as I drooped on the ballast and lay half in a faint. There was a flash of light, the whizzing of wheels, the hollow echoing roar, and I knew that as I lay between the rails the whole train was passing over me.

I've seen long trains, and I've heard of long trains, but that one, though perhaps only the usual length, seemed to take an hour to pass over me, and me thinking all the time of the coupling-irons that must come and dash my brains out. Then I thought I was already killed, and that there was no bodily pain for those who were slain, only the pain of thinking; and then I was looking at the tail-lights of the engine flaming naptha lamps.

They picked me up, my mates did, and they were going to carry me out, when I shook them off and told them I was all right making them quite savage-like that I should be unhurt when they had all made up their minds that I was killed. They all owned, though, that it was the narrowest escape they ever see, and the ganger took care to give me better notice the rest of the day. Not that I fell into such a state again, for the shock of what I had suffered kept me wakeful to a degree.

That affair seemed to have the effect of stringing me up tight, for though I have worked for days together—ay, and nights too—in tunnels, I never seemed to be afraid. I never told Polly though, for, you see, what would be the good? It would only have made her nervous and kept her back from getting well, which took her long enough as it was. However, I won't grumble, for, as she mended, things succeeded with us, and now our home's as comfortable as a man can get for six-and-sixpence a week. Tunnel work ain't pleasant, but I've got about used to it; not so used though but that, as I said before, I shall never forget that affair—such a narrow escape as it was—and when I do think of it, and there's no one by, I tell you what I do: honestly, and with all my heart, I takes off my cap and closes my eyes, so as to be all shut in like to myself, and then I say a prayer, a very short one, but it tells all I want, and you know what's said about much speaking. My prayer's a short one, but it gives all that's felt by a man whose life was spared that he might go on trying to do his duty toward his sick wife and children; its only just this: "Thank God. Amen.—Wood's Household Magazine.

Marvels of the Insect World.

The Spectator, in its notice of M. Pouchet's work, "The Universe," says: "Man generally flatters himself that his anatomy is about the highest effort of Divine skill; yet that of the insect is far more complicated. No portion of our organism can compare with the proboscis of the common fly. Man can boast 370 muscles. Lyonet, who spent his whole life in watching a single species of caterpillar, discovered in it 4,000. The common fly has 8,000 eyes, and certain butterflies 25,000. M. Pouchet treats it as an established fact that so fine are the sensory organs of ants, that they converse by means of their antennæ. Consequently, the strength and activity of insects far surpass ours in proportion. In the whole field of natural science there is nothing more astounding than the number of times a fly can clap its wings in a second. As a fly passes through space at the rate of six feet in a second, it must in that point of time vibrate its wings 500 or 600 times. But in rapid flight we are required to believe 3,000 is a moderate estimate. The mind is stupefied if it attempts to realize these results.

Exiled.

Polish convicts in Siberia sustain an excellent reputation, with very few exceptions. In general the exiled Poles are settlers, and, as such, instead of being condemned to hard labor, they are free to do as they like, so long as they remain in the locality to which they are assigned. There are very few of them who do not become useful, industrious members of society. Almost every one learns some trade, and seeks to become skilful in it. "Polish work" in Siberia means superior workmanship. Recently a proposition has been made that those among them whose conduct has been satisfactory should be allowed to go back to their native country, provided they can return at their own expense, and find the means of subsistance at home, and the head of the administration of their native district has no objection to their return.

A Right Cat in the Wrong Place.

Last night a cat belonging to the American House, and afflicted with temporary insanity, entered Breese's "Occidental" saloon, and ran along the marble counter back of the bar, pursued by another cat, also afflicted with temporary insanity. When the first cat arrived opposite the large mirror, she glanced in and saw another cat confronting her. Then the music began. Such a growling and squabbling! She lashed her tail fiercely, and at every switch down went several of the delicate and costly glasses which ornament the rear of the bar. Finally the cat thought her opponent was about to make a spring and concluded to get the start. So away she went at the mirror with a fierce bound, and away went cut-glass decanters, Sevres china ornaments, Bohemian glass vases, and other bijouterie, etc., to the value of $50. Meanwhile the other cat, which had been pursuing, stopped in blank astonishment, and seemed to wonder what under the sun could possess the other cat to take on so. In the meantime, George Tafle ran up to the French opera and borrowed Louchard's big hat and knotted stick, together with a pink umbrella, and returning made such a violent assault upon the cat that she retreated and gave up the fight with her imaginary opponent.—*Troy (N. Dear Sir—I have not words to express my gratitude to you for your advice and assistance in my case. There is not one who has used your medicines since they have been brought here but that can say with me they have been greatly benefited. WISHART'S
PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL
Nature's Great Remedy
FOR ALL
THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES!!

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medicinal properties are retained. Tar even in its crude state has been recommended by eminent physicians of every school. It is confidently offered to the afflicted for the following simple reasons:

1. It cures,—not by abruptly stopping the cough—but by dissolving the phlegm and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter causing the irritation. In cases of seated consumption it both prolongs and renders less burdensome the life of the afflicted sufferer.

2. Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain, and subduing inflammation.

3. It purifies and enriches the blood. Positively curing all humors, from the common pimple or eruption to the severest cases of Scrofula. Thousands of affidavits could be produced from those who have felt the beneficial effects of Pine Tree Tar Cordial in the various diseases arising from impurities of the blood.

4. It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

All who have known or tried Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's remedies require no references from us, but the names of thousands cured by them can be given to any one who doubts our statement. Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Great American Dyspepsia Pills and Worm Sugar Drops have never been equalled. For sale by all Druggists and Storekeepers, and at Anecdote of Judge Whitman.

In the other years, when Maine was a district of Massachusetts, Ezekiel Whitman was among those chosen to represent the district in the Massachusetts Legislature. He was an eccentric man, and one of the best lawyers of his time. In those days Whitman owned a farm, and did much work upon his land; and it so happened that when the time came for him to set out for Boston his best clothes were a suit of homespun. His wife objected to his going in that garb, but he did not care. "I will get a nice, fashionable suit made as soon as I reach Boston," he said.

Reaching his destination, Whitman sought rest at Doolittle's City Tavern. Let it be understood that he was a graduate of Harvard, and that at this tavern he was at home.

As he entered the parlor of the house he found several ladies and two or three gentlemen there assembled, and he heard a remark from one of the former:

"Ah—here comes a countryman of the real Homespun genus. There's fun."

Whitman stared at the company, and then sat down.

"Say, my friend, you are from the country?" remarked one of the gentlemen.

"Ya-as," answered Ezekiel, with a ludicrous twist of face.

The ladies tittered.

"And what do you think of our city?"

"It's a pooty thickly-settled place, anyhow. It's got a swampin' sight o' housen in it."

"And a good many people, too?"

"Ya-as, I should reckon so."

"Many people where you came from?"

"Wal—some."

"Plenty of ladies, I suppose?"

"Ya-as—a fair sprinklin'."

"And I don't doubt that you are quite a beau among them?"

"Ya-as, I beaus 'em some—tew meetin' and singin' schewl."

"Perhaps the gentleman from the country will take a glass of wine?"

"Thank 'e. Don't keer if I do."

The wine was brought from the sideboard.

"You must drink a toast."

"O, git eout! I eats toast—never heerd of sich a thing as drinkin' it. But I ken give ye a sentiment."

The ladies clapped their hands; but what was their surprise when the stranger, rising, spoke calmly and clearly, and in tones ornate and dignified, as follows:

"Ladies and gentlemen, permit me to wish you health and happiness, with every other blessing earth can afford; and may you grow better and wiser with advancing years, bearing ever in mind that outward appearances are often deceitful. You mistook me, from my dress, to be a country booby, while I, from the same superficial cause, thought you to be gentlemen. The mistake has been mutual."

He had just spoken when Caleb Strong, the Governor of the State, entered and inquired for Mr. Whitman.

"Ah—here I am Governor. Glad to see you." Then turning to the dumbfounded company—

"I wish you a very good evening."

And he left them feeling about as small and cheap as it is possible for full-grown people to feel.

The Extent to which Death Supports Life.

In 1870 there were in the United States 1,996 professional undertakers, of whom twenty were women. The deaths in that time were 260,673, so that to the average undertaker there fell 131 cases. Besides the undertakers, there were 2,365 coffin-makers, who, of course, depend upon the undertakers for sales. These classes together make 4,361 persons who lived by the deaths of 260,763 persons. Doctors and dress-makers aside, therefore, under our present methods, about sixty deaths avail to keep one person alive for a year, or one dead body is a guaranty of six days' sustenance to one person, or one days' support for six persons. Or, to take another view of the case, if each of these bodies were allowed a full-sized grave, the whole would occupy about 202 acres, and each of these acres would support abouty twenty-two persons for a year, which is a better yield than that of the best wheat field. Now, it is very hard to see how death can be more liberally utilized than it is under the present system. As was said, by every one that dies six live, and that, too, exclusive of shroud-makers, trimmers, milliners, dress-makers, livery-men, and others who make their appearance at or send their wares to the house of mourning. If the cremators should establish their methods, several of these classes would be without vocation—save as they cried out against the change. The undertaker would resolve himself into a monopoly and burying would be done by the gross at a convenient season, the coffin would be abolished and 2,365 persons at once thrown out of employment, while under the new regime people would lose satisfaction that the present contemplation of post mortem utility might afford. That in our national poetry we should have to substitute the "hot, hot urn" for the "cold, cold grave," is only one instance of the subversion of ideas that would follow. —Hartford Courant.

Is Chicago Ruled by a Drunken Mob?

If the Journal, of that city, tells the truth, yes. In a recent issue it says:

"The decent citizens of Chicago, who may be inclined to feel indignant that our Common Council chose to recognize the will of a low, coarse, boorish and drunken rabble to the prayers and petitions of 16,000 pure-minded women, as offered at the Council Chamber on last evening, should not be too severe on that worse than worthless body of men. It should be borne in mind that the mob that howled and screeched around the City Hall and through the streets, on last evening, is ruling Chicago, and that it directly elected our present Common Council, and owns a majority of the men in it, and that these men dare not do anything else than minister to the pleasure of that mob, on pain of losing their little offices at the very next turn of the political wheel. Such a calamity, to most of these men, would be equivalent to social extinction, as they are hardly fit for anything else than to be Chicago Aldermen."

Cromwell.

Oliver Cromwell, the stern soldier and religious enthusiast, was still the most tender and devoted father and husband. While England was ringing with his successes at Dunkirk, news was brought him of his best loved daughter's illness.

His kindom and power were all forgotten, while he watched day and night by her bedside. Young, beautiful, beloved by all, the Lady Elisabeth died, and her father, worn out by sorrow and disease, laid his head upon his own death-bed.

Forgetting his own sufferings and the change so soon awaiting him, he spent much time in prayer for the church.

Soon came the night which ushered in the 3d of September, which he had always termed his "fortunate day," the anniversary of two of his most important victories. It came amid wind and storm and tempest. Houses were unroofed, trees half a century old were uprooted, and the shores were strewn with wrecks. But about the bed of the dying soldier all was peaceful and serene. You heard from him no shouts to his battalions, no urging of his soldier's on to victory, but instead, such exclamations as, "God is good," "He will not leave me." And so his "fortunate day" continued to be fortunate to him, and as its sun set, he finished victoriously the last great battle, in the sixtieth year of his age, 1658.

His body was embalmed, and amid all possible pomp and magnificence he was buried in Westminster Abbey, where he lay in peace, till one of the basest of England's kings tore him from his resting-place. Cromwell's dead body was hung upon a gibbet and afterwards beheaded. His head, thrust upon a pike, was placed upon Westminster Hall, and there for twenty years exposed to the peltings of the pitiless storms. Finally, by some violence, the pike was broken and the head thrown down. It was picked up by a common soldier, and, strange to say, is now in the possession of a daughter of Hon. Mr. Wilkinson, ex-member of Parliament for Buckingham. It is said that the features are quite perfect, and even the large wart over one of the eyes, a distinctive mark of his face, is still visible. The pike also may be seen, the upper part of iron nearly rusted off, and the lower wooden part in splinters. As our authority says, it is a curious keepsake for a lady, but when raised from its numerous costly envelopes, and held in one's hand what a world of thought it suggests!

No Bureau for Blunders.

A first-rate story is told of a very prominent man, who lived in Detroit forty years ago, and who at that time owned more steamboats than any other man in the West. Like many of the pioneers who acquired great riches, he was very ignorant in all that books taught, but his learning was more like wisdom. He had, at the time of our story, just completed a splendid new warehouse at Buffalo, and wanting a suitable clerk to take charge of it he advertised for one in the papers. The next morning early a candidate for the position presented himself, a rather too flashy a young man in appearance, but the following conversation occurred:

"Young man, when you make a mistake in any of your books, how do you correct it?"

The young man explained, in a profuse manner, how he should make it all right.

"A good way, no doubt, to do it," replied the old man, "but I shan't want you."

Very soon another aspirant put in an appearance. A similar question was asked him, and in a long and eloquent manner he pointed out the remedy in all such cases.

All the reply was, "Young man, I shan't want you."

Some three or four others dropped in during the day, and to each one the same question was put, and they all had some smart way of covering up errors in their books.

The old gentleman was entirely ignorant himself of the art of book-keeping, but he had wisdom in all things, which is often more than a match for learning.

Just at the close of the day a plainly-dressed man, with a bright eye and a brisk step, called for the situation.

"Take a seat, sir," said the old gentleman. "I want to ask you just one question. When you make a false entry on your books, how do you go to work to correct it?"

Turning upon his questioner a cold, sharp look, the young man replied:

"I don't make those kind of mistakes, sir!"

"Ah, my dear sir, you are just the man I have been looking for all day," and, in a few moments after, the man who corrected his blunders by not making them, was installed in the office.

The Wood-Sawyer's Pretty Daughter.

A very charming daughter of one of the "solid men of Boston," being at a ball, a few evenings since, was solicited by a combination of mustache, starch and broadcloth for the honor of her hand in a dance, to which solicitation she returned an affirmative answer. In a subsequent conversation, the aforesaid combination inquired her father's business. "He is a wood-sawyer," she replied. The fellow sloped, feeling that he had let himself down a foot or two by the association. The lady's father was a wealthy dealer in mahogany, which occasionally has to be sawed.

An Organ Leading 3,000 Singers!

The following letter, from the Most Eminent Organist in the U. S., refers to an Organ now used in the Rev. Dr. Talmage's church. The Organ formerly used, made by another house, had proved insufficient.

DEAR SIR: I owe you personally my best thanks for sending to us (the Brooklyn Tabernacle Congregation) one of the Smith American Reed Organs in the Academy of Music. It is perfectly wonderful that so small an instrument in size should have sufficient power to lead a Congregation of so many thousand people. The Trustees, as well as myself, are much pleased with it. The quality of Tone is also all that can be desired. It speaks for itself; and all I have met with, who attend the services, speak of it as most satisfactory. Accept my thanks, and believe me to remain most respectfully yours,
GEO. W. MORGAN, Organist.

The Auburn Courier

Thursday, April 2nd, 1874.

The employes of the Erie Railroad are on a strike.

Wouldn't it be a good idea if the women of the country to turn their praying batteries on Washington and endeavor to reform the Government.

Major Max. F. A. Hoffman, formerly of the 128th, Indiana Volunteer, and late Secretary of State, died on Saturday at his home in Vanderburg county, of small pox.

"Col. John S. Mosby has put himself in the hands of his friends and consented to be a candidate for Congress." He would not like to put himself in the hands of some of his present friends a few years ago.

The Chicago Tribune thinks that "Morton undoubtedly represents the present animus and purposes of the Republican party better than any other man in it, and even in the point of physical health he is not in apt representative, since the party is as much in need of crutches as himself."

Indianapolis was visited by a destructive conflagration on Sunday night. Several large buildings in the vicinity of the Journal office were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $280,000; insurance only $41,000. On Monday, Elgin, Ill., had a $100,000 and Wooster, Ohio, an $80,000 fire.

Mr. Morton has spoiled his chances for the Presidency by his unwarrantable attacks on Mr Scurtz and the German people through him. Mr. Morton saw his mistake when it was too late and awkwardly sought to rectify it. The truth is Senator Morton is a political charlatan—a demagogue of the most unscrupulous sect. His only virtue is his facility in securing followers by a fast and loose policy, but even that has failed him now.

An event of more than ordinary interest in military circles is about to transpire. Allusion is made of course to the projected visit of Lt. Col. Fred. Grant to the headquarters of Gen. Sheridan. Sheridan is in a flutter of trepidation, such as old Marshal Soult might have felt at an expected reception of the Little Corporal. The enthusiasm of Phil's veterans at sight of the grim, battle-scarred Fred., the hero of a hundred battles, will be something sublime.

At an Indianapolis a wicked liquor dealer tried to drown the prayers and songs of the temperence women with an orchestrion. But the ladies beat that music. He then let loose two tame bears in their midst, when the ladies went pell-mell through the door on the double quick. But the best part of the joke was that the whiskey bummers, who had been treating liberally, were as badly frightened as the ladies, and broke for another door without paying their bills

We see it stated that the Auditor of State has decided that the whole tax charged against a tax-payer is delinquent when the first installment has not been paid by the third Monday in April; consequently the record of the delinquency should be made as usual, and will not be affected by the installments upon the duplicate. Let our tax-payers bear this in mind. Half of their tax besides their road and poll tax, becomes due the same as usual, and unless paid, it is marked delinquent with penalty and costs as usual.

In asking Mr. Schurz to deliver the funeral oration upon Charles Sumner, the authorities of Boston not only paid Mr. Schurz a high compliment, but displayed a high compliment, but displayed a degree of wisdom which, under the circumstances, was hardly to be expected. There are many men in Massachusetts who could have performed this task fitly and well, but Carl Schurz is the one man of all the world who can do it best. Side by side he stood by Mr. Sumner, since the war at least, and has fought with his great comrade the battles of his country for true reform. He is a a statesman of the noblest type, a scholar of eminent standing, and a man of pure, unspotted private life. In all the developments of fraud and bribe-taking, from which so few came out with unsoiled reputations, Mr. Schurz emerged without the smell of fire upon his garments.

There is a fair probability that Bismarck will not last much longer. The result of his death upon the policy and future of Germany it is, of course impossible to foretell. He has been the tower of strength for the German nation for many years. He has been to Germany what Richelieu was to France. The present glory of Prussia is due in a very large part to the genius of Bismarck. In other hands the German Empire will find itself in the midst of difficulties which will be hard to meet and control.

At the latest reports the rioters had declared open war on the Erie company, and the Governor of Pennsylvania finds himself called on to furnish troops to enforce the law. The point made to the rioters, that the law is the only machinery which can seize debtors, is strong enough so overthrow the opposition of reasonable men, but unhappily men in this condition are without reason. The Erie strike is a peculiarly aggravating outbreak, as the men were receiving fair wages, considering the times, and the thousands who are without employment in the east.

It is the New York Times, the very Times of Murphy, Grant and credit mobilier, which says of the senatorial election in Massachusetts:

"At this distance it is apparent that the election of Mr. Charles Francis Adams would be the most gratifying end to a struggle which is becoming too protracted to be altogether creditable."

What is to become of the great party if such disloyalty as this is to be tolerated in the organ? Pretty soon we shall see our own ring organ in this city calling for the selection of George W. Julian to purify the atmosphere corrupted by Morton.

The State Sentinel closes a review of Judge Niblack's course in congress—wherein it finds everything to commend except the salary-grab—"The popular verdict was plain an outspoken. There remains but one thing for Mr. Niblack to do: Return the money and wash his hands of the only act which, in a long and illustrious career, can cause a tinge of shame or feeling of regret to come to the legions who delight to do him honor."

Why cannot a man of Judge Niblack's purity of character and conduct see the only great error of his life and rectify it at once? What are five thousand dollars to avail for the loss of everything that a man holds most dear?

The steamer Malwa arrived off Suez at 11 o'clock Saturday night. Arthur Laing and Jacob Wainright were on board in charge of the remains of Dr. Livingstone. The following account is given of Livingstone's fatal illness and death:

He had been ill of chronic dysentary for several months. He was well supplied with stores and medicines, but he had a presentiment that the attack would prove fatal. At first he was able to ride on a donkey, but soon had to be carried. Arriving at Muilala, beyond Lake Bemba, in the Bisa country, he said: "Build me a hut to die in." A hut was built by his followers.

The 1st of May he was confined to his bed, and afterward suffered greatly, groaning night and day. The third day he said he was very cold, and requested that more grass be put over the hut. Kitimbo, Chief of Bisa sent flour and beans, and behaved well toward the party. The fourth day Dr. Livingstone was insensible, and died about midnight. Makaspoosh, a servant, was present

An Endorsement of the Hon. M. C. Kerr.

From the New York World.

We learn with great pleasure that the Hon. Michael C. Kerr, of Indiana is a Candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Second District of Indiana, for the Forty-fourth Congress. The district is overwhelmingly Democratic, and as Mr. Kerr is sure of a nomination his return is, therefore, pretty certain. Our appreciation of Mr. Kerr's perfect integrity, his statesmanlike ability, and his great value as a legislator is well known. We look upon this patriotic and experienced representative not only in the light of a capable and efficient legislator, but as one of the foremost among their honest leaders whom the regenerated Democracy will send to the next Congress. And without fear of contradiction we say that the really upright men of the Republican party itself will greet Mr. Kerr's return to the hall where he has rendered such faithful and assiduous service to his country with pleasure only second to that of the Democrats themselves. A man like Mr. Kerr, be he Republican or Democrat, is even more valuable to his country than to his party. The Second District of Indiana may well be proud to have it in their power to send such a man to Congress.

It is enough to make an honest man despair of Republican government, or rather its administration, to contemplate its abuses. The Chicago Tribune puts the office holding abuse in the light of a pension system, a very appropriate conceit. The war veterans form but a part of the army of pensioners on the public funds. Mr. Dawes in his blast on economy attacks the system of collecting revenue, and gave the figures. Take out eight of the leading ports at which the total revenue collected reaches $175,395,252, for which amount the salaries take 4.82 per cent., and there are left 128 ports, at all of which the aggregate receipts are but $9,160,793, and the cost of collecting that sum last year was $1,664,873, or very near to 20 per cent. of the whole sum. But sifting a little closer, and there are found to be 32 ports in the United States where there is not a dollar of revenue collected. Yet these ports are manned with pensioners to the number of 132 persons kept under pay for doing no service whatever. The annual costs of these useless dependents is over $75,000. In fourteen other ports named there are ninety officers, who together collected $1,196, or a little over twenty-two dollars apiece, for which service they are paid out of funds collected elsewhere, $72,540, or an average of $800 each. Going on to classify, there are seventeen other ports presided over by 134 United States digniraries, who manage to collect $21.10 each, at a cost of $95,390, thus drawing a pension of over $722 each for services not named in their instructions. In eight ports fifty-eight officers collected $51,583, and received for their services $55,763. In four ports the amount of $102,446 was collected at a cost of $136,413. Summing the five groups last named, and it gives 515 able bodied pensioners, all, no doubt, good curbstone politicians, who manage to scrape up for the government $183,829, but draw out in salaries $432,271, thus costing the people $251,472 to support a set of barnacles who would die if they had to work for a living instead of sponging off from somebody else. Twelve men in Virginia are kept under pay revenue collectors, who never collect a dollar. In Florida two custom houses support seventeen persons for their annual service of collecting fifty-two dollars. Why not abolish these drains upon the public treasury? Why not reduce the force of idle pensioners? The answer is, not that they are serviceable to the government, but they are necessary to the "great party," to carry elections. That is the service for which they are paid.

Nearly one half of our tax payers do not avail themselves of the new law, (permitting one half of the taxes to be paid next fall) but square up the whole account this spring and pay the next installment in votes against the high salary greasers next fall. That will do.—Goshen Democrat.

Pioneer Sketches

—OF—

DeKALB COUNTY

NUMBER FIVE.

Lays the chamber floor with clapboards and behold he has a house. Now he must furnish it. Well, taking some puncheons left from the floor, he cuts them into square pieces; dresses off one side with his axe; bores holes for the legs; hews out rough sticks for those legs; drives them in and his chairs are made. cutting some straight iron wood poles, of proper length, for rails and posts; boring holes with a large augur in those posts; hewing of the ends of the rails with his axe to the necessary size, and then driving all together with his axe, he soon has a bedstead! Stripping a young bass wood tree of its bark, and weaving it around and between the rails—Lo the bedstead is corded!! Boring holes in the wall, he dresses rough wooden pins, and lays a broad clapboard thereon—and behold his cupboard!

By way of finishing up this dish of hash, let me tell an anecdote:

John P. Widney had just erected such a cabin as above described, save that it had as yet no floor. His chimney had just been finished, and in building it he had dug a deep hole just between the door and the hearth, He and his wife seated on a sleeper in front of the fire, were enjoying its genial warmth, on a cold December night. The earth was covered with a mantle of snow, and the wind whistled without; but what cared they, in their comfortable dwelling? Two land hunters—Mr. Lytle and another, lost and benighted, were pushing through the snow and brush, when the light of the six light window, on the tall bluff of Twenty-six Mile Creek, caught their delighted vision, and they made towards it and plunged waist deep in the swollen creek, thick with snow and ice. Out again, on the other side, their eyes steadfastly fixed on the beacon light, they soon rapped on the logs at the side of the door, and were cordially bade "come in." Turning aside the quilt, they entered; and stepping toward the cheerful fire, they both plunged, together, into the "awful abyss" from which the substance of the chimney had been drawn. And there we will leave them for the present.

In addition to the difficulties and privations endured by the river settlements, as mentioned in our last chapter, was that of a scarcity of teams. Having, as yet, raised nothing to feed teams on in the winter; they were willing to make many shifts to get along without. I know a highly respected citizen of this county, who has filled several offices, and is now considered wealthy; that between the first of January 1837, and the first of May following, chopped off five acres of heavy timber, taking it nearly all down,—Burned the brush—Rolled the logs, and burned them off—Split the rails and carried them to their place on the fence on his shoulders; and thus had his field cleared off, and well fenced by the time mentioned above, without having a team in the clearing, except perhaps one day to draw the remnants of the log heaps together. His wife was his sole help. He chopping and she often picking the brush. Many nights he worked by moonlignt until quite late. He "yankee'd" the largest logs together as he expressed it, having this in view in felling the trees—carried the smaller logs, so dragged them by one end, or rolled them with a handspike to the heap, as best he could. When I visited him on the sixth of May, he and his wife were digging holes among the roots with hoes, and putting in seed corn. The crop was attended entirely with the hoe; and in this way he raised a good crop of corn and potatoes, without having a plow in the field.

It was said that William Mathews raised a good crop of corn, planted with a handspike, and tended with a hoe. His plan of planting was to strike a sharp handspike into the rich soil diagonally—draw it out—drop in the seed, and then pressing down the soil by stepping on it as he passed on to plant the next hill.

The settler often found the season for planting on hand, before his clearing was "burned off," and then sometimes the corn or potatoes was planted between the log heaps—Sometimes the timber was thrown into "windrows," some 3 or 4 rods apart, and the crop planted between the "rows," and left to be burned when the crop came off.

The first settlers were quite destitute of religious privileges. Benjamin Alton, of the Disciple or Campbellite church, preached the first sermon in the county, —so far as I am now informed, in the fall of 1836. For some time perhaps nearly a year he was the only preacher. He had settled in the woods and had to clear his own land, and get his provisions in the mean time, often by taking jobs of chopping; yet he generally preached on Sunday.

We have just had a practical demonstration of the fact that as March comes in so she won't go out. The last day of the month was the coldest for many days.

Brown & McCarty, of Angola, have purchased the Republican, and by adding new material will endeavor to get out a respectable paper in that paper-ridden county. We hope so, at least.

The "celebrated niger talent," organized at Butler Center, disgusted Elkhart last Tuesday. They are now "hoofing" it in this direction singing, "Will someone send us a dollar from home."

Gust Leas captured another horse-thief last week. He had stolen a horse from Mr. Hursh, of Allen County, and was overtaken at Bryan. He is now in jail at Fort Wayne.

We noticed a young merchant strolling along the creek last Sunday morning, near the old saw mill, and it was something very uncommon for him; so much so that the whole neighborhood noticed it. (She was at Sunday-school.)

A two year old boy of Sheriff Meese, accidently fell into a bucket of hot water last Monday morning, and was so badly scalded as to cause his death at 10 o'clock on yesterday. This is a sad bereavement and the family have the sympathy of the community.

A fellow got mad because something was said about his being blest with twins and here is what he writes:

"Mr. Editurs—What did you print my family matters in yur paper for it iz none yur biznes if my wif did hav twins I pays for them and youl get yur head punched you best tend to yur own buzness. J. P"

New Church.—We were shown the plans for the new Catholic church, and we can say if it is constructed in accordance therewith it will be an ornament to the place. It is to be 60x30, 18 feet high and will cost about $2000. There seems to be a disposition to go to work immediately and have it done by fall.

In Ashland, Ohio, after a short battle the women's crusade was successful in closing every saloon in the place. Seven of them capitulated at one time. The druggists all took the pledge. Now, if they could quench the thirst of the liquor drinkers, the saloons would never more appear, and the druggists might do a legitimate business,

Yesterday Division Engineer Achenheil received $25,000 from the B. P. & C. Co., to pay contractors on the line of the road This money pays all the February estimate, and will be distributed between Defiance and Albion, Indiana, 10,000 of the money will be paid here. The company is prompt in making payments and all along the line work is progressing satisfactorily.—Defiance Democrat.

Fine Ditch.—The splendid sewer constructed in the north part of town, on Van Beuren street, and thence east, was done by Messrs. Carey & McCarty, two clever young men, who seem to understand their business thoroughly. Their charges are reasonable for this kind of work, and a look at this job will satisfy anyone that they know how to do it.

Kendallville is trying to blind Ligonier so as to get its assistance to move the county seat to her borders. Now that Albion is getting to be a railroad point, these jealous neighbors want to move the county seat. We believe the good sense of a majority of the people will say that it should remain where it is.

Our Stave Factory is in a most prosperous condition. The building itself is almost shut out with the piles of bolts that surround it while the long sheds are all to overflowing with staves, so that large stacks have to be made on the outside Benguot & Co. are driving business day and night. We are fortunate in having this business in such able hands.

The other day the citizens of Maysville and vicinity were startled by the report that a man by the name of John Graber, residing one mile east of Maysville, was found dead near his residence, and when discovered there were three large hogs eagerly devouring his remains. They had eaten the face, nose and ears off, rendering him a horible object to behold.

One of the most neatest arranged and best kept dry goods stores in the county is that of Miller & Casebeer, in Case's old stand. It is neat because everything is in its place, and then there's the clever and agreeable Chauncy and Ben, to wait upon you, not with a smirk and a grin, and with hair parted in the middle, but in an easy common sense way. It is the best kept because they always keep up their assortment in everything, and have a fine and varied display of goods in their line. No shoddy enters their store, but they keep a genuine article which is sold at the lowest prices.

An exchange truly says: It costs less than a cent a day to take your weekly paper—less than a dilligent hen could earn in a year at the market price of eggs; less than one cigar a week and a very cheap one at that; less than the barber would charge by the year to keep one's hair trimmed; less than a good sized thanksgiving turkey; less than a seat one night at the opera; less than a energetic kitchen girl will waste in a week. A penny a day can be saved in many a way better than by stopping a family paper.

Our enterprising farmer, Geo. Clark, arrived here last Friday with his magnificent horse, recently purchased in Wisconsin. He is a splendid specimen of a perfect horse, and was subject to much praise by all who saw him. He is a Percheron Stallion, 3 years old June 5th, 1874 and weighs over 1400 lbs. He was got by imported stallion LeGrand Monarque, dam, chestnut mare, 16½ hands high and weighed 1600 lbs. There is no question as to the pedigree of this colt. Mr. Clark has a certificate from Mr. Sherman who raised him. Farmers should see this animal by all means. Only a limited service will be allowed this year.

Edward Everett, of whom we spoke last week, as sending us a communication, won't down a bit. He has an ambition worthy of emulation. He afflicts us again this week, with a very fine original production from Shakespeare. Then he gives Hamlet's instruction to the players. As we are not engaged in publishing the productions of standard authors we decline. Get a copy of Shakespeare and read for yourself. Edward should remember that we do not publish communications unless the real name of the author is given.

Charles W. says that a transient advertisement will be inserted on one side of our paper for one cent per line. We beg leave to differ. No amount will admit it in the Courier alone, but an advertiser must go to the expense of having it published in 300 others. So you see Charles would misrepresent in order to get out of answering our question about getting the President's Message printed at Toledo; and also the other important question of charging home patrons three times as much for the same space as he does Dr. Todd, of Fort Wayne.

New Store.—Messrs. Stamets & Wile two gentlemen from Ohio, have established themselves in our place and have opened out a very fine stock of fancy goods in Ensley's block, north of the Court House It is not a regular dry goods store, the line of goods being confined to that of Millinery, Fancy Goods, Notions, &c., and is a valuable addition to our town. No need of going to Fort Wayne for a yard of ribbon, or some other article not usually kept in our stores. We hope the public will give them a liberal patronage—They are agreeable, enterprising young men and we hope they will meet with success.

Soldiers' Re-union.

Fort Wayne is making great preparation for the Soldiers' Re-union at that place next Tuesday. The Gazette says:

"Our own citizens, we need not say, are alive to the great occasion. We must make it a great success; we must make our city so attractive that our visitors will come again; we must put on municipal holiday attire, and make it red-letter day in deed and in truth.

There will be other re-unions in the State this year but we, of Fort Wayne, must do our best to lead off in royal style and make the occasion the happiest of them all. Comrads will meet comrads for the first time in years, and they have a right to be happy. So be it.

Why would it not be well for all the soldiers in this locality to meet say Friday evening, and organize for the occasion. Soldiers ought to go to such places in a soldierly manner, and a regular company ought to be organized.

The ladies should call and see the handsome embroideries at the New Store in Ensley's block.

Something nice in the way of Hoopskirts at the New Fancy store, north of Court House.

As an argument that the Indianian is a better paper than the Courier, Reub says that it has 3000 circulation against six hundred of the Courier. That's right, Reub, put yours to the highest notch and ours to the lowest, its so liberal upon your part, you know. We have nearer 1000 circulation than Reub has 3000, and will bet on it. Say that is the proportion of the two papers, and how does things stand. The Courier has just recently finished its third year, while the Indianian has seen its eighteenth. At this rate the Courier would have a circulation of 6000 when it gets as old as the Indianian. This is considered, of course, without the assistance of a clerkship.

Candy Manufactory.—Youngling, Gibson & Brother, have purchased Markle's south lot, and have a two story frame on the way for a Candy Manf'y and Bakery. These gentlemen propose to establish a business, in this line, that will employ eight or ten hands, and are now only making temporary arrangements until fall when the building now being put up will be moved to the rear, and a large brick take its place. Then they will add steam and open out an establishment of this kind that will be no disgrace to Northern Indiana. From the way they commenced and the manner they have pushed things since their arrival, shows emphatically that they mean business. Let the work go bravely on. Manufactories help to build up towns be they never so small, and the more we have the more inducement for others to come.

Two-and-a-Half Per Cent.—On Monday, at the meeting of the creditors of M. & A. Hale, bankrupts, at Fort Wayne, a dividend of two-and-a-half per cent. was declared. As this is about all the creditors are likely to realize, they have some peculiar views of that unmitigated swindle, called the bankrupt law. As is usual in such cases, the fees and charges of the court officers ate up the entire assets, leaving nothing for the creditors. Some very plain talk is indulged in about U. S. Marshal Spooner, of Indianapolis, and Register Chapman, of Warsaw. Just how an honest man votes for the contiuance of this infamous law upon the statute book, will always be a mystery to some people in this vicinity.—Press

Yet is a Radical measure passed by a Radical Congress out of which, it was intended to grow corruption. How can you expect anything perfect from such source. A great many other people are getting sick of it as well as the Press

Miss-take.—A humorous incident, a little embarrassing perhaps, occurred at church last Sabbath evening: Our town is favored with two beautiful and accomplished sisters, whose exact likeness, bespeaks the closest tie of consanguinity.—Two of our young gallants escorted them to church, one of whom seemed to lack the power to identify as closely as the case required. When service was over he stepped up to the one he thought accompanied him before, and to his horror she said, "No, sir." With these cruel words burn'ng in his heart he rushed forth, and his partner was loth to pursue her way homeward without her former escort. He had asked the wrong one.

Examination of Teachers.

The Temperance Movement.

While there is no particular excitement in Auburn, relative to the temperance movement, our neighbors at Waterloo, are realizing considerable excitement. A visit to that place last Saturday disclosed the fact that the Woman's Crusade was in full force, each saloon being carefully guarded by several fair sentinels relieved at regular intervals, with the precision and discipline of a standing army.

There was a great diversity of opinion, as to the policy of this step upon the part of the ladies, but the prompt and earnest manner in which they discharged the duty plainly indicated that they had faith in accomplishing some good. The name of every person known to them, was taken as they entered the saloon, without comment or remark. They attempted to prevent no one from entering, and conducted themselves with propriety. We do not know what the immediate object is which they wish to accomplish in this way, but there is no disguising the fact that it kept some from entering therein. Some of them may have got awful dry, and could have sang, with becoming grace, "Oh, that this cruel was over."

The question of law was freely discussed, and various conclusions arrived at.—The saloon keepers have been granted a license under the law, and have rights and privileges under that law. If they do not live up to the law they should be brought to punishment. If this movement has been instituted to ascertain that fact then we can see no great objection to it. If the ladies can do this without interfering with the rights of the liquor dealers, no objection can be made. There is grumbling also because saloon keepers are persecuted in this way, while druggists are permitted to go unnoticed, when it is a notorious fact that they dispense the "liquid fire" with an unsparing hand. If so this is unjust, and the ladies cannot expect to make much headway with such a lamentable fact staring them in the face. But we realy believe the ladies are intent upon accomplishing some good without doing any one an injury, and this being the case we wish them success. When law is trampled upon and disregarded, when everything seems to pander to the curse of intemperance, and wretchedness and misery are crushing out the happiness from many a hearth stone, we are glad to know, that even poor, weak woman, can exert a power to baffle the designs of those who are the direct participators in the wide spread desolation. We have never been a prohibitionist, but have always been inclined to the policy that would permit one to take a glass when they felt that it would do them good. Yet, were it in our power to decide as to temperance or intemperance, we would pronounce for temperance every time. We don't like that sneaking temperance, however, that drinks not in public, but pours it down behind the door. We don't like this screening, and that is one special object we have to saloons. They must have their windows painted or curtained to hide what is going on within. It don't look right. What you do do openly and above board, but be sure you are right, then go ahead.

Our Auburn and Butler cotemporaries have been importuned to publish the names of petitioners for permits, and scarcely know what to do about it. They should have consented, on condition that the matter be paid for as an advertisement. We have noticed that persons who are so anxious to have some one else do a mean thing for them, very rapidly lose all interest in the matter when asked to pay.—Press.

Whenever we don't know how to act we will ask advice; but until then, we think it is pretty cheeky to volunteer it. We have no doubt the Press would publish anything if it were paid for it, but there are some things that would not be inserted in the Courier at any price.

THEY SELL GOODS

Cheaper than any other clothing house in Fort Wayne. Max Nirdlinger and Sam and Pete have just opened an entire new stock of Clothing and gents furnishing goods of every description which will sell for cash only. Having but one price they propose to sell down to the lowest figure. They have opened out a new store and their goods are new. Remember the store No. 5 east Main, north of the Court House. The stock was bought just after the panic and will be sold at panic prices.

PROCLAMATION.

—OF—

JOHN HEBEL,

To All Whom it May Concern.

—o—

Know ye, That I have obtained a license from the Commissioners Court and am permitted to retail intoxicating liquors at my saloon in the town of Auburn. To the wife who has a drunkard for a husband, or a friend who is unfortunately dissipated, I say emphatically give me notice in person of such case or cases in which you are interested, and all such shall be excluded from my bar. Let mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers do likewise and their request will be regarded and always consider it a great favor by so doing: this is simply the sum and substance of the whole matter. I am permitted to sell whiskey and other intoxicating liquors, and I want it distinctly understood that I have no desire to sell to drunkards and minors or to the poor and destitute. I much prefer that they save their money and apply it where it legitimately belongs—to their families. There are gentlemen of honor and men of money, who sport, and who can afford it; with such I only desire to exchange. To this class our bar is open and none others need apply. For gentlemen of my style I have a splendid saloon, and have constantly on hand a full stock of all kinds of wines and liquors, and the general favorite drinks, including lager beer, California catawba—extra fine and universally acknowledged of healthy, and for the promotion of health. To those who wish to trade with me and can afford it; come and I will endeavor to treat you gentlemanly and courteously. Pay your cash, choose your drinks, and go about your business, and it's your business, and nobody else's business.

JOHN HEBEL.

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

DR. J. G. HOLLAND, editor of Scribner's Monthly, vigorously defends the crusade against the rum-sellers and censures Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, for condemning the praying mode of warfare. He says: "What, in God's dear name, was there left them to do but just what they are doing, and what you condemn? The whole business has been left to God and the women, and the latter are praying in the churches and in the streets, and pushing on their divine and peaceful crusade, because the men of America have failed to do their duty. Shall a Christian man, in high station or low, lift his voice against them? I tremble to think of the stumbling-block which you in your circular have placed before the tempted and deceived. There is not a whisky mill in the Union which does not stand firmer on its foundation in consequence of it. There is not a whisky seller in the country who does not approve of it, and feel easier in his business for it. There is no clergyman who indulges in wine to the destruction of his influence as a temperance man who does not see in it his justification. There is no young man just beginning a course of dissipation, who does not find his downward steps the easier for it. All those who respect and revere the temperate practices of your life, are grieved by it. You have made a mistake which you can hardly rectify in a lifetime. You have given strength to the forces organized against the national purity and morality."....Two sons of the late Siamese twins arrived in Philadelphia the other day, and made application for the bodies of their deceased parents, which was complied with, and the remains were taken back to North Carolina.

THE Ætna cutlery works, in New Britain, Ct., were recently destroyed by fire. The loss is stated at $800,000, with an insurance of $450,000....Justus W. Acuff, an insane patient at Kirkbridge's Hospital, Philadelphia, while in the yard with other patients, the other day, wanted them to box with him, whereupon his companions all fell upon him and beat him to death.

THE Advisory Council of Congregational Churches to settle the points at issue in the controversy with Henry Ward Beecher's church, convened in New York last week, and was largely attended....A fire in a ship-yard at Kensington, a suburb of Philadelphia, destroyed $175,000 worth of property the other day....The Elmira House, the Union block, and nine other business house in Elmira, N. Y., have been destroyed by fire. Loss, $260,000.

JAYNE, the informer, has had his day, and now the merchants of New York, whom he has plundered and outraged, are to have theirs. Rufus Storey & Co., from whom he squeezed a penalty or $100,000, have sued him for $20,000, which they have discovered he forgot to render to the Government. Another New York firm, Platt, Boyd & Co., whom Jayne has been trying in vain for nearly a year to make compromise, have sued him for $50,000 damages for trespass in seizing their books and papers.

TWO BUILDINGS were burned at One Hundred and Forty-second street, N. Y., a few nights ago, and in one of them Mrs. Burns and her three children were burned to death. ....The merchants of New York held an immense meeting last week to protest against the moiety system of collecting the revenue.

A SUSQUEHANNA (Penn.) dispatch states that 900 workmen have left the Erie machine shops there, to compel by a strike the payment of their wages for February. The men say that one of the stipulations at the settlement of the strike a month ago was that they would be paid on or before the 15th of each month regularly....A number of New York gentlemen who are really and zealously in earnest in their efforts to restore the practice of burning the dead instead of burying them, are contemplating a large meeting in that city, or some other form of demonstration before the public.

The West.

THE temperance crusade has opened in earnest in Leavenworth, Kan. "Col." Jennison, ex-Jayhawker, who keeps a saloon and gambling-house in that city, recently delivered a speech at a temperance mass-meeting. He favored going to the fountain-head and electing temperance officials to high places, in Congress, etc. He spoke bitterly against the United States Collector, who recently made a strong temperance speech, claiming that the Collector made his living by signing United States stamps with the blood of the widows and orphans of drunkards....In Cleveland, Ohio, the movement has culminated in a most disgraceful scene of mob-violence. A party of ladies who were engaged in missionary work on the West Side, were set upon by a mob of roughs and grossly insulted. Several gentlemen who interposed for their protection were knocked down and terribly beaten. A small force of police on the ground was overpowered, and not until several relays were called and the Police Superintendent arrived could the mob be kept back. The ladies finally were driven off to their homes in carriages. None of the ladies were seriously injured, though several received slight kicks and bruises. The portion of the city in which the attack occurred has always given the police trouble....The ladies of Springfield, Ill., have begun a crusade against the saloons. All the druggists in the city with the exception of two have agreed to cease selling liquor except for medicinal purposes.

E. C. CHAPIN, of Charles City, Iowa, has purchased a one-half interest in the Davenport Gazette for $25,000....Peter Navarre, the most distinguished of the scouts who served on the American side during the war of 1812, in the operations of the different armies of the Northwest, died at Toledo, Ohio, a few days ago, at the age of 89. He participated in the battle of the Thames, and claimed to have killed Tecumseh....A most diabolical and wholesale murder is reported from St. Clair county, Ill. A German family, consisting of an old man of 80 named Fritz Stiltzenritter, his son and daughter-in-law and two small children, who resided on a small farm, were the victims. The throats of the two men were cut, and the skulls of the woman and children crushed. No clue to the perpetrators of the horrible butchery had at last accounts been discovered, and the motive for the crime is a profound mystery.

N. B. Bepler, a Cincinnati banker, was shot and dangerously wounded by highway robbers, while driving in the suburbs of the city, a few days ago.....Indianapolis has experienced a very destructive conflagration. It is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. The flames broke out in the business center, and destroyed some twenty stores, many of which were new. The loss is between $300,000 and $400,000.

THE result of the Coroner's inquest in the case of the murdered German family, near Centerville, St. Clair county, Ill., does not clear up the horrible mystery. The entire family, including two little children, their father, mother, and grandfather, were found in their house literally cut and pounded to death. Two men, relatives, of the victims, are suspected of being the murderers, and have been placed under arrest....Wooster, Ohio, has been visited by an $80,000 conflagration....From the Red Cloud Agency there comes the characteristic news that the Peace Commissioners had a talk with the Indians, but that nothing has been accomplished. Beef has been issued to the Indians for 2,000 lodges in excess of the real number, and they have accordingly been ordered to present themselves to be counted. This they are shrewd enough to be unwilling to do, and are talking in a gloomy way about getting their guns ready. There is no more definite evidence than there was a month ago as to what is actually the prospect of a serious Indian outbreak....A plan has been perfected at Des Moines, Iowa, for the purchase of the late residence of B. F. Allen, for a State University under the Presbyterians. Mr. A. will donate $100,000, and endow a Professor's chair.... Morton, trustees. The road was previously mortgaged for $96,000,000. The present mortgage is for $35,000,000, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the discharge of prior mortgages, to build three bridges, and complete the equipment of the road.

NEARLY 900 persons were in attendance on the Canal Convention which met in Rock Island, Ill. On the recommendation of the Committee on Credentials, all persons present interested in the subject before the body were admitted as delegates. Mr. J. M. Allen was chosen President. Ex-Lieut.-Gov. Bross, of Chicago, addressed the convention at length in favor of the Rock Island and Hennepin canal, and made a thorough review of the transportation question and the needs of the West for an adequate outlet for its produce. The resolutions of the convention, while particularly asserting the benefits of the proposed canal, are favorable to other practicable transportation routes by water, and recommend the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi. Mr. Hawley's bill, now before Congress, for a canal to connect Lake Michigan, the Illinois and Rock rivers, was indorsed. A committee of thirteen, with Mr. Allen at their head, was appointed to memorialize Congress in favor of the canal, and the State of Illinois was advised to cede the control of the Illinois river and the Illinois and Michigan canal as navigable highways to the Federal Government, if, in return, it would assume the construction of this new water-way.

THE Grange Agricultural Implement Factory, in Plattsmouth, Neb., is turning out fifty cultivators a day....A dispatch from Tucson, Arizona, states that Maj. Randall had a fight with the Apaches fifteen miles from Florence, and killed eleven Indians and captured thirty women and children. Three soldiers were wounded....Episode of the whisky war in Xenia, Ohio: "Wm. Harris was passing a band of women with a jug of whisky, when they beset him and urged him to abandon it. He resisted awhile, and then drew the cork of the jug and handed it to Mrs. Connable to be poured out, which being done, he dashed the jug on the ground and broke it. Afterward he signed the pledge and knelt in prayer with the women."

Gage, ex-City Treasurer of Chicago, has been quashed...The Senatorial Bribery Investigation Committee of the California State Senate has reported that no improper influences were used to secure the election of Messrs. Booth and Hagar to the United States Senate, but that improper advances had been made to the Legislators by certain persons, who acted wholly on their own authority and with no other responsibility.

The South.

THE greatest consternation exists in the Bald mountain, N. C., in consequence of subterranean convulsions. The people for miles around assembled in a vacant house and engaged in devotional exercises for sixteen days and nights. About 100 made profession of religion. The closing scenes of the meeting are represented as most peculiar and wonderful.

ARKANSAS papers give the particulars of the killing of Hon. John N. Fox, Judge of the Eleventh Judicial District, the slayer being J. R. P. Aldridge, a practicing lawyer. The difficulty grew out of some remarks to the murderer by the Judge, while the latter was on the bench. Aldridge stepped out of a store, armed with a double-barreled shot-gun, and accosted Judge Fox, who was passing along the street, with the words, "Now, Judge Fox," at the same time firing on him. The first shot took effect in his stomach. He sank on the ground exclaiming, "Oh Lord, I am a dead man," and after he had fallen Aldridge, to make sure of his work, emptied the other barrel at him, it taking effect in his bowels. Death ensued shortly afterward. Aldridge surrendered himself to the Sheriff....Mrs. William Seance, of Scott county, Ky., while laboring under a fit of temporary insanity, carved and mutilated her two children in a frightful manner and then cut her own throat. The mother is dead, but the children may recover.

THE towboat Crescent City, from New Orleans for St. Louis, with a tow of five freight barges, one fuel barge and a trading boat laden with thirteen tons of sugar, blew up at the foot of Montezuma Island, ten miles below Memphis on the 24th of March. Every part of the boat was blown to atoms, and she sank in three minutes. The barges were consumed by fire. The captain, mate, both pilots and the watchman, also, Mrs. Ostrander, the cabin boy and three colored firemen were killed outright, while Geo. Van Hanton, Patrick Bacon, Wm. Duncan and Peter Hall were badly injured....A Memphis dispatch says the Mississippi river below Napoleon is higher than ever before known....Chancellor Turner, of Selma, Ala., has decreed the sale of the Selma, Rome and Dalton railroad and all the property of the company, including 400,000 acres of public land.

Miller drove to Speers' residence in a carriage, called him out and shot him through the head. After his victim fell the murderer fired five other balls into his body....The overflow of the Mississippi Valley is no longer a question of speculation, but a certainty, and now the all-important question with merchants and planters in the vicinity of Vicksburg is, "What will be the extent of the damage done to planting interests?"

Washington.

THE report of the House Committee on Banking and Currency concerning the failure of Jay Cooke's First National Bank attributes the failure to a direct, persistent and long-continued violation of the law. There is a deficit of $46,000 in its mutilated currency account, for which no plausible explanation can be discovered. The Treasury barely escaped a loss of $287,000. This money was obtained from the Treasury by the sharp practice of Jay Cooke & Co., so the report states, under an obsolete Treasury regulation. The report holds Secretary Richardson to no accountability in the matter. The report is extremely severe upon the entire Jay Cooke firm management, and censures them in unreserved terms.

THE Senate Finance Committee have finally agreed upon a compromise financial measure. The bill fixes the amount of greenback circulation at $382,000,000, thus legalizing the reissue of that portion of the $44,000,000 legal tender reserve which is now outstanding, and making it part of the permanent circulation. The amount that has been reissued and which is now outstanding is something over $26,000,000. The bill also authorizes free banking on the national banking system, but contains a requirement that legal tender notes shall be retired from circulation proportionately as new national bank notes are issued. ....The death is announced of Judge Dent, brother of Mrs Grant....The receipts from internal revenue have diminished within the past three weeks, especially in districts in Ohio and Indiana. The decrease is attributed to the women's crusade now in progress.

THE House War Claims Committee have agreed to Judge Lawrence's report on war claims. The result of the Judge's investigation of the subject as set forth in the report is, in brief, that the Government is not legally bound to make compensation for property occupied, damaged, or destroyed in the late war by the United States forces, but that whatever is done is to be considered as an act of grace and mercy....A delegation of prominent South Carolinians have presented to Congress a memorial adopted by a recent convention of the tax-payers of that State, setting forth the grievances of the property-holders of that State, and asking Congressional relief.... Under the law of 1866 relating to negroes in the army, the colored men can obtain admission only to a few branches of the service. A proposition is now pending in Congress to abolish this distinction....The investigation of the Government printing office is said to have developed serious irregularities.

Third ballot: Dawes, 92; Curtis, 74; Banks, 6; Whittier, 2; Hoar, 8; Sanford 1; Washburn 1.

The Grange.

PRESIDENT GOLDER, of the State Grange of Illinois, calls upon the farmers of the State to send seed to their suffering brethren in Northwestern Iowa. Their destitution has become so complete in consequence of the ravages of grasshoppers that they have nothing to sow for this year's crop, and, if that fails them, they must abandon their homesteads—all they have in the world.... At a meeting of the New York State Grange, last week, resolutions were adopted indorsing the declarations of the National Grange at St. Louis; demanding legislation which will open and improve the avenues of traffic and produce; cheaper transportation; a pro-rata freight law; in favor of low canal tolls, and the canal debt funding amendment, and in favor of reasonable temperance reform legislation.

Foreign.

SIR GARNET WOLSELEY, the conquering hero of the Ashantee expedition, and his army have returned home.

A LONDON dispatch makes the extraordinary announcement that the Carlist army of rebellion against the Republican Government of Spain is now actually on its march, 12,000 strong, for Madrid, the national capital. This looks bad for the military ability of the Spanish Republic, especially when taken in connection with a Madrid dispatch to the effect that "the publication of war news is forbidden."

THE Spanish Government has promulgated a decree establishing a National Bank, and granting the monopoly of the issue of bank-notes, and compulsorily incorporating with it all other banks in the country. In return, the new bank agrees to advance to the Government 125,000,000 pesetas....Premier Disraeli the other day refused to receive a deputation which visited him for the purpose of asking the release of the Fenian prisoners ....There has been a great overflow in the River Thames, which did great damage to property and drowned several children and horses....The reception of Sir Garnet Wolseley in England, on his return from the Ashantee war, was a perfect ovation. Large crowds of enthusiastic Britons met him at the depot and conducted him with great pomp through the streets.

THE Pope has intimated that Archbishop Manning and nine other Archbishops will be created Cardinals at the next Consistory.... The Spanish Government contemplates the promotion of Gen. Burriel to the rank of Field-Marshal for eminent services rendered in Cuba.

SOME doubt has been expressed in regard to the last report of Dr. Livingston's death; but it must give way before the announcement that the remains of the great explorer have arrived at Aden, in Egypt, whence they will be taken to England....Mr. Disraeli has consented to receive a deputation of 70 Irish members of Parliament, who come to urge the release of the Fenian convicts.... The English traveling public seem to be in ecstacies over the introduction of the Pullman palace cars on the English railways. A band of journalists went on an excursion over the Midland road, and the London Times representative says: "Everything fits closely and works smoothly. The eye falls everywhere on mechanical contrivances of that ingenuity which we are accustomed to recognize and describe as American. Now that it has crossed the Atlantic, Pullman's enterprise will not be limited to England."

IT is reported from England that Ralph Waldo Emerson will receive the nomination as Lord Rector for the University of Glasgow, made vacant by Disraeli. The place is one much sought after by litterateurs in England, and it has been filled by some of the brightest stars in the English literary firmament, but never before has it even been proposed to confer the honor upon an American.

A SEVERE engagement has been fought before Bilboa, Spain, in which the Carlists suffered a defeat by the Republican forces under Marshal Serrano....At a recent meeting of the Irish members of Parliament it was determined to press the subject of home rule during the present session....The first country in Europe to make an appropriation toward the expenses of having its products properly displayed at the forthcoming Centennial is Sweeden....The financial panic in Havana, due to the inflation of the currency, is increasing. The Premium on gold and exchange is advancing hourly. The latest known gold quotation was 250.

House.—The proceedings in the House were void of interest, the business relating to the District of Columbia occupying nearly the whole day.

SATURDAY, March 21.—Senate.—There was no session of the Senate.

House.—The day was devoted to legislation relating to the District of Columbia. The bill appropriating $97,000 to pay the District school-teachers was passed. The appropriation of $350,000 to build a bridge across the Eastern branch of the Potomac was killed.

MONDAY, March 23.—Senate.—Chandler presented a resolution of the Legislature of Michigan praying Congress to amend the Postal law, to permit the free exchange of newspapers, and their free circulation in counties where published. Dawes offered his amendment withdrawing the $26,000,000 of the reserves that have been re-issued, and reducing the currency to $356,000,000. It was defeated by the decisive vote of 171 to 70. Roberts' amendment fixing the circulation at $382,000,000—that is, legalizing the issue of the $26,000,000 reserves that have been already put out—was defeated by 172 to 74. The $400,000,000 bill was then passed by 168 to 77. ....A motion to suspend the rules to consider an amendment to the Appropriation bill that mileage shall not be paid to members of Congress, but in lieu thereof actual traveling expenses....The Ways and Means Committee was instructed to inquire into the expediency of repealing the stamp duty on matches and bank checks....Sherwood presented a petition of the officers and soldiers of Northwestern Ohio in favor of the equalization of soldiers' bounties.

TUESDAY, March 24.—Senate.—The only feature of interest in the proceedings was Mr. Sherman's explanation of his new currency bill. It was a compromise, he said, and had all the strength and weakness of such a measure. The Finance Committee had fixed upon $382,000,000 as the limit of the currency, as that was the amount now in circulation. He reminded the Senate that all this legal-tender must be redeemed in gold. He hoped Congress would not adjourn without preparing some plan for redeeming this increased currency. If it did so, the country would be dishonored.

Without coming to a vote the Senate adjourned.

House.—A test vote was reached by the House on the McCrary Transportation bill. After a lengthy debate, in which G. F. Hoar led off in favor of the bill, and was followed by Hawley (Ill.), Smith (Ohio), and Monroe; Niblack moved to lay the bill on the table, which was negatived—yeas, 92; nays, 129.

This was defeated by a vote of 18 to 40. Wright, of Iowa, then offered a substitute providing that the maximum limit be fixed at $400,000,000. Morrill (Vt.) wanted to amend this by adding that the circulation should remain at that amount until reduced, as provided for in other sections of the bill. This was disagreed to—26 to 31. Wright's amendment raising the figure to $400,000,000 was then adopted. Yeas, 31; nays, 26.

National "Honor."

At a peace meeting held at Cooper Institute, that distinguished and eminent divine, Chancellor Howard Crosby, presided. In his opening address he forcibly and eloquently inveighed against the fashion of making boys admire tyrants and warriors by painting them in our histories in coleur de rose. Boys, he said, should be taught the truth, that wars are cursed things and of the devil, and that Cæsars and Napoleons are simply tigers let loose.

All the great wars that desolated the earth at various times were sustained and maintained to their bloody end by so-called honor, a sentiment which in this interpretation was only a synonym for crime. A nation sins, and, rather than acknowledge its error, it persists in it to the end. This feeling of "honor" was the fruitful source of innumerable outrages. He condemned the homage accorded to great military heroes as highly injudicious. He spoke of the intrigues of the Third Napoleon which occasioned death and misery to millions. He counseled the honor of peace and good will among men as most conducive to the advancement of Christianity.

Religious Statistics.

The number of church edifices in this country in 1870 was 63,082, against 38,061 in 1850, which is an increase of about 75 per cent. in twenty years. The increase in the Methodist churches has been about this figure; that of the Catholic is over 200 per cent. The census of 1870 puts the valuation of all church property at $350,000,000, but it is certainly double that, or about $700,000,000. In valuation the Methodists rank first, and the Catholics next, both having added to their wealth at about the same rate per cent.

Postal Telegraphy.

The following is a synopsis of the bill known as the Hubbard Postal Telegraph Scheme, which provides for the incorporation of a private company to perform the work of postal telegraphy under contract with the Postmaster-General. It will be seen that the scheme contemplates a material extension of the advantages of modern telegraphy, by largely diminishing its cost, and by encouraging its use in business correspondence, and to that extent relieving the mails of a heavy burden. The plan contemplates no additional expense to the department, and seems to carefully provide for the regulation of charges, etc.:

Section 1 provides that the Postmaster-General shall establish telegraph offices at all Postoffices on telegraphic circuits, and at all other Postoffices within ten miles of any circuit where the salary of the Postmaster is not less than $500 per annum, and at such other places as, in his judgment, the wants of the people may require.

Section 2 provides that the charges for the transmission of telegrams, excepting service and Government telegrams, shall be prepaid by stamps and at the following rates for telegrams of twenty words or less: When the distance of transmission is under 200 miles, 20 cents; when over 200 and under 500 miles, 50 cents; when over 500 and under 750 miles, 75 cents; when over 750 and under 1,000 miles, $1; for all greater distances, $1.25; for telegrams directed to be transmitted by night 1,000 miles or less, 50 cents; for greater distances, 50 cents. All words shall be counted, and for every five additional words or less one-fifth additional rate shall be charged. These rates to cover delivery within half a mile of the telegraph office. Governmental and service telegrams to have priority in transmission.

Section 3 fixes the rate for special dispatches to newspapers and commercial news associations as follows: For each 100 words or less, for each circuit of 250 miles, shall not exceed 75 cents if sent by night and $1 by day; but when copies of the same dispatch are dropped off at one or more offices the rate for each office shall not exceed 50 cents by night and 75 cents by day, and at the same rate for each word in excess, and 10 cents additional for each 100 words or less for manifolding to each newspaper receiving it.

Section 4 authorizes the Postmaster-General to contract with the Postal Telegraph Company for the transportation of correspondence by telegraph as his agent for that purpose; such contract to be terminable at the option of Congress. The Postmaster-General to furnish suitable accommodation for the employes and instruments of the company; said company to have the right on all post roads; to keep its lines in good working order, and promptly transmit all telegrams. After the payment of 10 per cent. per annum upon its capital stock, its profits are to be appropriated to the construction and the extension of its lines, and to the reduction of rates, under the direction of the Postmaster-General.

Section 5 provides that the Postmaster-General shall supply stamps of the proper denomination, make proper rules and regulations, defines the punishment to be inflicted upon those who interfere with the lines or the working thereof, or who divulge the contents of any message that may be transmitted.

Section 6 authorizes the Postmaster-General to increase the rate of transmission in any State or Territory which may levy any tax or assessment upon the company until the increased amount realized by the company equals such tax or license. It also provides for monthly statements from all Postmasters, and the Postmaster-General is directed to cause to be prepared for the company a statement of the amount of telegraphic stamps sold, and of all other sums received for the transmission of telegrams, and of the number of telegrams received by the department, and their stamped value, and, after deducting five cents on each telegram transmitted, shall pay the remainder of such receipts to said company as full compensation for its services under said contract.

Section 7 names the corporators and defines the powers and duties of the company.

Section 8 authorizes the company to purchase any lines of telegraph that may be in operation at the date of the approval of the act, provided such purchase receives the approval of the Postmaster-General.

Section 9 authorizes said company to establish and maintain at its own expense other telegraph offices in addition to those that may be established by the Postmaster-General.

Section 10 provides that if the company shall refuse to enter into contract with the Postmaster-General according to the provisions of the act all the rights obtained thereby shall cease and determine.

Section 11 gives Congress the power at any time to repeal, alter, or amend the act.

Some roads have a six-foot gauge, others 5 feet two inches. The standard gauge is 4 feet 8½ inches. Narrow gauge roads are generally 3 feet. Roads have however, been constructed with only 22 and 18 inch gauge, and one is now in operation in this country having only a single track. And one is being built having a wooden track, with the wheels of the engine and cars all made of wood. Railroads are built everywhere, on the ground, under the ground, and in mid air. They are an expensive luxury, but we cannot and will not do without them. They are a part of the civilization of the world, whatever that is.

Avoiding a Middleman.

A lodge of our grange friends in Clayton county had need of a barrel of good whisky for domestic and medicinal purposes, and were rightfully determined to avoid the monopoly prices of middlemen in purchasing. So a committee was delegated to come to Dubuque and purchase it of one of our wholesale houses, which they did on reasonable terms, and took it home on the cars. On the day of its arrival the members of the grange repaired with their stone jugs to the house of the head Granger, where the barrel was stored, and the liquor was distributed among them, each paying for his share at the wholesale rate at which it was purchased. This was well enough as far as it went, but the next day a Collector of Internal Revenue, who had been scenting the flavor of the good spirits from afar, pounced upon the head Granger for retailing whisky without a license, and threatened to place him under arrest unless he complied with the requirements of the Internal Revenue law in this regard, and he was compelled to pay $25 or $30 to get rid of the gentleman and his unpleasant exposition of what Uncle Sam provides.—Dubuque Herald.

ONE Western editor pleasantly says of another: "He is guilty of more crimes than the impenitent thief, and of falsehoods that would have appalled Ananias."

Historical Items.

THE language of France was first introduced into England by William I. in 1066. Law pleadings were changed from French to English in the reign of Edward III., 1362.

THE hearths of the early Britons were fixed in the center of their halls. The fire-place, originally, was perhaps nothing more than a large stone depressed below the level of the ground to receive the ashes.

FUNERAL games are mentioned by most early writers. Among the Romans they consisted of processions and mortal combats of gladiators around the funeral pile. They were finally abolished by Claudius. A tax was laid on funerals in England in 1793.

DIALS were invented by Anaximander, 550 B. C. The first dial of the sun in Rome was placed on the Temple of Quirinus by L. Papirius Curror, when time was divided into hours. In the times of the Emperors almost every palace and public building had a sun dial.

HISTORY informs us that the product of the silk-worm was first utilized in China 4,515 years ago, through the encouragement of the Empress Si-ling-Chi, to whom is attributed the invention of silk stuffs. The secret of silk-worm culture was finally stolen from China, and ultimately spread all over the globe; for twenty years, however, the Chinese kept the secret faithfully; death was the penalty which any one incurred who attempted to impart a knowledge of it to any outside nation, and their frontiers were guarded closely to prevent the secret from being carried abroad.

THE coffin in which the body of Richard III, was placed afterward did service as a horse-trough. During the battle of Bosworth Field he received several wounds, each of which would have proved mortal. His armor was so broken and his features were so defaced that he was hardly to be recognized when dragged from beneath a heap of slain. The body, perfectly naked, with a rope round the neck, was flung across a horse like the carcass of a calf, and was thus carried in triumph to Leicester. It was exposed for two days in the Town Hall, and then buried without ceremony in the Gray Friar's Church. At the destruction of the religious homes the remains were thrown out, and the coffin, which was of stone, was converted into a watering-trough at the White Horse Inn.

An Editor Who is Deaf.

We thought everybody in the State knew that we are deaf, but once in a while we find one who is not aware of the fact. A female book peddler came to the office the other day. She wished to dispose of a book. She was alone in this world, and had no one to whom she could turn for sympathy or assistance; hence we should buy her book. She was unmarried, and had no manly heart into which she could pour her sufferings, therefore we ought to invest in her book. She had received a liberal education, and could talk French like a native; we could not, in consequence, pay her less than $2 for a book. We had listened attentively, and here broke in with: "What did you say? We're deaf." She started in a loud voice and went through her rigmarole. When she had finished, we went and got a roll of paper, and made it into a speaking-trumpet, placed one end to our ear, and told her to proceed. She nearly broke a blood vessel in her effort to make herself heard. She commenced: "I am alone in this world ——." "It doesn't make the slightest difference to us. We are a husband and father. Bigamy is not allowed in this State. We are not eligible to proposals." "Oh, what a fool the man is," she said in a low tone; then at the top of her voice, "I don't want to marry you, I want to sell a b-o-o-k." This last sentence was howled. "We don't want a cook," we remarked blandly; "our wife does the cooking, and she won't allow as good-looking a woman as you to stay in the house five minutes. She is very jealous." She looked at us in despair. Gathering her robes about her, giving us a glance of contempt, she exclaimed: "I do believe that if a 300-pounder were let off alongside that deaf fool's head he'd think somebody was knocking at the door." You should have heard her slam the door when she went out. We heard that.—Santa Clara (Cal.) Echo.

Pompeii.

Another discovery has recently been made at Pompeii of a skeleton—one more perfect than yet discovered. It is a man, with marked features and remarkably large ears, position recumbent, with only one hand under the cheek. Travelers who have visited Pompeii recently will remember the bodies preserved there in the small museum near the entrance. They are not skeletons, but perfect human figures, displaying in one case, with terrible truth, the agony of death. They are the "Mother and the Daughter," lying so near together that they make but one figure, and fill one glass case. The features and general appearance of the "Slave" are so marked that it would be impossible to think him anything else; and there is the body of the woman, whose lovely hand and arm proclaim her gentle birth. These are painful yet interesting relics of a past and terrible tragedy.

ILLINOIS.

EIGHTH DISTRICT CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

The farmers of the Eighth Congressional District of Illinois met in convention at Fairbury, Livingston county, recently, for the purpose of perfecting their organization for the coming campaign. They indorsed the Decatur platform, and adopted the following additional resolutions:

Resolved, That we believe that the policy of controling the currency is detrimental to the interest of the laboring classes of the United States, and the laws of supply and demand regulate the amount of currency; therefore,

Resolved, That we demand the repeal of the National Banking law, and the substitution of a legal-tender currency directly from the national Treasury, interchangeable at the option of the holder with Government bonds bearing a rate of interest not exceeding 3 65-100 per cent. per annum.

Resolved, That their practice of electing to Congress and the legislative bodies men that are directly pecuniarily interested in National Banks or other species of business privately is unsound policy, and that it meets with our unqualified condemnation.

Resolved, That the existing Railway law of this State should be sustained and enforced until thoroughly tested before the courts.

Resolved, That we demand of Congress the repeal of the unjust law that prevents foreign vessels from competing in our own lake and coastwise trade.

Resolved, That the Revenue laws of the State shall be so amended that all bona fide indebtedness on personal property shall be deducted.

TWELFTH DISTRICT—A VIGOROUS PLATFORM.

At a meeting of the Anti-Monopolists of the Twelfth Congressional District the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The great practical political issue of to-day, not only before this country, but before the whole civilized world, is the issue, not against capital or wealth as such, but against all unjust monopolies of whatever sort; and

Whereas, The whole civilized world is already organized or combined, in one form or another, with more or less of wisdom and discretion, on the one or the other side of this question of monopolies, we desire to throw our banner to the breeze on the side of the Anti-Monopolists. That we may not be misunderstood, we therefore declare ourselves

First—In favor of all just and equal, all fair and honest, accumulations of wealth, of public usefulness, and proven by all proper methods of industry and skill, by all persons and associations of men whatever.

Second—We believe that all men have the inherent right to do what they please with their own, whenever and wherever they please to act in accordance with the public weal, and in no case whatever in which they do not please so to act; and that, in our own country, in this matter, the people themselves, and not individuals or corporations, are made the sole final judges.

Third—We believe that the highest well-being of the Republic and of the race requires that all unjust and improper action, either of individuals, or of corporations, or of officers or administrators of the law, should be suppressed by due processes and penalties of law at the earliest practicable moment; and, should this needed reform, like all other reforms, involve transient losses and inconveniences to individuals, or even to corporations or whole communities of men, the responsibility is not ours, but rests wholly upon acts of injustice already perpetrated; and we declare that, in righting these evils, the real, fundamental principles of the common law, applied without prejudice, are the sheet-anchor of our hopes.

Fourth—We denounce many of the pretended applications of the common law as unjust and unequal, while the real, original principles of the law are just and equal. In this respect, the principles involved in this great, world-wide anti-monopoly struggle, involving all races of men, are precisely analogous in principle as in form to our more limited American struggle in behalf of a single race. But we hope to terminate this present struggle for our rights, and the rights of our fellows, wholly by legal and peaceful means.

Fifth—We declare ourselves, therefore, opposed to all unequal and unjust monopolies, of whatever sort, whether by individuals or by corporations; whether by private greed or public franchise; whether of office, power, or wealth, obtained, or held, or used, or administered contrary to the public weal; whether such attempted monopolies relate to labor or capital; whether they originate with combined class rings of laborers or capitalists, or of caucuses of office-seekers, or of pretended administrators of justice through our courts and laws; whether they relate to railroads, or banks, or tariffs, or any other interest, either public or private. We abjure all such unjust class legislation and class administration, of whatever sort; and we invoke all the combined resources of both the common and the statute law to forever put an end to it on this continent.

Sixth—Monopoly by individuals, obtained by engrossing (or by making "corners" in the market, as it is now called, says Mr. Webster), is an offense prohibited by law. But a man has by natural right the exclusive power of vending his own produce or manufactures, and to retain that exclusive right is not a monopoly, in the meaning of the law. We believe that this, as well as all other fundamental principles of the common law, should be rigorously administered and enforced against all monopolies of whatsoever sort.

Seventh—While we admit the absolute necessity and extreme utility of our railroad and other corporations, and while we desire to deal with them only on terms of equal justice and fairness, we cannot but contemplate with peculiar solicitude the rise of a power in the Republic that, according to Mr. Frank Gilbert and other statisticians, has received in grants more land from the Republic, beside their rights of way, than there is in the six New England States, with New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois combined; that has received some $20,000,000 of money voted as a free gift from this State alone, besides rights of way, and untold losses in stocks, subscriptions paid and squandered, or sunk or lost; a power capable of almost instantaneous combination and co-operation under the unscrupulous leadership of some two or three men; a power already capable of buying whole States and Legislatures; a power that, notwithstanding all its public gifts and franchises, already takes the ground that it holds no other obligation to the public than simply to make as much money out of the people as it can, and that it will resist to the uttermost all laws compelling a recognition of any other obligation. We contemplate with peculiar alarm the rise of such a power over us, [illegible] and [illegible] our legislators and administrators of our courts of law to ena[illegible] enforce such laws as shall [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] other- [illegible] public [illegible] will do it; [illegible] we do not believe that the liberties of the continent or of the race can be preserved.

Eighth—This Republic has been twice well-nigh [illegible] of the fatal dogma, principles and not men—once under the lead of a faction of violence and blood, and now [illegible] cor- [illegible] wire-[illegible] scattered throughout all our villages and towns; in prosecuting our reform we declare ourselves for both principles and men, and, first of all, for men of unquestioned and unquestionable integrity, firmness, purity, and ability, in the whole record of their past lives, to select, administer, and apply our principles for us in our behalf. Such men we propose to select, irrespective of all antecedent party organizations or affiliations, and to remand all others, of whatever party, or by however many caucuses, conventions, and presses upheld and indorsed, and speedily as possible, to private life. We insist on clean hands and clear heads first of all, and on just principles as fast as we can get at them.

Ninth—We commit all the details and particular methods of the great, world-wide reform to the deliberation and care of the men whom we shall so elect.

Tenth—That, as soon as may be desirable, we will put a candidate in the field to represent our principles in this district.

WISCONSIN.

THE WORK OF ORGANIZATION.

A letter from Milwaukee says: While the Patrons of Husbandry have been rapidly spreading in this State those communities nearly or entirely foreign have not yet been organized. There are over 15,000 farmers in the State who speak the English language imperfectly or not at all, and numerous applications to the officers of the State Grange have impressed them with the necessity of making provisions for the convenience of these in the organization of Granges with manual and instructions in their own language. The first organization under this new arrangement was made about ten days ago at Eagle Point, Chippewa county, composed entirely of Germans, and by request deputies have been appointed to work in the heavy German settlements in Manitowoc and Ozaukee counties, and several such Granges will be put in operation in them during the coming two or three weeks. The first of these, in the latter county, will be started at Thiensville, on Saturday morning.

COLORADO.

THE MOVEMENT SPREADING.

Extract from a letter from Denver: "The grange movement is now fairly organized and under full headway. Last week a number of farmers, representing the northern part of the Territory, met at the quiet little mountain town of Bowder, and resolved that they would cut loose from the monopolists and extortionists, and in future make their own nominations. A State Grange was put in operation, and Mr. Tenney installed as Master. The movement is spreading rapidly, and nearly every agricultural district or town in Colorado has, or is about to have, its grange. The main grievance is transportation. The farmers complain that they are not only unjustly taxed for all the necessaries of life shipped from the East, but also on agricultural implements and other machinery essential to the development of this country."

KANSAS.

THE GRANGERS' PLOW COMPANY.

This enterprise, we understand, is going forward satisfactorily to a successful organization. When once in operation, as it soon will be, it will be to Kansas one of the most profitable industrial enterprises that has yet been projected. It is proposed to manufacture all classes of agricultural implements in the best manner and at grange prices, putting the improved machinery for farming within the reach of many who are now compelled to do without.

This establishment alone will be the means of saving hundreds of thousands of dollars to the State of Kansas every year, and put us forward in the facilities of production to a degree which will be beyond computation in dollars and cents. We trust every grange in the State will take an interest in the enterprise, and make it really what it is designed to be, a grange corporation, owned by and run in the interest of the Grangers of the State.—Lawrence Spirit of Kansas.

IOWA.

THAT SECEDING GRANGE.

The papers all over the country that oppose the order have gloated over what they thought meant disorder in the ranks, as indicated by a manifesto from Marion Grange in Iowa, in which it declared itself independent of both State and paternal authority. The fact about the matter, as we have it from the Master of the National Grange, is, that a month previous to the so-called withdrawal, the charter of their grange had been revoked for non-payment of dues and general ill behavior.—Prairie Farmer.

TEXAS.

THE MOVEMENT IN THE LONE STAR STATE.

A private letter from Walker county, Texas, informs us that the great tidal wave of the farmers' revolution has reached that distant section, and that granges are being rapidly organized. It is predicted that within twelve months three-fourths of the farmers of the Lone Star State will be enrolled in the Grand Army of the Grangers.

MAINE.

THE CAUSE IN THE PINE TREE STATE.

A letter from Bangor says: "The work of organizing granges in this State is going on briskly. It is expected that a State Grange will be formed within a few weeks."

MISCELLANEOUS.

IS MONEY KING?

The Rockford Anti-Monopolist has a good leader under the interrogatory, "Shall Money be King?" We have not room for the entire article, but we clip from it the opening paragraph:

"There can be no disguise so dense as to conceal the fact from the people that if the present absorption of small capitalists by the great corporations and by extremely wealthy individuals continues a few years longer, money will be absolute in this country. There is nothing, as affairs are now conducted, to prevent this consummation. Monopoly enjoys the protection of unequal laws. The great corporations receive protection, and are pampered and fattened by special legislation, while the man who has little or no capital, but who is working with all his might of will and muscle and brain, is forced to compete, at terrible odds, with the privileged few. The grievance of the people may be briefly stated to be, vile and venal legislation, subsidized railroads grown into giant monopolies, exorbitant and unequal taxation, arbitrary Boards of Trade, and a rotten financial system. These all result in reducing the income of the hard-working farmer and mechanic to the minimum, while those who have become successful, honestly or otherwise, can, by the power of their [illegible] legislation and [illegible] of [illegible] trade [illegible] and corn[illegible] and [illegible] of ways to wring money, without production, from the earnings of the people."

The writer speaks as follows of the existing condition of public affairs, and the duties of the producers:

"This is no holiday affair the people have got upon their hands. Money is the most potent force in the world. When organized as it now is, it is well-nigh invincible. As the monopolists sneeringly remark, the people are really an 'unorganized mob,' and cannot expect to make headway against capital without thorough organization and intelligent drill. They must remember that the evils under which the country is groaning fester in every department of power, from the General Government down to the town caucus. The evil being one of such compass, it is apparent that the remedy must be sweeping. It is as impossible to ignore politics in this contest as it would be to discard steam in the construction of a locomotive. The effort will fall dead and pulseless unless there is effort at purification and elevation of our politics. [illegible] ers or as mechanics and operatives, that neither of the classes alone is strong enough, numerically, to produce anything like a radical change in the administration of affairs? Such is the case. Neither the Grangers, nor the Sovereigns of Industry, nor the Farmers' clubs, nor workingmen's associations, as single organizations, can exercise any appreciable amount of force in this vast country of multifarious classes and interests. This ought to be understood. There must be a comprehensive unity of all the industrial population of the country. In order to accomplish this there must be a thorough State and national organization outside of all these respective associations, but embracing all of them whose functions shall be political in the best sense of the word. It should seek, by honest and pure elections of good men, to cleanse and revise our legislation to suit the exigencies of the times."

PROCTOR KNOTT ON THE MONOPOLIES.

Why, every avenue of active enterprise is crowded with them. In every conflict for material prosperity, whether on land or on the sea, in the mine or the manufactory, in the busy haunts of commerce or the desolate solitude of the forest, on every arena in which human industry or skill can be employed, we find them arraying iron sinews of a remorseless consolidated capital against the overmatched tissue of individual energy and unorganized labor. Turn which way we will, on every hand we are confronted by these soulless beings, these artificial, intangible, immoral monsters whom an Omnipotent God never created. If we take the wings of morning, and dwell in the uttermost part of the sea, lo! they are there. If we say, Surely darkness shall cover us, they are there; and I have no doubt if you would descend into hell, you would find their lobbyists crowding the corridor of pandemonium, asking a charter that would enable them to make a monopoly of the road that leads to perdition. Why, they have even invaded the sanctuary of the living God, and assumed to peddle out the religion of Jesus Christ. The rage for corporate privileges has actually got to that pass that Young Men's Christian Associations can not hold a prayer meeting until they have procured a charter from Congress, or some State Legislature, authorizing them to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, and to buy and sell real estate.

THE POSITION OF THE GRANGER.

When the Granger comes to vote, he concludes that he will vote, first, for his principles, and, secondly, the man he votes for, he must know is a man of integrity and in full sympathy with the principles and policies of government that the Grange and its influences have brought him. The Republican Granger will not vote for a railway monopoly man if forty Republican Conventions have indorsed him. The Democratic Granger will not vote for such a man, though Jackson should rise from the dead and tell him to vote the straight Democratic ticket. As the individual Granger acts, so will the grange as a body act.—Parson (Kansas) Sun.

CALL OF THE GRANGERS.

Ho! ye who nerve the toiling Earth,
  Sons of the soil! arise and give
The olden time another birth,
  A newer life that men may live.
Up with the plow! and down with the shams,
  That cursed the world with lying lives,
Break down the barrier that now dams
  The healthful current labor gives.

So shall you see a world unthralled,
  And man to man with honest grip
Of fervid hands with labor soiled,
  And words fresh from a truthful lip.
Oh! men; brave men! the serpent's grasp
  Is at a nation's throat to-day;
That serpent glitters, and we gasp
  A charmed but throttled life away.

Shall Fraud, the vampire, flout its wings
  And suck your life-blood while you sleep?
Oh! wake and break the spell that flings
  Its torpor through your veins, and keeps
Its silken bondage on your will
  Despite the cold and hidden strength
Too long repressed—too long—until
  You feel it must be freed at length.

Strain at the gyves upon your arms,
  And feel how brittle are the bonds
That wealth, with its seductive charms,
  Has knotted with repeated wrongs.
Up with the plow! and down with shams,
  That curse the world with lying lives,
Break down the barrier that now dams
  The healthful current labor gives.

JOIN THE GRANGE.

Join the grange, study its inner workings, and learn from your own observation that what you regard as abuses, are really abuses, before you accuse your fellow-farmers who are of the order, with countenancing unfair acts. In other words, you may be crying down that which in itself is really right, and of such a nature as should succeed in the interest of humanity itself.—American Patron.

Population of the British Empire.

The London Times has completed a careful review of the census of 1871 of the British Empire. There are 38 persons to a square mile in the Empire; 260 in the United Kingdom; 201 in India, and 1.41 in the colonies. It should be observed, however, that in some parts of India the density of population more than equals that of England. The Queen rules over 234,762,593 souls; her people dwell in 44,142,651 houses; the area of the lands they inhabit is not less than 7,769,449 square miles.

THE PRESS.

Speech of Congressman Lawrence, of Ohio, in the House of Representatives, in Reference to the Law Regulating The Circulation of Newspapers Through the Mails.

Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the third section of this bill, and opposed to all its other provisions. I will briefly state the reasons for the view I have taken. The third section provides:

> That from and after the passage of this act the following mail matter shall be allowed to pass free in the mail: First, newspapers, periodicals, and magazines reciprocally interchanged between publishers, and not exceeding sixteen ounces in weight, to be confined to a single copy of each publication; secondly, weekly newspapers, one copy to each actual subscriber residing or receiving the same within the county where the same is published; but carriers shall not be required to distribute such papers unless postage is paid upon them at the usual rates.

I am in favor of modifying this by striking out the word "weekly" and by inserting after the word "newspapers" the words "periodicals and magazines."

The object of this is to give a free circulation within the county where published for all periodicals, magazines and newspapers, whether weekly, daily, monthly, or otherwise. The section as it now stands applies only to "weekly" newspapers, and excludes from free circulation daily and monthly papers, magazines and periodicals.

As a general rule, special and exclusive privileges should not be granted to any profession or class of citizens. If the free circulation of newspapers in the county where published were a privilege for the benefit of publishers alone, I know of no principle on which it could be justified; but it is not. It is not for their benefit at all.

The Constitution very wisely provides that—

> Congress shall make no law * abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press.

This is based on the idea that it is the right of every citizen to speak and publish his sentiments subject to no restraint except a responsibility for the abuse of the privilege in a mode which results in wrong and damage to others. It is based on the idea also that a republican government cannot exist except by the general diffusion of knowledge.

Almost every State in the Union recognizes the wisdom, the absolute necessity, of this, by maintaining common schools, supported at the public expense, open to all the children thereof. Without this a republican government cannot endure. Where the people are the source of power they must be intelligent to secure a wise exercise of the power. The same principle which justifies common schools, supported at the public expense, also justifies the free circulation of newspapers and periodicals within appropriate limits.

I will not pronounce any eulogy on the press. Fortunately it needs none now. Common schools, the press, and public addresses of every kind are the great educational, moral, political, and religious instructors of the people.

The press now reaches almost all the people, and on grounds of public policy it deserves all reasonable encouragement. It is for the benefit of and open alike to all the people. It is not an exclusive privilege or benefit for any. It is a privilege which will be equally enjoyed by nearly all our citizens. It should be enjoyed by all. He who will not enjoy it cannot complain if others do.

It has been said that our city papers is opposed to the measure now under consideration, while it is demanded by the so-called country press. There is no entire unanimity of either city or country press on this subject. The proposed measure will operate equally for all, or as nearly so as may be possible.

The large and widely-circulated city press has the advantage of having newspapers carried in the mails broadcast all over the land, hundreds and thousands of miles, at no greater cost than is by existing law charged for carrying a country newspaper within the county where published. This gives to the city press a great advantage. If the law shall be changed so as to allow a free circulation within the county of publication, the whole press will alike enjoy its advantage. And this will give a free delivery from the postoffice at the place of publication.

I will not draw any invidious distinctions between the city and country press. The whole newspaper press, city and country, has a place, a value which cannot be estimated or dispensed with.

The press will very often represent the sentiment and interest of its immediate locality. But this is not always so. The New York Tribune for thirty years represented the protective-tariff sentiment of the whole country. It was in a sense local. So there are many city papers wielding a powerful and salutary influence, broad and universal, regardless of locality, and aiming only at the public good. These ought not to be disparaged; no effort should be made to bring them into disrepute. But the so-called country press does as a general rule reflect the sentiments and interests of the people, and it deserves the confidence, attention, and care of the people and the Government.

In some localities the country press cannot be maintained without the aid of the measure now before us. We should not withhold from it the aid now proposed.

But the other provisions of the bill rest on a totally different principle, and to them I am opposed. Their object is in effect and to a limited extent to create a privilege equivalent in some respects to the recently abolished franking privilege.

The second section of the bill makes this provision:

> That from and after the passage of this act all public documents, books, or publications, and all printed matter procured or published and issued by authority of Congress, or of either House thereof, and all packages of seeds, cuttings, roots, and scions, furnished by the Agricultural Department under authority of law, having first been stamped as is hereinafter provided and directed, shall be allowed to pass in the mails of the United States, to any citizen thereof, or person residing therein, without charge.

I know no reason why documents generally should be published at the expense of all the people and then distributed to a few.

The usage which has heretofore prevailed in publishing documents by authority of Congress has not provided them for one in twenty of the voters of the United States. Why should twenty voters be taxed for the favored one who receives the document? I know of no just principle on which this can be done. The practice adopted in England is one which we may well follow.

Let Congress order the publication of such documents as are essential to public information and the general interests of the country as cannot be published by private enterprise, and then let every citizen have the right to purchase them at cost. This will give all that the public interest requires. It will tax no man for the benefit of another. It will afford the means of information to all. It will give the press access to all desired information, and the press will give it to the whole people. This will give new importance to the press and a demand for wider newspaper circulation.

I know it will be said that the farmers demand the annual volume of the Agricultural Report. Let them have it. Successful agriculture requires this. Let it be published so that all may procure it.

But we must remember the agriculturists of this country demand and deserve something more substantial than a free volume annually of the Agricultural Report to one in twenty of their number. They want more and cheaper means of transporting their products to market. They want legislation which shall in future relieve them from the enormous exactions which may be imposed upon them by monopolies operating under patent rights, so far as legislation can operate on patents hereafter issued. Rights already acquired cannot be interfered with.

They want that the Agricultural Department of the Government shall ascertain in advance, as early as practicable each year, the probable amount of all products and the probable demand, and that this knowledge should be made accessible to them, so that they may know the value of their product, and be able to demand and receive it without its being too largely absorbed by dealers between producers and consumers.

They want legislation which will favor the development of the agricultural and mineral resources of the country and multiply manufacturing enterprise, and make a home market, as far as practicable, without the cost of unnecessary transportation.

These are some, not all, of their wants, and they will not be satisfied with only free Agriculural Reports, nor with any benefit their franking privilege could give. The demands are more extensive and of a different character. It becomes us to consider these, and do whatever justice and the public interest requires.

Sumner's Illness and Intense Sufferings.

Dr. Brown-Sequard, the eminent surgeon, who attended Senator Sumner during the last years of his long illness, delivered a lecture the other day in New York, in the course of which he said:

When Mr. Sumner first came under my care, he was suffering from a derangement of some fibres of the nerves. As you all know, he had received a blow upon the head. His spine, as he was sitting, was bent in two places. His bent spine had produced the effect of a sprain, and when I saw him in Paris he had recovered altogether from the first effects of the blow. He had them two troubles; one was that he could not make use of his brain at all. He could not read a newspaper or write a letter. He was in a fearful state. It seemed to him as if his head would explode, as if there was some great force in it pushing the parts away from each other. Indeed, his emotions were fearful to me. I told him the best plan of treatment would consist in the application of moxas, the most painful application to the skin. I asked him if he would not take cloroform to dull the pain or remove it altogether. I will always remember his impressive assent when I said that. He said: "Doctor, if you can say positively that I will derive just as much benefit if I take chloroform as if I do not, then I will take chloroform; but if there is to be any degree whatever of greater amelioratian in case I don't take chloroform, then I shall not take it." I didn't have the courage to deceive him. I told him there would be more good if he didn't take chloroform, so I had to submit him to the martyrdom of the greatest suffering that can be inflicted by medical practice, and burned him. I thought that, after the torture of the first time, he would afterwards use chloroform; but for five times after, in accordance with his own determination, the operation was performed without it. A never saw a patient before that would submit to such a thing. The only explanation for his conduct was this. At that time he was much abused. Report had reached him that some of his countrymen at home considered that he was amusing himself in Paris, pretending to be ill, and he wanted to return as quickly as possible. A few days, therefore, were of great importance to him; so he passed through all that terrible and most intense suffering, the greatest I have ever had the misfortune to inflict, be it upon man or animal. I have mentioned it on this account, only to show what kind of a man he was.

Fate of Modest Men.

The world generally takes men at their own apparent estimate of themselves. Hence, modest men never attain the same consideration which bustling, forward men do. It has not time or patience to inquire rigidly, and it is partly imposed upon and carried away by the man who vigorously claims its regards. The world, also, never has two leading ideas about any man. There is always a remarkable unity in its conception of the characters of individuals. If an historical person has been cruel in a single degree, he is set down as cruel and nothing else, although he may have had many good qualities, all not equally conspicuous. If a literary man is industrious in a remarkable degree, the world speaks of him as only industrious, though he may be also very ingenious.

A benevolent and beautiful young lady in Georgia recently allowed 300 gentlemen to kiss her at 25 cents each, and sent the proceeds to the orphan asylum.

DON'T SLAM THE GATE.

[The following bit of sound advice, with the above title, is evidently from one who has had practical experience in the matter, and ought to be taken seriously to heart by eligible young men who are addicted to the habit this young lady so earnestly desires corrected:]

Now, Harry, pray don't laugh at me;
  But when you go so late,
I wish you would be careful, dear,
  To never slam the gate;

For Bessie listens every night,
  And so does teasing Kate,
To tell me, next day, what o'clock
  They heard you slam the gate.

'Twas nearly ten last night, you know
  But how 'tis very late—
(We've talked about so many things)—
  O, do not slam the gate!

For all the neighbors hearing it,
  Will say our future fate
We've been discussing; so I beg
  You will not slam the gate!

For, though it is all very true,
  I wish that they would wait,
To canvass our affairs, until—
  Well—pray don't slam that gate!

At least, not now. But, by-and-by,
  When in "our home" I wait
Your coming, I shall always like
  To hear you slam the gate!

For, whether you go out or in,
  At early hours, or late,
The whole world will not tease me then
  About that horrid gate!

Humor.

A noisy piece of crockery—The cup that cheers.

A young lady, talking about wigs, said she would rather dye than wear one.

"My wife," said a critic, "is the most even-tempered person in the world—she's always mad."

Women like to have husbands named William, for then they can always have a Will of their own.

When is a young man's right arm like unto gospel preaching? When it makes glad the waist places.

A man who wanted to be a minister said he believed he had been called "to labor in the Lord's barnyard."

Vassar Instructress—"Miss A., give an example of doubtful affirmative?" Miss A. (innocently)—"Ask papa."

What is that which the rich man wants, the poor man has, the miser spends, and the spendthrift saves? Nothing.

Siam is an ungallant country. There the first wife may be divorced, and after that every wife may be sold for cash, or traded for a yellow dog.

"Building castles in Spain, Mr. S.?" said the landlady to Spicer, who was thoughtfully regarding his breakfast cup. "No, ma'am," said Spicer, "only looking over my grounds in Java."

Unremitting.—A gentleman was warmly eulogizing the constancy of an absent husband in the presence of his loving wife. "Yes, yes," assented she, "he writes letters full of the agony of affection, but he never remits me any money." "I can understand that," said the other, "for I know his love to be unremitting."

We find the following touching verse in the dignified Baltimore American:

"The train that brought his wife came down
  And then went sweeping on,
But, woe to him, his wife had brought
  His mother-in-law along.
He lived, for life may well be borne
  Ere sorrow breaks its chain,
But this last streak just settled him—
  He never smiled again."

Statistics of the Globe.

The earth is inhabited by about 1,300,000,000 of inhabitants, viz.: 360,000,000 of the Caucasian race, 190,000,000 of the Ethiopian, 450,000,000 the Mongolian, 200,000,000 of the Malay race, and 1,000,000 of the American Indian.

All these respectively speak 5,044 languages, and profess 1,000 different religions.

The amount of deaths per annum is 33,333,332, or 91,956 per day, 3,730 per hour or 60 per minute, or one per second.

The average duration of life throughout the globe is thirty-three years. One-fourth of the population dies before the seventh year, and one-half before the seventeenth. Out of 10,000 persons only one reaches his hundredth year, only one in 500 his eightieth, and one in 100 his sixty-fifth.

Married people live longer than unmarried ones, and a tall man is likely to live longer than a short one. Until the fiftieth year, women have a better chance of life than men; but beyond that period the chances are equal.

Sixty-five persons out of one thousand marry. The months of June and December are those in which marriages are most frequent.

Children born in spring are generally stronger than those born in other seasons.

Births and deaths chiefly occur in the night.

The number of men able to bear arms is but one-eighth of the population.

When Children Should Begin School.

In a paper on the sanitary aspects of primary education, read recently by Dr. R. J Sullivan, before the New York Academy of Medicine, an important suggestion occurs in reference to the earliest age at which a pupil should be admitted in our schools. He contends that seven years is a minimum age, not because mental exertion would be injurious to healthy intellectual growth, but because school life under its present hygienic surroundings is very unfavorable to physical development.

In other words it is to be understood that, although a pupil is capable of reasonable understanding and a limited amount of intellectual development prior to the seventh year, such education should be given it out of school and without the usual restraint. A fact that renders Dr. Sullivan's views valuable is that he was for several years medical inspector of public schools.

The Chimney.

Jack has a very red nose. He does not drink, but his Bardolphian nose makes people think he does. Jack has fallen in love with a pretty widow. The other day he was making desperate love to her, and exclaimed, "My heart burns with love for you." The widow replied, "Your heart burns with love, eh? I should fancy the fire started in your nose." Jack was not abashed. He replied, "Never mind my nose; that is simply the chimney on fire."

What is Grange?

It is an organization of Farmers.

It has for its object, improvement.

It is designed to elevate and enlighten the farmer.

It would qualify him for his God given profession.

It aims to bring about these objects by associations.

It unites those of the same calling into one grand brotherhood and sisterhood for the protection of all.

It establishes in every neighborhood a lecture room, (which is a Grange itself) in which important truths are unfolded.

It disseminates valuable information that all may be benefitted.

It collects as well as disseminates.

It is an intellectual institution

It calls for an exercise of the mind.

It brings the mind in contact with mind, and by this contact others are illuminated and improved as by friction.

It draws out latent talent.

It makes active and tangible what has been before dormant and unseen.

It shows the importance of cultivating brains as well as soil.

It demonstrates the fact that rich harvest are developed by brain culture as by soil culture.

The Grange is a social institution. Father, mother, sister, brother, neighbor and friend united by strong ties; in one common good. It makes each feel an interest in all, and all in each; a transfer of kind, home government of family to that of a neighborhood uniting those who have been heretofore strangers.

It heals up the wounds of the unfortunate.

It administers comfort to the sick, and relief to the distressed. It is a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless.

It makes every neighborhood as a kind and effectionate family.

It is a financial institution.

It seeks to obtain for its members the highest price for its products.

It looks to the good of all. It learns how, and when, and where the best prices can be obtained.

It entirely dispenses with the middle man who has absorbed the chief profits from his toil.

It aims to reform abuses of every character where they oppress; demanding from labor unjust and illegitimate claims. It would reform every illegitimate claims. It would reform every species of villainy now so prevalent in our legislative bodies, and by its organization no demagogue can ride over the people with wide mouth declamation, of principles, which his character, as a man, does not sustain as he will certainly be weighed and found wanting.

It claims the right to discuss every question affecting the interest of the people, and disclaiming all control, religious or political, over any member of its body.

It will act uniformly in the interest of the people against monopoly and oppression let it present itself as it may or indorsed by any party in existence.

THE FLOOD AND THE ARK.

A Hardshell Methodist Sermon on Nature and Noah.

From the Independent.

In the autumn of 1830 I attended a Methodist camp meeting in the interior of Georgia, and heard a sermon which I have never been able to forget or describe.

The speaker had just been licensed, and it was his first sermon. In person he was small, bullet-headed, of a fair, sandy complexion, and his countenance was indicative of sincerity and honesty. He was taking up the Bible in regular order for the first time in his life, and had gotten as far as the hirtory of Noah, the ark, the flood, &c. Besides, "just before his conversion he had been reading Goldsmith's 'Animated Nater,' and the other two together, by the aid and assistance of the Sperit, had led him into a powerful train of thinking as he stood at his work bench, day in and day out." The text was: "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be," and he broke out in the following strains:

"Yes, my brethren, the heavens of the windows was opened-ah, and the floods of the g-r-e-a-t deep kivered the waters-ah, and there Shem, and there Ham, and here Japeth-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"And there was the elephant-ah, that g-r-e-a-t animal-ah, of which Goldsmith describes in his 'Animated Nater-ah, what is as big as a house-ah, and his bones is as big as a tree-ah, depending some-what on the size of the tree ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah. And the heavens of the windows was opened-ah. and the floods of the g-r-e-a-t deep kivered the waters-ah, and there was Shem, and there was Ham, and there was Japeth-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"And there was the hippopotamus-ah, that g-r-e-a-t animal-ah of which Goldsmith describes in his 'Animated Nater'-ah what has a g-r-e-a-t horn-ah a-stickin' straight up out of his forward-ah six feet long, more or less-ah, depending somewhat on the length of it-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"And there was the giraffe-ah my bretherin, that ill-contrived reptile of which Goldsmith describes in his 'Animated Nater'-ah, whose forelegs is twenty-five feet long-ah, depending somewhat on the length of 'em-ah, and a neck so long that he can eat hay off the top of a barn-ah depending somewhat on the hithe of the barn-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah. And the heavens of the windows opened-ah and the floods of the great deep kivered the waters-ah and there was Shem and there was Ham, and there was Japeth-ah- a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"And there was the zebra, my bretherein-ah that b-e-a-u-t-i-f-u-l animal of which Goldsmith describes in his 'Animated Nater'-ah, what has three hun stripes a-runnin' righ straight around his body-ah, more or less, depending somewhat on the number of stripes-ah and nary two stripes alike-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"Then there was the anaconder-ah, that g-r-e-a-t sarpent of which Goldsmith describes in his 'Animated Nater'-ah, what can swallow six oxen at a meal-ah, provided his appetite don't call for any less-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah. And the heavens of the windows was opened-ah, and the floods of the deep kivered the waters-ah, and there was Shem, and there was Ham, and there a Japeth-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"And there was the lion, brethren-ah, what is the king of beasts, accordin' to Scripter-ah, and who, as St. Paul says-ah, prowls around of a night a roarin' like the devil-ah, a seeking if he can't catch somebody-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

"And there was the antelope-ah, my bretherin, that frisky little critter-ah, of which Goldsmith describes in his 'Animated Nater'-ah, what can jump seventy-foot straight up-ah and twice that distance down-ah, provided his legs will carry him that fur-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah. And the heavens of the windows was opened-ah and the floods of the great deep kivered the waters-ah, and there was Shem, and there was Ham, and there was Japeth-ah, a-l-l a gwine into the ark-ah.

'But time would fail me, my brethen, to describe all the animals that went into the ark-ah. Your patience and my strength would give out before I had got half way through-ah. We talk, my brethren about the faith of Abraham and the patience of Job-ah; but it strikes me they didn't go much ahead of old Noer-ah. It took a right smart chance o' both together up all that gopher-wood and pitch and other truck for to build that craft-ah. I am a sort of carpenter myself, and have some idea of the job-ah. But to hammer, and saw, and maul, and split away on that one thing a hundred and twenty year-ah, an lookin' for his pay in another world-ah—I tell ye, my bretherin, if the lord had a sot Job at that, it's my opinion he would a tuck his wife's advice inside of fifty year-ah. Besides, no doubt, his righteous soul was vexed, every day, hand runnin', with the filthy communications of the blasphemous set that was always a loaferin' and a saunterin' around-ah, a pickin' up his tools and a misplacin' 'em and a callin' him an old fool, or something worse-ah; and, to cap the climax, he was a preacher and had that ungodly gineration on his hands every Sunday-ah. But the Lord stood by him and seed him through the job-ah; and when everything was ready he didn't send Noer out to scrimmage and scour and hunt all over the wild world for to git up the critters and varmints that he wanted saved-ah. They all came to his hand of their own accord. and Noer only had to head 'em in and fix 'em around in their places-ah. Then he gethered up his own family, and the lord shut him in, and the heavens of the windows was opened-ah.

"But, my bretherin. Noer had use for his patience after this-ah. Think what a time he must a had a feedin' and a waterin' and a cleanin' out after such a crowd-ah. Some of 'em accordin' to Goldsmith's 'Animated Nater-ah, was carnivorous, and wanted fresh meat-ah; and some were herbivorous, and wanted vegitable food-ah; and some was wormiverous, and swallowed things alive and whole-ah; and he had to feed everything accordin' to his nature. Hence, we view, my bretherin-ah, as the nater of the animals wasn't altered by goin' into the ark-ah, some of 'em would roar, and howl, and bark, and bray, and squeal, and blat the whole indurin' night-ah, a drivin sleep from [illegible] at the first streak o' daylight, the last hoof of 'em would set up a noise accordin to his nater-ah, and the bulls of Bashan weren't nowhere-ah. I've often wondered how their women stood it. Scripter is silent on this point-ah; but I think I know of some that would a been vapory and nervous under sich circumstances-ah, and in an unguarded moment might a said somethin' besides their prayers-ah.

"My brethren, one more word for old Noer-ah and I will draw to a close-ah. After the out-beatin' time he had first and last, for so many hundred year-ah, if he did, by accident or otherwise take a leetle too much wine on one occasion-ah, I think less ort to a been said about it-ah. Besides I think he was entitled to one spree-ah, as he made the wine hisself, and accordin' to Scripter it makes the heart o' man glad-ah.

"My bretherin' as it was in the days of Noer-ah, so shall the coming of the son of man be-ah. The world will never be drowned agin-ah. It will be sot a fire, and burnt up root and branch with a fervient heat-ah Oh! what will wretched ondone sinners do on that orful day-ah? They won't feel fit for to live, nor to die-ah. They will be put to their wit's end, and knock, and straddle around in every direction-ah; For all at once, my bretherin-ah, they will behold the heavens a darkenin'-ah, the seas a roarin'-ah, the tombs a bustin'-ah and the mountains a meltin-ah; and everything, I think, will be in a confused and unsettled state."

An anecdote is told of Chief Justice Marshall, evincing his ready humor. The old gentleman, like Miles Standish, was very fond of always doing everything for himself and objected strongly to any assistance being rendered him. One day, wishing to consult some work of reference he entered the law library and proceeded to mount the steps and draw out a book from an upper shelf. The books being tightly packed together refused to leave one without the other, and the chief justice not noticing this, in withdrawing the one he wished, dislodged the whole row, which came down upon him, felling him to the floor. The librarian instantly ran to the rescue, inquiring if the venerable gentleman was hurt, and offering him assistance in rising

"Let me alone," said the chief justice. "Let me alone, I'm a little stunned for the moment—that's all. I have laid down the law often, but this is the first time that the law has ever laid me down.

The New York newsboys have opened their theatre again and the policemen have had to retreat. Intellect always triumphs.

A Sad Story.

A little boy having heard a beautiful story about a little boy and a hatchet, and how, because the little boy wouldn't tell a lie, he in time got to be President of the United States, was very much impressed by it. Now it so happened that on the last day of march he was just ten years old, and his father asked him what he would like to have for a birthday present. Very naturally the boy's answer was, "A little hatchet, if you please, papa."

The father bought him a little hatchet that very day, and the boy was so delighted that he actually took it to bed with him.

Early the next morning he got up, dressed himself, took his little hatchet and went out into the garden. There as luck would have it, the first thing that caught his eye was his father's favorite cherry tree. "My eyes!" exclaimed the little boy to himself, "what a time my father would make if a fellow were to slip up and cut that cherry tree a little!" It was a wicked thought, for it led him into temptation. There was the tree—tall, straight and fair—standing invitingly before him—just the thing for a sharp little hatchet. And there was the hatchet—strong, sharp, and shining—just the thing for a favorite cherry tree. In another instant the swift strokes of an axe was heard in the still morning air, and before long a small boy was seen running toward the house. His father met him at the door.

"My boy, what noise was that I heard just now? Surely you have not been at my favorite cherry tree!"

The boy, stood proudly before him, but with downcast eyes and flushing cheeks.

"Father," he said, "I cannot tell a lie. That cherry tree is ——"

"Say no more," said the father, extending his arms. "You have done wrong, my son; and that was my favorite tree; but you have spoken the truth. I forgive you. Better to ——"

This was too much. The boy rushed into his fathers arms.

"Father," he whispered, "April fool! I haven't touched the cherry tree; but I 'most chopped that apple stump to pieces."

"You young rascal; you!" cried the father, do you mean to say you haven't chopped my cherry tree? April fool your old father! Will you? Take off your coat, sir!"

With a suppressed sob, that little boy obeyed. Then, shutting his eyes he felt his fathers hand descend upon his shrinking form.

"My son," said the father, solemnly as he stroked the little shoulder, "it is the First of April Go thy way.

Pride.—In walking leisurely down Fourth street, one day last week, we met three proud men. The first was proud of his money. He came Logansport a few years ago with less than one hundred dollars. Circumstances have made him wealthy. He has but little brain, and his soul is too small to invoice. By denying himself and family the comforts of life; by holding on with miser-like tenacity to real estate purchased before the war, and by other means, adsolutely disreputable, he has amassed a fortune.

The second is proud of his intellect He is a close student, and his mind is stored with treasures from the world of letters. He drinks rich wine from the fountain of knowledge and plucks rare jewels from the realms of thought; but he has no heart. His soul never goes out in sympathy for the suffering He does not feed the hungry, clothe the naked, or bid the sorrowing hope. He turns a deaf ear to the cries of the orphan, and shuts out the sunlight from his home.

The third is proud of his physical strength. He is a perfect Hercules, He never exerts his powers in the defence of the weak, or interposes his strong arm to protect the innocent. He is course, brutal and ignorant.

These were the only proud men we met in that short walk; but they are fair samples of proud men everywhere. God pity them.—Logansport Pharos.

He is expected early and bright,
By the widow across the valley.

Old enough, my people, is he,
Long ago to have left such folly;
But as wise as a sage is she,
And as a maiden bright and jolly;

Gay and beaming, good and kind,
Laden with forty winters only,
She is a light to his gloomy mind,
Making his downward steps less lonely.

Back in the same opinions clad,
Each the same good future seeing,
They in the main have seldom had
Even the sport of disagreeing.

But as the Deacon wends his way,
Under the sky's fast dark'ning azure,
He is pondering of the day
When he incurred her first displeasure.

Talking concerning life and death,
And the importance of conversion,
She was telling of her great faith
In the ordinance of immersion.

And, as men in an evil hour
Oft will do, he feebly doubted;
But her argumentative power
Soon beheld him completely routed.

Till he asserted, if folks desire,
Such baptism, they might receive it;
But for it's ever being required,
He wasn't fool enough to believe it.

Then the widow had bridled, and said,
Till he had known such saving leaven,
She wouldn't take it upon her head
To marry the best man out of heaven.

So the Deacon, as he walks on,
Grieves that such ideas have got her;
For he has, in the long years gone,
Kept his head above the water;

And he feels that the rich reward
Of this widow and her caressing,
For a sacrifice to the Lord,
Hardly would merit heavenly blessing.

But, most stubborn of all, his will—
Men's most troublesome attendant—
Bids him cling to his old creed still,
Lest the widow get the ascendant.

So he sums his conclusion of it,
After the whole affair rehearsing:
Widow or not, I'll ne'er submit
To her doctrines nor her immersing."

Now from a bridge, where lazily flows
Water full six feet below him,
Gone is a plank, and down he goes,
And for a moment the waves o'er flow him.

But lo! the widow upon the shore,
Reaches a good stout stick unto him!
And he, in a minute's time or more,
Lands, with the cold chills creeping through him.

Quick she led his unto her house,
Dried him by every good exertion,
And then remarked to him, sly mouse,
That he was a convert to immersion.

Vain his objections—vain each doubt;
Vainly he argued, mixed and changed it;
No odds how it came about,
She insisted, the Lord arranged it.

And full many a marital draught,
Bitter and sweet, the Deacon drank up,
Ere he discovered that, creature of craft,
She was the one who pulled the plank up!

ONE MORE DRESS.

BY OLIVER OPTIC.

"To think of wearing the same dress to church Sunday after Sunday!" exclaimed Mrs. Bradley, a young married lady, to Mrs. Green, her mother.

"Why not, Sarah?"

"Folks will think it is the only one I have which is fit to wear to meetings."

"It is, isn't it?"

"I know it, but I don't care about all the world knowing it."

"You would not make all the world believe that which is not true, would you?"

"I don't care; I mean to have a new silk immediately."

"But, Sarah, your husband cannot afford it."

"Yes, he can; at least we can curtail our expenses in something else."

"What?"

"Well, I don't know; we could make our provision bill less."

Mrs. Green shook her head.

"I don't think there is any need of our having beefsteaks and mutton-chops every morning for breakfast. We never had such things at home, you know. I would not give a straw to have so much meat."

"But James depends upon it."

"I know it; yet for the sake of letting me appear a little better on Sunday, he would willingly dispense with it."

"Would you be willing to ask him the question?" said Mrs. Green.

"Yes; why not?"

"You would ask him to go without his breakfast in order that you may have an extra silk dress?"

"Go without his breakfast, mother! I never once thought of such a thing," said Mrs. Bradley, with a disturbed look.

"But you know it amounts to the same thing to him. He was brought up in the country where he had meat for breakfast, and he does not think he could make a meal without it."

"We will not say anything more about that then," replied the young wife, who, I beg the reader to believe, would not willingly have deprived her husband of any real comfort. "How do you suppose Mrs. Farmer gets so many dresses?"

"I don't know."

"She seems to come out with a new one almost every Sunday. She must have at least half a dozen silks and berages."

"I hope her husband can afford them," replied Mrs. Green, shaking her head significantly.

"He is not any better off than James. They have the same salary, and in the same concern."

"A thousand dollars in these hard times will not go a great way with a man who has a family to support, especially if his wife has a great many silk dresses."

"But James saves two or three hundred of his salary every year."

"Every young man ought to save something."

"Do you suppose John Farmer does?"

"I think not, at the rate his wife dresses."

"But it is too hard to wear the same dress every Sunday. If I had one more, I could get along very well."

"You would want another still."

"No, I shouldn't, mother."

"There is no end to it when you undertake to follow all these absurdities. When I was a girl, I had only one dress to wear to meeting, and that was only a calico."

"The times have changed."

"Changed for the worse. I am sure no such vanity as flaunting out in a different dress every Sunday ever entered a girl's head, especially girls whose fathers were not independently rich."

"Nobody thinks of wearing the same dress all the time. Only one more—"

"One is enough, Sarah. If you let such silly notions get into your head, you will never know where to stop. You could easily spend all your husband's salary in dress, and then not keep up with the demands of the times."

"I am sure James can afford me a new silk. It will not cost much."

"Do not think of it, child. Be prudent, careful and contented, and when James is rich, you may do different."

Mrs. Bradley was satisfied, after considerable more demonstration on the part of her mother, that she could get along without the new silk. But it was hard to give up the idea of competing with Mrs. Farmer, whose husband was no better off than hers.

CHAPTER II.

James Bradley and John Farmer were clerks in a large house in the city, and both resided in a neat little cottage in the suburbs. Their fortunes had been thus far very much the same; and perhaps they might have continued the same through life, but for the different character of their wives.

Mrs. Bradley had been brought up to live within her means. A careful mother, who realized the responsibility of her position, had rigidly inculcated the principles of a sound economy, and trained her up to habits of prudence and thrift. And all these practical qualities she had brought with her into her domestic relations, when she embarked in a new sphere of life.

Mrs. Farmer, on the other hand, though her parents were no better off in the world, had brought her up to be a lady—to wear fine dresses, and play the piano in the parlor. Her knowledge and experience of household duties was very narrow and superficial, and her husband's thousand dollars a year would hardly support them. They were obliged, in order to dress her as her habits and wishes required, to "scrimp" in many of the real comforts of life. The provision bill was kept at the lowest possible figure. Mrs. Farmer thought beefsteaks were unhealthy in the morning, and John found it necessary to be of her opinion. Six dollars a season for ice would buy a new bonnet; hence ice was the cause of a great many complaints that prevailed in summer.

The comforts of living were sacrificed to the luxuries of dress. Beefsteak at twenty cents a pound was unhealthy; but new bonnets at ten dollars a piece were necessaries of life. Mutton-chops at fifteen cents a pound caused the dyspepsia, but silk dresses at a dollar and a half a yard, were not only healthy, but indispensable to the happiness of the lady.

All the salary was spent—was intended to be spent—and the only question was whether it should be put in the body or on the body. The habit of extravagance was there, and all the thrift and economy which Mrs. Farmer knew, was to save money for new dresses.

She and Mrs. Bradley were on intimate terms with each other, and, as may be readily supposed, the subject of dress was frequently discussed.

A few days after the conversation of Mrs. Bradley with her mother, her neighbor was making a "call." Mrs. Farmer could talk of nothing but dress. It was the study of her life—what she lived for—what she most hoped for in the future. As usual, the conversation immediately degenerated into dress—it was all Mrs. Farmer knew.

"How do you like my new raw silk?" asked she, after several adroit passes, in order to introduce this matter.

"It is very pretty, indeed. You come out in a new dress almost every Sunday, Ellen," replied Mrs. Bradley.

"I wish I could."

"I wonder how many nice dresses you have in your wardrobe?"

"I have only one that is fit to wear," replied Mrs. Farmer, indifferently.

"Only one!"

"That is fit to wear anywhere."

"You have at least three silks."

"All old-fashioned—made last fall—and all out of date. I tried to make John give me a berage, but he would not."

"I am sure if I had your dresses, I should think I were a Princess."

"Pshaw! If my husband don't give me another next week, I shan't go to church but once a month."

"If I had your dresses, Ellen, I should not think of another, for a year, at least."

"Why don't you dress better, Sarah?"

"I can't afford to do so."

"Pooh!"

"My mother thinks I dress well enough."

"Why, you have worn the same dress to meeting every Sunday for a year."

"And probably shall wear it every Sunday for the next year."

"I wouldn't, if I were you."

"I can't afford a new dress every month. I was speaking the other day about having one more dress, but mother said so much against it, that I gave up the idea."

"Tied to your mother's apron-string yet!" sneered Mrs. Farmer.

"I am too thankful to get my mother's advice to reject it."

"But get the raw-silk, do! It will become you so well; and then we shall have a little respite from that everlasting fawn color."

"No, I have made up my mind not to have it."

"Put the money into your stomachs instead, and get the dyspepsia into the bargain," said Mrs. Farmer, as she took her leave.

CHAPTER III.

The "long run" tells the story; so let us step forward a few years, and look into the counting-room of our clerks.

James and John are still there, and occupying the same relative positions. Their salaries have been gradually raised, and for three years they have been the recipient of the handsome sum of fourteen hundred a year.

The 1st of January is at hand. Harris & Co. are about to dissolve, and the senior, who has made a princely fortune—and is a queer old fellow at that—is about to form a new co-partnership.

"Boys," says old Mr. Harris, "you have been with me a long while; I suppose you want to get ahead, and become merchants?"

The "boys" acknowledged the "corn," and John Farmer winked significantly at his associates.

"But," continued the patriarchal merchant, "to get ahead in business requires certain qualities of mind and body. One must be industrious, economical, and wide awake, as well as shrewd. Driving fast horses, eating champagne suppers, and sucking mint juleps, do not furnish the necessary schooling for a merchant. I won't preach, however. In one word: the first of January is close upon us. Those of you who can put two thousand dollars into the concern, shall draw a sixth of the profits! That's all."

The old fellow turned on his heel, picked up his hat and left the counting-room.

James Bradley was the only one of the number—four in all—who could "face the music." The other three had perfected themselves in the art of driving fast horses, drinking sherry-cobblers, and eating good dinners; which Mr. Harris had hinted was not a necessary qualification for one of his partners.

John Farmer's surplus had been spent in giving his wife "one more dress." As his salary was increased from year to year, "one more dress" was the oftener required. Beefsteaks, mutton-chops, and ice were as unhealthy and dyspeptic in their tendency as ever; and yet Mrs. Farmer, from the costliness of her apparel, might be mistaken for the lady of a nabob.

* * *

Five years more. Old Mr. Harris is dead; and, though the firm is still Harris & Co., James Bradley is the senior partner. He has already made a competence, and does a very large business.

John Farmer left the concern three years ago. It was supposed because he could not endure the thought of being a clerk under his former companion. He left Boston and went to New York, but his unthrifty habits followed him. His wife wore the greater part of his salary on her back; and disheartened by his ill success, he had increased the number of sherry-cobblers in his per diem allowance to such an extent, that he had been discharged from his place. Not being able to get another situation in New York, he reached Boston in straightened circumstances. He was equally unfortunate there. The toddy blossoms on his nose were against him; his coat was rusty, and his breath smelt like the fog from a three-cent grogshop. His last dollar was spent, and his wife was paying a "visit" to a friend who had repeatedly urged her to spend a week with her, and whom she would have been sorry to disappoint!

He was reduced to the last extremity. His old friend and associate, James Bradley, was now in affluence, and able to assist him. Mortifying as was the thought, there was scarcely any other alternative but to apply to him for a situation.

James was shocked when he recognized him. Sherry-cobblers, a thriftless wife, "one more dress," and the want of encouragement, had done their work.

"Is there a vacancy in your counting-room, Mr. Bradley?" asked he in humble tones.

"There is not, John, but I will create a place for you," replied the liberal merchant, as he realized the situation of his former associate.

"Thank you," replied John, a tear starting to his eye, at this unexpected kindness—the first he had experienced anywhere, not excepting his own house, for many and many a weary month. James took him home to dine with him, and John had an opportunity to contrast his own circumstances with those of his thrifty friend. He was sad at heart—in short he was a ruined man.

He did very well for a few months in the counting-room of his friend, but his old habit soon obtained the mastery over him again, and he died suddenly of a disease produced by dissipation.

"One more dress," said Mrs. Green—the good old lady was now a cherished member of her daughter's family—"is the representative of the whole system of extravagance. 'One more dress,' as the type of a great bundle of bad habits, was the ruin of John Farmer. Don't you know it Sarah?"

"I do, mother, and I cannot be too thankful to you for your wholesome advice. I am sure that without it I should have procured 'one more dress;' then wanted another and another, until I had spoiled all my husband's expectations. Poor Ellen Farmer, she is binding shoes for her daily bread now!"

Skin Grafting.

Dr. Bell's method of skin grafting, as performed in numerous cases at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh, has proved very successful. In procuring portions of skin for this purpose he takes them from some sound portion of the patient's body, preferably from the arm. A piece of skin is pinched up by a pair of common catch-forceps, and cut off to the required size with a pair of scissors. This piece is divided into smaller pieces about the size of a grain of rice, and is planted among the granulations of the ulcer by means of a probe, one small piece being sufficient for about a square inch of surface. Over each of the grafts is laid a gutta-percha tissue, half a square inch in size, previously dipped in some antiseptic solution. The ulcer is then covered by two layers of similar pieces of gutta-percha tissue, placed on each other in an imbricated manner, and over these a dressing of antiseptic gauze and a bandage; this dressing is not removed for two or three days, when it is replaced as at first. To insure success, before grafting the ulcers should be free from fetor, and the dressing changed under spray.

Royal Incomes.

The following is the list of royal incomes given in the German Dahheim Kalender for 1874: The Emperor of Russia, 8,250,000 thalers; the Sultan of Turkey 6,000,000 thalers; the Emperor of Austria, 5,500,000; the Emperor of Germany, (as King of Prussia) 4,500,000; the King of Italy, 2,500,000 thalers; the Queen of England, 2,500,000 thalers. In proportion to the national income of these countries, the Queen of England receives the lowest civil list—namely, 7-10ths per cent.; the Sultan receives the highest, 11 per cent. The second chamber of Saxony has fixed 950,000 thalers the civil list of King Albert. A thaler is equal to about seventy cents of United States money.

Diamond wedding—Jem's marriage.

BITTERS.—Take boneset, wild cherry bark and poplar bark; make an infusion by adding a quart of warm water; let it cool and drink when thirsty. This is a certain cure for fever and ague. I received it from an Indian, and found it to be the master of ague.—H. C. in Country Gentleman,

COME, AND LET US REASON TOGETHER.—To the afflicted in body, we say a few words of plain, practical reasoning. No matter under what form of sickness you labor there is one great truth you should ever keep in mind, viz.: All disease originates in an impure condition of the blood. Purify that, and the disease must depart, for it has nothing to feed on; but you cannot purify the blood by the use of poisonous drugs and exhaustive stimulants; the relief which these afford is temporary and deceptive, leaving you worse off at every interval. The best Blood Purifier ever discovered is DR. WALKER'S FAMOUS VINEGAR BITTERS, compounded of simple herbs. No matter how hopeless your case may seem, try the VINEGAR BITTERS, and a few draughts will convince you of the virtue. Dr. Walker, the discoverer of this priceless remedy, had been given up to die by the physicians, and is now a sound and healthy man from their use. 36

Diseases of the Blood.

"The Blood is the Life." When this source is corrupted, the painful and sorrow-producing effects are visible in many shapes. The multifarious forms in which it manifests itself, would form subjects upon which I might write volumes. But as all the varied forms of disease which depend upon bad blood are cured, or best treated, by such medicines as take up from this fluid and excrete from the system the noxious elements, it is not of practical importance that I should describe each. For instance, medical authors describe about fifty varieties of skin disease, but as they all require for their cure very similar treatment it is of no practical utility to know just what name to apply to a certain form of skin disease, so you know how best to cure it. Then again I might go on and describe various kinds of scrofulous sores, fever sores, white swellings, enlarged glands, and ulcers of varying appearance; might describe how virulent poison may show itself in various forms of eruptions, ulcers, sore throat, bony tumors, etc.; but as all these various appearing manifestations of bad blood are cured by a uniform means, I deem such a course unnecessary. Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the great fountain of life, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution, will all return to us. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical discovery and Purgative Pellets are pre-eminently the articles needed. They are warranted to cure Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose Rash, or Erysipelas, Ring-worms, Pimples, Blotches, Spots, Eruptions, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Rough Skin, Scurf, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Fever Sores, White Swellings, Tumors, Old Sores or Swellings, Affections of the Skin, Throat, and Bones, and Ulcers of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, and Lungs.—[Com.

WISHART'S
PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL
Nature's Great Remedy
FOR ALL
THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES!!
It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medicinal properties are retained. Tar even in its crude state has been recommended by eminent physicians of every school. It is confidently offered to the afflicted for the following simple reasons:
1. IT CURES,—not by abruptly stopping the cough—but by dissolving the phlegm and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter causing the irritation. In cases of seated CONSUMPTION it both prolongs and renders less burdensome the life of the afflicted sufferer.
2. Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain, and subduing inflammation.
3. IT PURIFIES AND ENRICHES THE BLOOD. Positively curing all humors, from the common PIMPLE or ERUPTION to the severest cases of Scrofula. Thousands of affidavits could be produced from those who have felt the beneficial effects of PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL in the various diseases arising from IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD.
4. It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.
All who have known or tried Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's remedies require no references from us, but the names of thousands cured by them can be given to any one who doubts our statement. Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Great American Dyspepsia Pills and WORM SUGAR DROPS have never been equalled. For sale by all Druggists and Storekeepers, and at

Names of the United States and Their Significations.

NEW HAMPSHIRE was named from Hampshire County, in England. It was formerly called Laconia. It was one of the original thirteen. Adopted the Constitution in 1788.

VERMONT—from the French Vert Mont, signifying Green Mountains—aided to the extent of her ability in the war of the Revolution, but failed to be called one of the thirteen, not having adopted the Constitution until 1791.

MASSACHUSETTS is the Indian name for "The country around the great hills." This State and Virginia were especially English colonies, and took the foremost place in the opening of the war of the Revolution. On its soil the first battle was fought. Adopted the Constitution 1788.

RHODE ISLAND, the beautiful little State, owes its name to the Island of Rhodes, in the Mediterranean, which domain it is said to greatly resemble. It was the last of the original thirteen that adopted the Constitution, which occurred in 1790. She was such a stickler for liberty and freedom from restraint that she saw, or deemed she saw, in the new Constitution some squinting toward monarchy—hence she hesitated.

CONNECTICUT, from the Indian Quonchita-Cut, signifying "Long River." One of the original thirteen. Adopted the Constitution in 1788.

NEW YORK was named for the English Duke of York and Albany, who sent out an expedition to America, which landed at the little Duch town of Manhattan or New Amsterdam and penetrated as far into the interior as Albany. His expedition honored their patron by giving the Duke's title name to the colony and to two of the principal towns. Adopted the Constitution as one of the original thirteen 1788, and was the national seat of government when Washington was President.

NEW JERSEY, so called in honor of Sir George Carteret, who was Governor of the Island of Jersey, in the British Channel. One of the original thirteen. Adopted the Constitution 1788.

PENNSYLVANIA, everybody knows, means "Penn's woods," and was so called after William Penn, its original Quaker owner. The cradle of the first Congress and of the Declaration of Independence and of the Constitution of the United States, which, as one of the original thirteen, she adopted in 1787.

DELAWARE, after Lord De la Ware. One of the immortal thirteen. Adopted the Constitution in 1787.

MARYLAND, after Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles the First of England. One of the thirteen. Adopted the Constitution in 1788.

VIRGINIA, the oldest of the States, and one of the original thirteen, was so called in honor of Queen Elizabeth, the "Virgin Queen," in whose reign Sir Walter Raleigh made the first attempt to colonize that region. She adopted the Constitution in 1788.

THE CAROLINAS were originally one tract, and were called "Carolina" after Charles the Ninth of France. North Carolina, one of the thirteen, adopted the Constitution in 1789. South Carolina, also one of the original thirteen, adopted the Constitution in 1788.

GEORGIA owes its name to George the Second of England, who first established a colony there in 1732. This State, the last in the list of the "Old Thirteen," but not the last to adopt the Constitution, took her place in 1788.

The following have been erected into territories, and admitted as States since the adoption of the Constitution by the first fourteen States.

KENTUCKY is the Indian for "at the head of the river." Admitted as a State to the Union in 1792.

TENNESSEE is the Indian for "the River of the Bend"—i. e., the Mississippi, which forms its western bondary. Admitted in 1796.

OHIO means "beautiful." Admitted as a State in 1803.

LOUISIANA was called after Louis the Fourteenth, who at one time owned that section of the country. Bought from France in 1803, and admitted as a State in 1812.

MISSISSIPPI is an Indian name, meaning "Long River." Admitted as a State in 1817.

ILLINOIS is derived from the Indian word illini, men, and the French suffix ois, together signifying "tribe of men." Admitted to the Union in 1818.

MAINE was called after the province of Maine in France, in compliment of Queen Henriette of England, who owned that province. Maine was for many years a province of Massachusetts, and was admitted as a State in 1820.

ALABAMA was so named by the Indians, and signifies "Here we rest." Admitted to the Union in 1820.

MISSOURI is from the Indian word "muddy," which more properly applies to the river which flows through it. Admitted as a state in 1821.

ARKANSAS from Kansas, the Indian word for "Smoky Water." Its prefix arc, the French word for "bow." Admitted as a State in 1836.

MICHIGAN was called by the name given the lake, meaning "fish-weir," which was so styled from its fancied resemblance to a fish-trap. Admitted as a State in 1837.

FLORIDA.—Ponce de Leon landed on the coast of Florida on Easter Sunday, and called the country in commemoration of the day, which was the Pasqua Florida of the Spaniards, or "Feast of Flowers." Admitted as a State in 1845.

TEXAS is the American word for the Mexican name by which all that section of country was called before it was ceded to the United States. Admitted to the Union in 1845.

IOWA, "drowsy ones." Admitted to the Union in 1846.

WISCONSIN, "wild-rushing channel." Admitted in 1848.

CALIFORNIA, named by Cortez. Admitted in 1850.

MINNESOTA, "cloudy water." Admitted to the Union in 1858.

OREGON owes its Indian name to its principal river. Admitted to the Union in 1859.

KANSAS, Indian word for "smoky water." Admitted in 1861.

WEST VIRGINIA, taken from Virginia and erected into a seperate State and admitted in 1863.

NEBRASKA admitted to the Union as a State in 1867.

NEVADA, Indian, means white with snow, and it is well known that mountainous territory contains peaks covered with perpetual snow.

A Dog Carries the Mail once a Week.

Mr. J. Prosser, says a Minnesota paper, lives at Lake of Two Woods, Dakota, twelve miles west of the Minnesota line. Several settlers live near him, and, as they have no regular mail service, letters and papers are carried between the Two Woods settlement and "Captain Herrick's," at the State line, by private enterprise. This service has for some time been performed by a dog belonging to Mr. Prosser. The mail is placed in a small sack, and tied about the dog's neck, when he is told to "go," and he goes—never once having failed to reach his destination without delay. Captain Herrick overhauls the mail, gives the shaggy mail carrier a good dinner, and places the Two Woods mail about his neck, when he is again away on the return trip. There is no more faithful carrier in Uncle Sam's service than "Curley" has proven himself to be. While performing his duty it is impossible for man or beast approach him.

Captain Herrick once met him on the road and endeavored to relieve him of his burden, but Curley was off like a shot, never once halting until he had arrived at the Captain's own door. One day last week Mr. Prosser came to Marshall with a load of furs, and brought Curley with him. We were favored with a call from the noble animal and his master, and, with several others, listened with interest to the facts here narrated. Curley is a fine-looking dog, rather larger than medium size, has long, curly hair, a well-shaped head, a good-natured eye, and is of the breed commonly called spaniels. He was much pleased at receiving so much attention, and seemed to understand all that was being said about him.

Brain Weight of Different Races.

An eminent German professor once assumed that, as a certain size and mass of brain is essential for the exercise of the mental faculties, therefore all the human race must be furnished with an equal amount of brains. This truly Teutonic theory has since, however, been effectually dissipated. An elaborate paper was read not very long ago before the Royal Society of England, in which the existing evidence as to the weight of brain among different nations was analyzed. The average brain weight for the English is stated to be 47.50 ounces; for the French, 44.58; for the Germans, 42.83; but there are discrepancies in the results of different observers, some giving a greater average than this to the Germans. The Italians, Lapps, Swedes, Frisans, and Dutch come into the category with the English. Among the Asiatic races, the Vedahs of Ceylon and the Hindoos give a mean of over 42.11 ounces. The skulls of Mussulmans afford a slightly increased average of brain weight over those of the Hindoos. Two skulls of male Khonds—one of the unquestioned aboriginal races of India—show a brain weight of only 37.87 ounces. The general average of the Asiatic table shows a diminution of more than two ounces when compared with Europeans. The general mean of African races is less than that of European races, although there are great differences; the Caffre rising high, and the Bushman sinking low in the scale. The average of the whole of the aboriginal American races reaches 44.73 ounces, which is 2.14 ounces less than that of the European races. The Australian races show a brain weight one-ninth less than that of the general average of Europeans. The Malays and others of the Oceanic races, who migrated boldly, for commercial purposes, over the North and South Pacific Ocean, and occupy the islands, show a tolerably high average of brain weight; and, on arriving at this section, we return in some measure to the large braign weight of Europeans.

In Proportion.

The whole human figure should be six times the length of the feet. Whether the form be slender or plump, the rule holds good; any deviation from it is a departure from the highest beauty of proportion. The Greeks made all their statues according to this rule. The face, from the highest point of the forehead where the hair begins, to the chin, is one-tenth of the whole statue. The hand, from the wrist to the middle finger, is the same. From the top of the chest to the highest point of the forehead is a seventh. If the face, from the roots of the hair to the chin, be divided into three equal parts, the first division determines the place where the eyebrows meet, and the second the place of the nostrils. Height from the feet to the top of the head is the distance from the extremity of the fingers when the arms are extended.

NEARLY A QUARTER OF A CENTURY.
50,000 ORGANS SOLD!!

THE Policy of this Company is to use the best materials without regard to cost. Its employes, especially those in leading positions, have been familiar with the manufacture of reed instruments from the infancy of the business. The cases are solidly constructed, and from NEW and ELEGANT DESIGNS. The manufacturers claim that they have succeeded in producing the most satisfactory harmony ever heard from Reeds; while at the same time their Organs have never been equaled in Power.

An Organ Leading 3,000 Singers!

The following letter, from the Most Eminent Organist in the U. S., refers to an Organ now used in the Rev. Dr. Talmadge's church. The Organ formerly used, made by another house, had proved insufficient.

DEAR SIR: I owe you personally my best thanks for sending to us (the Brooklyn Tabernacle Congregation) one of the Smith American Reed Organs to the Academy of Music. It is perfectly wonderful that so small an instrument in size should have sufficient power to lead a Congregation of so many thousand people. The Trustees, as well as myself, are much pleased with it. The quality of TONE is also all that can be desired. It speaks for itself; and all I have met with, who have heard it, speak of it as most satisfactory. Accept my thanks, and believe me to remain most respectfully yours,
GEO. W. MORGAN, Organist.

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

The Auburn Courier

Thursday, April 9th, 1874

Mr. Tweed appears to enjoy his quarters—his imprisonment partaking of the distinguished consideration extended to statesmen rather than the salutary rigor dealt out to thieves.

The internal revenue from the traffic in liquors shows a considerable falling off on account of the women's crusade. During the months of January and February the receipts from eleven districts of Ohio and Indiana were $253,720,10 less than during the two preceding months.

In the matter of population, St. Louis has the innings on Chicago. A census just completed shows the former city to have a population of 473,060, which rather astonishes the Queen of the Lakes. It is incumbent on that city to set about making a canvas at once. There's no such word as fail.

The Centennial Commission which has been in Washington all winter trying to get an appropriation need a little recreation, and propose to make an excursion to Fredricksburg, Va., to weep at the tomb of Washington's mother. Such an affection for our national grandmother has not often been seen.

H. E. Wadsworth, of the Laporte Argus, is genial and kind hearted; but he 'occasionally strike square 'out from the shoulder.' Witness the following.

Several Republican exchanges are propounding the question "What has become of the Democratic party?" The last definite information we had from it came from Newhampshire. It seemed to be in splendid working order then.

In accepting the invitation to deliver the eulogy on Charles Sumner in Boston, Senator Schurz writes: "My intercourse with Mr. Sumner was that of a friendship so warm and intimate that no man could have felt more keenly than myself the greatness of our loss, and nothing can be more greatful to my feelings than to join you in doing honor to his memory now that he is gone."

Connecticut makes response to Grantism and Butlerism. The Democratic ticket is re-elected by a sweepingly increased majority, and a man of honesty, decency and manhood will be sent to the Senate to take the place of the Butlerized Buckingham. The reports indicate that that the Democratic vote of last year has been very greatly increased, and the sign is unmistakable that the Grant folks are going to be compelled to unload.

There has been enough testimony introduced in the Congressional District of Columbia investigation to show that Gov. "Boss" Shepherd and his colleagues should be in the Penitentiary. They deserve such a sentence as "Boss" Tweed and his colleagues did in New York. Their offence is the same, and the amount stolen is scarcely less. If Shepherd & Co. escape, Tweed and his friends ought in justice to be let out.

It has recently come to light that the Secretary of the National Republican Executive Committee was paid, for discharging those duties, $100 per month out of the National Treasury as a temporary clerk in one of the departments, in which he performed no duty, the salary having been secured him by the party managers to save that much money to the party. O, the bold, unblushing Republican robbers of the people's treasury!

General Grant's reception of the South Carolina will probably hasten the depopulizing of the State, so soon as the people see that there is really no relief from the cormorants who have been robbing and murdering for the past seven years. The reign of murder seems to be wide spread, and on the increase. The most frightful feature of the whole business being that the crimes are all committed by colored people, and with no seeming personal or race provocation. They kill as they would steal—simply, as a case of necessity, in order to gain a livelihood. Vagabondism is a premium, and all classes seem to suffer from official thieving and an exhorbitant system of exacting heavy compensation for trivial services.

The case of Buell, arrested for libel on Zack Chandler, was continued to yesterday.

Barbier's Balloon, Les Ecours, made an ascension from Woodward's garden San Francisco, Saturday. When nearly over the town of San Leandro, and six hundred feet in the air, the balloon collapsed. There were four men and two ladies in the car. The balloon struck the ground with great force and was dragged about three hundred yards. No lives were lost, but all the occupants of the car were hurt, but none seriously. All but Barbier returned to the city last night.

From one we can learn all. One of Sanborn's agents, as we have already reported, collected a tax of the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad Company of $6,009.42. The Company had repeatedly offered to pay the tax, but the assessor was in doubt as to the amount which should be charged. Not until there was an opportunity for somebody to swindle the Government out of fifty per cent. of the amount due, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury, was the tax, not collected, but received.

An Administration organ in the State of New Hampshire, called the Monitor, asks "What would you have "us do? Would you have us defend "the Sanborn contracts? Uphold de-"fenders of the salary grabs? Make "light of the Credit Mobilier villainy? "Hoodwink our readers about the Sim-"mons matter? Continue silent over "the Jaynes revelations? Exalt the "purity of the administration? Be-"spatter the President with praise for "signing the salary bill?" These are ugly questions, and grave charges against Grant's Administration.

Gen. E. M. Lee. acting governor of Wyoming territory, in a late lecture on woman suffrage in Boston, claimed that the movement in that territory had been an unqualified success. The population of the territory had been practically a lawless mob, but was changed to a law abiding community through the influence of women, at the polls, on juries, and in conventions. All argument against equal suffrage and had been practically controverted by the experiment in Wyoming. Women had served successfully as jurors, and in the various county offices, and in no case had social or martial relation been disturbed.

Oh for a throat of brass and adamantine lungs. A person endowed with these metallic appendages will be needed in Washington to read a report, in case Mr. Adams, of Kentucky, succeeds in having passed an order directing the committee on Indian affairs to investigate all the frauds, unfairness and irregularities connected with the administration of Indian affairs during the year 1873-4. Mr. Adams, of Kentucky, should pause before inflicting such a herculean task upon the committee, involving as it will, a rise in the price of paper, and an indefinite prolongation of the session.

Mr. Merrimon's proposition to increase the National Bank circulation $46,000,000 was carried in the Senate last Thursday by a vote of 32 to 19. The Enquirer says Thurman and Sherman inexplicably (?) voted in favor of the amendment, though Mr. Thurman spoke against it. The forty-six millions are to go to those States that have less than their quota of National Bank circulation. The tendency of the country toward more money is unmistakable. It is a significant fact, however, that the proposition too add $46,000,000 to the circulation of the National Banks received a larger vote in the Senate than the one to add $18,000,000 to the greenback issue. Government provides one one half of the currency with which the business of the country is done and guarantees the soundness of the other half. Government compels the people to pay about $75,000 a day to the National Banks to induce them to except this guarantee which enables them to make money, for it is the faith of the Government alone that makes the National Bank note valuable. How, therefore, men can vote in favor of an increase of the inexpensive currency of the Government itself as heresy is not easily understood. This vote, if carried into effect, will give the West and South what they need—more money. It marks, again the policy of the country on the currency question. It is a preponderance of force applied at the wrong tug, but it will move the vehicle along. That the Merrimon amendment places the $46,000,000 where it is needed tones down the prejudice against the National Bank note. An increase of $64,000,000 in our circulating medium will enable the business of the West and South to breathe a little freer.

When the pee-wees build their nests, then will we have spring." Will some friend please urge the pee-wees to hurry up business.

One of our citizens started out the other week to buy a good milch cow. He saw about eighty, and traveled nearly two hundred miles, and there was'nt really a fine cow among the lot. A sad commentary upon the kind of stock produced in this county. Why don't our farmers make an effort to raise good stock? A good animal will cost less to feed than a scrubby, scrawny creature worth half the price.

PROCLAMATION.

—OF—

JOHN HEBEL,

To All Whom it May Concern.

—0—

Know ye, That I have obtained a license from the Commissioners Court and am permitted to retail intoxicating liquors at my saloon in the town of Auburn. To the wife who has a drunkard for a husband, or a friend who is unfortunately dissipated, I emphatically give me notice in person of such case or cases in which you are interested, and all such shall be excluded from my bar. Let mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers do likewise and their request will be regarded and always consider it a great favor by so doing: this is simply the sum and substance of the whole matter. I am permitted to sell whiskey and other intoxicating liquors, and I want it distinctly understood that I have no desire to sell to drunkards and minors or to the poor and destitute. I much prefer that they save their money and apply it where it legitimately belongs—to their families. There are gentlemen of honor and men of money, who sport, and who can afford it; with such I only desire to exchange. To this class our bar is open and none others need apply. For gentlemen of my style I have a splendid saloon, and have constantly on hand a full stock of all kinds of wines and liquors; and the general favorite drinks, including lager beer, California catawba—extra fine and universally acknowledged of healthy, and for the promotion of health. To those who wish to trade with me and can afford it; come and I will endeavor to treat you gentlemanly and courteously. Pay your cash, choose your drinks, and go about your business, and it's your business, and nobody elses business.

JOHN HEBEL.

DeKALB COUNTY

NUMBER SIX.

He was a man of considerable talent, and died some years ago, much lamented. It was said that he used to preach in the summer, in his rough tow pants, without a coat, and with a shoe on one foot and a boot on the other. This is not strange, when I remember that shoes and boots were so hard to be had, that John P. Widney and I, during the summer I lived with him, (1837,) could only get one good pair of shoes between us, which we wore alternately on Sunday—one going to meeting and the other staying at home; and that John and Hazzard Webster, used to come down to the present site of Newville, even to election barefooted.

The first Methodist two days meeting was held near Orangeville, in 1837, by N. L. Thomas, and Joseph Miller, both then residing on the Maumee.

Prayer meetings had been held previously, by religious persons of various denominations, without any distinctions. The origin of the first one, is thus related by Judge Widney. "We had been in the country for some time, without knowing that there was a praying person in the settlement, besides ourselves:—when one Sabbath, Mr. R. R. Lounsbery and another man returning from Fort Wayne, stopped at my house and informed me that Mr. Thomas L. Yates (afterwards Judge) was under conviction, and wished me to come and pray with him. I went, and found quite a number of persons in the house. I sang and prayed, and, while praying noticed that old father Rhodes was fervently responding to my petitions. I then sang again and called on him to pray, and while he prayed, I noticed that the old lady, his wife, was also praying. I next called on her, and found that old mother Yates—(mother of the penitent man,) was engaged, and so I called on her next, and this closed our meeting. Afterwards we held prayer meeting nearly every Sabbath, at Father Rhodes'—my house—Mr. Lounsbery's, Mr. Eakright's, &c."

Rev. Messrs. Coleman and Warner were the first circuit preachers of the Methodist Episcopal church, who visited the settlement. I think it was sometime in the year 1838. They organized several classes at different points. Early in the year 1839, sixteen persons, who had been members of the Methodist Protestant Church in Ohio and Pennsylvania, met at the house of Samuel Tarney, on Bear Creek, and organized them into an M. P. class. I was one of the members and Samuel Widney, Senior., was our leader. He wrote to Rev. Joel Dalbey, then at Pittsburgh, to try to procure a preacher. He answered that we had better apply to the Ohio conference. Our leader then wrote to the celebrated Nicholas Snethin, at Cincinnati. This letter was sent from the Ohio to the Indiana conference, then just organized and holding its session in Monroe County, Indiana, and Lewis Hicklin came on as Missionary, and organized several classes, and finally a circuit. He was the first Methodist Protestant preacher in Indiana, North of the Wabash, so far as I know. For some time, the Disciple, Methodist Episcopal, and Methodist Protestant churches, were the only ones in the country. Jonathan Thomas and Bishop Kumler, were the first united Brethren preachers. They labored as missionaries through the country in 1841 and 2, if I am correct. S. B. Ward, was the first regular Baptist minister in the county, and Elders Cherry and Miner, the first Free Will Baptist, and James Cather the first Lutheran. Mr. Cather Commenced his labors early in the year 1844, and the others several years earlier. We will give the date more definitely when we come to speak of Wilmington Township in which Elders Ward and Cherry settled.

The first person who was married while a resident of the settlements, we are informed, was Jared Ball, to Miss Malinda Slater. The father of the bride resided in Williams county, Ohio, near the present village of Edgerton, and there they were married; the eccentric bridegroom paying the Marriage fee to Mr. Alton, the officiating minister, in pumpkins, and to keep it from being lonesome here,—I will state that, in later years, a certain Judge performed a marriage, the bridegroom in which was the fortunate possessor of a tract of "oak opening," and a "cranberry marsh." After the ceremony, the bland and courteous Judge was informed by the happy bridegroom, that for his invaluable services, he could have the privileges of getting some cranberries in his marsh.

The first marriage that took place in the settlement, as far as I know, was that of Nelson Ulm and Elvira Lockwood.

"True as steel," is the title of a magnificent story by Marion Harland, one of the most interesting story writers in the country. The scene of the story is laid in Kentucky and treats of the social life of the present day. You should read it by all means. To be had at Davenport and Company's.

WORK COMMENCED.—Last week sixty-two car loads of material, ties and iron arrived, over the Eel River line, at the Junction for the Baltimore, Pittsburg & Chicago Railway. Enough track has been laid on the new road to admit of the cars being run thereon, and track-laying commenced this week.

The bridge builders are busy at work with a large force, and the tie contractors are pushing things as fast as possible.

DIBOLO.—The great fire demon, will appear at Ensley's Hall this (Thurday) evening. There is no humbug about him, as he performs all he advertises. He will appear upon the stage with a Burning Furnace full of real fire, when he will actually eat coals of living fire, blazing sulpher sealing wax, drink boiling oil, melted metals, handle bars of red hot iron, draw a bar of red hot iron across his tongue, also bite in two a red hot iron, and perform the wonderful feat of emitting a flame of fire from his mouth, allowing a committee, chosen by the audience, to light candles and papers from the flames as they issue from his mouth.

The Stave Factory paid out for material last Saturday $1,150 and the Hub and Spoke factory $900. A distribution of $2000 a week helps things along very much in any town the size of Auburn. It all comes from manufactories, and shows the importance of this branch of labor to every community.

There is no fear now but that the bridge work on the Baltimore road will be completed with all dispatch. Royal Hill Esq. has been employed by the company to superintend this part of the work, and from his well known reputation of thorough experience in railroad matters there is no doubt but that it will be done as the company desires it, in a substantial manner.

One of our young married friends awakened on April morning with a voracious appetite and sat down to what he supposed was a feast of batter cakes. His amiable spouse had put up a job on him by slicing a sponge and frying it brown. It was curious to notice how quick he discovered the trick after he had gnawed at it for a minute or two.

Town elections are drawing near. We would like to see the question submitted to a vote whether we shall have a Fire Engine or not? If a majority of the people are in favor of it, they should be heard. We know there are a few poor persons in town that oppose it on account of a little tax of 25 cents on the $100, and such a pull as that all at once would break them up.

We call attention of our readers to the card of the Merchants National Bank of Fort Wayne in another column. Two of the members of this bank have been residents of our county and are well known to many of our citizens. The Merchants stands No. 1 in point of reliability, and those who have deposits to make, or other banking business to transact, will find its officers both prompt and accomodating.

Our friend Mr. D Grats near Spencerville is raising a herd of splendid cattle. He imported several from Kentucky, some two years ago, and he will soon be enabled to realize a handsome profit from his enterprise. And so he ought. There is a chance for a few more to do the same thing. Nothing points to the enterprise and energy of a farmer so much as the stock he keeps A revie w to-day of our county in this direction would not show much of either.

PETIT JURORS.—The following is a list of the Petit Jurors drawn for the Circuit Court, May term, 1874:

Jonathan Houser,

G. W. Row,
Alex. Kinmont,
F. C. Francis,

Wm. Shutt.

The grunt of the porker is already heard on our streets. It looks civilized to see our sidewalks littered all over by hogs and the grass plats here and there along our sidewalks in the suburbs all rooted over, and torn up by these pesky critters. Yet there are some that would rather have things look this way than to be compelled to put up hogs. We hope public opinion is meeting with some change in this particular in Auburn. It don't speak very loud for our town, and we trust the next Town Board will have back bone enough to pass an ordinance and enforce it in this direction

The following are the appointments of the M. E. Conference for the Fort Wayne District, H. J. Meck, Presiding Elder:

SPENCERVILLE ITEMS.—Spencerville is looming up. Though they have no three story bricks, nevertheless they keep things nice and clean, and neat, white houses, with gates well hung and yards neat and tidy, indicate the taste of her citizens.—They have a fine local trade and a magnificent country to support them. The dry goods store of Sol Barney and J. D. Leighty do a good trade and keep on hand a very good stock of goods. John Provines, the agreeable P. M. and druggist is also doing a good trade and has a fine stock. O. H. Rummel is the harness man, and his stock and work recommend themselves Rev. Mr. Brick is rapidly recovering from the serious accident he met with by a fall from his horse a few weeks ago. The wheat looks better in this locality though there will not be a full crop. Al. Dawson has the finest dog in the county, and Sol. Barney has the best cow. Jack Dilts has a babby—no, he is part owner in one and looks just like its papa. For an eighty-five dollar watch call at Barney's store.

MARRIED.—On the 24th of March, at Michigan City, John Granville Mott youngest son of the late E. B. Mott of Auburn to Rose Winterbotham youngest daughter of John H. Winterbotham.

SNUBBING CHILDREN.—The habit of reproving children for asking a question, or making a noise at play, is a very bad one. "Dont bother me, child," is too often the reply to a simple, proper question. The thoughtless parent does not consider how deeply it wounds does not even look up to see the smile chased from the bright, happy face of the little cherub by an expression of pain and sorrow. Stung by the unjust reproof and smarting under the cruel neglect the child leaves its playthings and goes into the corner to grieve until bright thoughts come again to drown the evil. Most children have a fine sense of right and wrong, and know full well when they are unkindly treated. The cruel words, thoughtlessly spoken by an inconsiderate parent, sink deep into their young hearts and leave their impress.

Unkind words rankling in the bosom of innocent children have done more to fill our penitentiaries than all other evils combined. When the parent so far alienates the affections of a child as to lose his confidence, that moment his influence for good is gone, and his child will go to the bad. He seeks his pleasures away from the roof tree. He mingles with other children, who, like him, have left the chilling atmosphere of home, and together they take their first lessons in crime. Lessons too easily learned; too fatal in their results.

Children who are kindly treated and tenderly nurtured at home seldom turn out badly. Parents should not fail to provide proper amusements at home.—Make the fireside bright, cheerful and attractive. Above all things, do not forget that kind words are like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." A little time spent with your children, for their amusement may bring a rich return in after life.

The Re-union.

The Soldiers' Re-union, at Fort Wayne, Tuesday last, brought to that city one of the largest crowds ever assembled within her limits. The attendance of soldiers was large, and the general features of the occasion highly enjoyed by all. Gov. Hendricks, Gens. Tom Browne, Bill Gibson, Willick and other prominent personages were present, and made addresses. The regular address by Gen. Browne was a fine effort and was received with frequent bursts of applause. Gov. Hendricks, on the part of the citizens of the State, made a few remarks in his usual fine style, followed by Gen Bill Gibson, whom we have always regarded as the best speaker in the west. His speech did not consist of gestures and high sounding words, but was thrilling, eloquent and humorous. The "Old Dutch" General, as he is sometimes called, followed in a remarkable speech, for one whose language is so broken. He said the boys had cleared the country from her enemies in arms, and he was now ready to assist in clearing it of the terrible corruption that exists in Washington. He wanted the farmers and mechanics to join together and by their votes rid Washington of its terrible corruption and send honest men there. We rather judge the General is a granger. A great many could not get in to hear the addresses at the Opera House. It should have been at the Rink, by all means, where the large crowd might have been more easily accommodated. We cannot but look upon the exercises at the Rink in the evening as a partial failure. It seemed that every officer of the city must have his say in the speeches that were made, some of them reading long and weary productions, sufficient to tire a statue. There were Generals and Colonels and other high officers present from adjoining counties, but it did not seem to be their day, and the occasion looked as though it had been gotten up for the mere purpose of giving a few ambitious individuals a chance to spout. The Banquet itself was very fine, an abundance of delicacies and good things being provided. Several bands were present, among them the celebrated band from Warsaw, one of the best in the State. We trust, if another re-union is determined upon, no one will be permitted to respond at a greater length than five or ten minutes, except the regular address, and we believe everybody will be much better pleased.

Directors Meeting of the B.P. & C. R. R.

The Directors of the Baltimore Pittsburgh and Chicago R. R. met at the Swineford House and elected the following Directors and officers for the ensuing year:

W. C. Quincy, President, Columbus O.; Wm Keyser Baltimore, Md; George R. Dennis, Frederick, Md; John Gardner, Norwark; A P Edgerton, Fort Wayne, J. K Cowan, Baltimore.

The Board authorized a lease of the Illinois division so as to bring this and that State under one organization. Some of the officials went to Defiance where parties meet to-morrow to adjust the claims of Higgins Bros.

Gen. Wm. Gibson, of Ohio, is registered at the Swineford House.

Counties Adjoining.

STEUBEN COUNTY.

The Republican says, at the inauguration of the Women's Crusade in this town, many predict a short life for the enterprise. The experience of two weeks has fully shown the fallacy of the prediction They still render the lives of the saloon keepers uncomfortable for several hours each day, and the band appears to increase in numbers and enthusiasm. They declare there determination "to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The livery stables are doing a good business. Edwin Mellon had a leg broken while assisting to load a log. Bill Britton was arrested for illegally signing a petition for a permit to sell liquor, but after two changes of venue he beat 'em.—The residence of Andrew Cope was burglarized by one Johnson, and he is now in jail.

NOBLE COUNTY.

The Standard and Banner are still hot for the change of the county seat.

The Standard says, the right of way for Baltimore & Ohio railroad throught the farms of Geo. Weaver, and the Judge Randall estate, was settled by arbitration last Saturday—the company picking one man, the owners of the land one, and the two chose the third. The amount awarded to Mr. Weaver was $1,100, and the Randall estate $4,000.

WHITLEY COUNTY.

The Commercial says, we were shown by Mr. C. H. Pond, the other evening, a table that he is making for the Post printing office, which, to say the least, is beautiful, and reflects much credit upon the builder. Mr. Pound is one of the finest workmen in Northern Indiana.

Mr. Pond has made several stands for the COURIER office and they are superior to those to be had at type foundries, and much cheaper.

ALLEN COUNTY.

Fort Wayne has at last become awakened to the importance of having an exposition.....The M. E. conference was in session in that city last week, Bisop Foster presiding....The temperance movement is meeting with success notwithstanding considerable opposition.....E. L. Chittenden, Esq., returned from New Orleans this week, bringing with him a live alligator, which was presented to ex-Mayor Randall, who designs raising it in his hot house with other tropical fruits.

DEFIANCE COUNTY.

The Democrat says, on Monday a gang of track layers commenced work west of town on the B. P. & C. Railroad. The first day half a mile of track was laid. To day the track layers are about a mile and a half west of town.

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

THE verdict of the Congregational Council which convened at New York last week was that Plymouth Church erred in its dealings with the Tilton case. Mr. Beecher and his flock were censured, and warned not to err again....Dispatches from Susquehanna, Pa., give full particulars of the recent strike of employes of the Erie road at that point, which at one time threatened to be a very serious affair. Ninety engines were disabled, and freight valued at over $2,000,000 was for several days detained. Gov. Hartranft sent a force of militia to Susquehanna, which had the effect of preventing further violence by the strikers. The sympathies of the press and the public are with the workmen.

THE different trades-unions in New York have united in an appeal to the labor organizations throughout the country to insist upon eight hours constituting a day's labor, and to hold mass-meetings on the 11th of May, to express their opposition to the contract system on Government buildings....All the Erie railway strikers at Susquehanna Depot, Pa., have been paid off, and the excitement is over. The strikers have all been discharged, and the company has stated that but 500 men will be re-employed. It is stated that the road lost over $1,000,000 by the strike.

A PROVIDENCE bank has entered a petition in the United States District Court of Rhode Island, praying that the Sprague Manufacturing Company be adjudged bankrupt. If the suit is pressed the shops will have to be closed, throwing out of employment 15,000 operatives....The trials of former conductors of the Pennsylvania Railway Company at Philadelphia, charged with embezzling moneys, stealing tickets, etc., have resulted in conviction....Jay Gould is charged with having incited the late strike of Erie railway employes at Susquehanna Depot, Pa.

THE village of Millerstown, in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, has been visited by a disastrous conflagration, consuming about two-thirds of the town—sixty-nine buildings in all. The fire originated in the Central Hotel, and spread with such rapidity that many of the occupants were unable to escape, and ten or twelve lives were lost. The pecuniary loss is estimated at $250,000.

THE Philadelphia City Council have passed, by acclamation, the $1,000,000 Centennial Appropriation bill....A very disastrous fire occurred last week at Cohoes, Albany county N. Y., by which one large knitting factory—the Trivoli—was entirely, and another partially, consumed. A thousand operatives were thrown out of employment. Loss, $200,000.

The West.

No little excitement has been caused among the saloon-keepers and whisky-vendors of Burlington, Iowa, not by the operations of the crusaders, but by the action of the law. An information was filed against two or three rum-sellers by a married lady for selling liquor to her husband, and their stocks seized by the authorities. One or two liquor-dealers have sent their goods out of town to get them beyond the reach of the law....W. F. Houghtaling, agent for the Hoe press manufactory of New York, was killed in Chicago last week by falling through a hotel elevator way....The Mayor of Cincinnati has been unanimously requested by the Common Council of that city to prohibit the women from continuing their crusade against the saloon-keepers.

AFTER six weeks of prayer by the women crusaders of Jeffersonville, Ind., they have prevailed upon one saloon-keeper to close his doors, whereat there is great rejoicing....The crusaders of Springfield, Ill., have recorded their first victory. A saloon-keeper named Rayburn surrendered his stock to the praying band, the whisky and beer were rolled in the street, the heads of the barrels knocked in, and the contents emptied into the gutter amid the songs and joyous shouts of the crusaders. It was an occasion of great excitement and enthusiasm....The reunion of the Abolitionists, which has been talked of for some time, will be held in Chicago on the 9th of June.

THE National Crop Reporter's estimates place the average consumption of corn last winter in the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio and Wisconsin at 16 per cent. less than during the previous winter. The average consumption of oats during the same period was nearly 17 per cent. less, and of hay 12 per cent. less. The average condition of the growing wheat March 15 was exceptionally good in the heaviest winter-wheat producing States, except Indiana. The average for seven leading Western States in comparison with the corresponding date 1873 is 106. Fruit buds, March 15, were with few exceptions doing well, and very forward....The Missouri Legislature has appropriated $10,000 to enable the Governor to bring the Gad's Hill and other outlaws to justice.

IN cleaning up old muskets at the Des Moines Arsenal, the other day, a man's finger was found tightly lodged in the barrel of one near the breech....Alexander McCune, the wealthiest man in Van Buren county, Iowa, took strychnine, and with a $100 bill in each hand laid down to die. AN attempt was made at Hamilton, Ohio, a few days ago, to kill the notorious Tom McGehan, the man whom Vallandigham was defending when he met with his fatal accident. McGehan was shot in the face and left hip, and is dangerously wounded. The parties who did the shooting are unknown, and no arrests have been made....Michigan has 681 convicts in her State Prison.

A HORRIBLE tragedy was recently enacted near Austin, Nevada. Christian Rekstein had been for a long time jealous of his wife, on account of attentions paid her by a young man named Norton. A neighbor went to Rekstein's house and found the door closed, upon opening which he saw on the floor the naked body of Mrs. Rekstein cut to pieces and her head split. At her feet lay the two little Rekstein girls, their heads nearly severed from their bodies, and near them the dead bodies of Rekstein and young Norton, grappled as in a death struggle. Rekstein held a large bowie-knife covered with blood in his right hand, and Norton a dragoon pistol, four chambers of which were discharged. There is no living witness of the terrible affair.

THE Union Park Baptist Church, of Chicago, has dissolved its pastoral relation with the somewhat notorious Rev. Florence McCarthy.

The South.

Foreign.

FROM a statement made in the House of Commons on yesterday by the British Home Secretary it appears that sixteen Fenian prisoners are still undergoing imprisonment for offenses against the Crown. The Secretary announced that the Government did not intend to interfere with the execution of the sentences. This bars the Fenians from all hope from the Disraeli Government....The French Assembly has rejected a motion to take a vote to decide the future form of government of France... Among them were the Japanese Commissioners to the Vienna Exhibition. There were 85 persons on board.... The news from the Island of Cuba is interesting. The patriot army in the Central Department now numbers over 20,000, and the whole army throughout the island is estimated at near 35,000. The impression is that Gen. Concha will make propositions of peace to the Marquis of Santa Lucia, but no conditions will be accepted except unconditional surrender of the Spaniards and their departure from the island. The incendiary torch is making great havoc in the sugar plantations of the island... Reports from the districts of India affected by the famine show a great improvement in the situation. There are now no actual cases of starvation outside of Tirhoot, and in that district only a few....A movement is on foot in England to make the Government reimburse the English sufferers by the depredations of the Alabama....The conflict inaugurated in Germany by the recently enacted ecclesiastical laws still continues. A third church dignitary, the Archbishop of Boulogne, has followed the Archbishops of Treves and Posen to prison....Gladstone has reconsidered his determination to resign the leadership of the Opposition in the British Parliament, whereat his friends are greatly rejoiced....London is enjoying the delights of a panic.

THERE is some prospect of peace in Cuba. It is thought the insurgents will propose a cessation of hostilities, to be followed by a formal treaty of peace, the basis of which will be general amnesty to all political offenders, and a representation of the insurgents in the Cortes. The treaty will include a stipulation that the island shall remain united to Spain....It appears that only 20 pilgrims, instead of 117, were lost overboard recently from the Mediterranean steamer.

ADVICES to April 3 from the scene of the war before Bilboa show that the Republican troops have taken no position held by the Carlists since March 25. A number of amendments were proposed and rejected, and the Senate adjourned pending a vote on Morton's motion to strike out the section for the retirement of legal-tender notes at the ratio of $700,000 for every $1,000,000 of National Bank notes issued under the bill.

Fire.

According to Pliny, fire was a long time unknown to some of the ancient Egyptians, and when a celebrated astronomer showed it to them, they were absolutely in raptures The Persians, Phœnicians, Greeks and several other nations acknowledged that their ancestors were without the use of fire, and the Chinese confess the same of their progenitors. Pompanion, Mola, Plutarch, and other ancient writers speak of nations which, at the time when they wrote, knew not the use of fire, or had just learned it. Facts of the same kind are also attested by modern nations. The inhabitants of the Marian Islands, which were discovered in 1561, had no idea of fire. Never was astonishment greater than theirs when they saw it on the desert in one of their islands. At first they believed it was some kind of animal that fixed to and fed upon the wood.

BY means of the drill wheat is sown regularly and all the same depth. If the seed is good there need be no allowance made for wastage as in sowing by hand. One bushel and a peck per acre is plenty, and, if the grains be small, one bushel. It is planted regularly and at a proper depth, and it has an equal chance to grow and to fasten its roots firmly in the soil. By drilling, fertilizers can also be sown at the same time.

The French Census.

Owing the destructive, though happily short-lived rule of the Commune in Paris, the publication of the results of the French census of 1872 has been unavoidably postponed, and is only just now finished. It is full of interesting statements, and, according to La Patrie, shows the prosperity of France in 1872 to have been pretty nearly equal to that of 1866, when France had reached the highest point of her internal development. In 1866 the total population of France amounted to 38,067,064 inhabitants; in 1872, after the war and the loss of two provinces, it was 36,102,921. Of this population, 21,865,625 inhabited cities, 13,405,310 lived in the country. The number of houses has been reduced from 7,811,549 in 1866 to 7,704,913 in 1873. Of the 36,102,921 inhabitants, only 13,000,000 could neither read nor write, which, considering the relative proportion of infants and young children to the whole population, is a small average; 3,780,000 could only read; all the rest could both read and write. The Catholic religion claims 35,900,000 of the population, the Reformed Church 580,000, and the Jewish Church 49,000. The 36,102,921 inhabitants are divided into 13,500,000 heads of families, 19,000,000 members of families, and about 2,000,000 servants. Of these, 6,000,000 heads of families practice agriculture, and have 11,000,000 members of families which shows them to constitute the most prolific class, and employ 1,282,035 servants. The number of clergymen in France amounts to 151,000; of vagabonds, 489,000; of insane, 53,000, of which 25,000 are men and 28,000 are women. France harbors 20,000 male and 15,000 female idiots; 18,000 male and 13,000 female blind persons; and 13,000 male and 10,000 female deaf and dumb.

In the way of domestic animals, France boasts 3,000,000 horses, 299,000 mules, 451,000 asses, 11,000,000 pairs of cattle, 5,000,000 hogs, 25,000,000 sheep, 2,000,000 goats, 2,000,000 turkeys, 3,000,000 geese, 11,000,000 ducks, 115,000,000 chickens, 7,000,000 pigeons, 2,250,744 dogs, and an untold number of cats, making all in all some 150,000,000 of animals, or about four to every inhabitant.

The Prussian Court.

It is a stiff, stern military court under strict discipline, but very splendid on occasion. Those parsimonious kings of Prussia can dine 1,500 guests in state at their palace and have 400 lackeys in liveries to wait upon them. But the daily life of the German monarch and his family is very simple and inexpensive. Their equipages differ in nothing from those of private persons, save that the Empress Queen sometimes goes out with four indifferent horses and an outrider. The Crown Prince and Princess merely have an ordinarily brougham and pair, of a sort rather shabby than otherwise. The king sits daily at an open window of his palace and walks about without guards or attendants, like the poorest of his subjects; but notwithstanding this absence of pomp and all the outward manifestations of royalty he is so careful of his authority that he will not speak one word—no, not even to Prince Bismarck upon any political subject unconnected with the particular department over which the Prince presides. The fact accounts for much that was inexplicable during the late war. The king would never consult Bismarck on military matters nor Moltke upon diplomacy, and consequently they often gave contrary advice which rather perplexed his Majesty. Court etiquette is very rigid in Prussia, but there are some few old and trusty friends who are privileged to speak freely to the Emperor King. Field Marshal Wrangle is one of them. It was he who advised the King to issue an order of arrest against his son.

A Senator's Palace.

"Castle Stewart," in the city of Washington, owned and recently occupied by Senator Stewart, of Nevada, is the admiration of all who see the internal arrangements and furnishing, surpassing in magnificent elegance anything else to be seen in that city. The parlor chairs, sofas, etc., are beautifully carved and finished in gilt, while the mirrors, cornices and brackets are made in keeping with the draperies, and curtains in harmony with the rest. The furniture of the sitting-room is of the most luxurious style, with book-cases, cabinets and splendid mirrors. The dining-room is finished in black walnut, the chairs are covered with the finest morocco and ornament with gilt monogram, and everything in the room in perfect keeping. A very noticeable article is the hall mirror; the plate is the largest ever used for such a purpose, 'tis said. The glass measures six feet wide and ten feet high, costing over $1,000. The sleeping-rooms are fitted up in various colors of wood, such as Hungarian ash and mahogany, silver wood and ebony moldings, maple and black walnut, with every article conceivable, that could be used, made to correspond. The carpets and frescoing are in perfect harmony with the style of furniture used in the rooms, the whole making a display of elegance rarely excelled in this country.

An Earthquake Proof Hotel.

San Francisco glories in a new hotel which really seems to have some features not often found in that class of buildings. It is four stories high, and contains four hundred suites of rooms, yet is so constructed that the direct rays of the sun fall into every room at some time during the day—provided it isn't cloudy, we suppose. This is mainly effected by means of a large central court. But the peculiarity which especially endears it to the natives is the remarkable fact that it is earthquake proof, and hence may be considered a house of refuge in the midst of a quaking city. It is a compact framework of wood and iron, put together somewhat after the manner of a ship, and this is encased in walls of brick. The theory is, that in case of a very severe shake the brick walls will either have to stand up or fall outward, and so the inmates have only to keep in their rooms for safety. The rent of a suit of rooms, with board, ranges from two hundred and fifty to five hundred dollars a month, which will doubtless come up a trifle during the earthquake season.

Amendments to the Michigan Constitution.

The Michigan Legislature has adopted a number of amendments to the State Constitution, to be ratified or rejected by the people. Among the more important provisions are the following: No municipality shall aid in any way any association or corporation, nor shall it construct or own a railroad. No city or village shall incur a debt amounting to over 10 per cent. of its taxable valuation, unless a majority of the electors authorize the increase. The legislature shall have the power to prohibit discrimination by railroads to regulate the speed of trains, and to establish "reasonable maximum rates" for freight and passengers on railways and canals. No railroad corporation shall consolidate with a competing line, or have any arrangements about freights or fares with such a line. No person interested in a railroad shall be interested in supplying material to that railroad or in a company for transporting passengers or goods over its line. The consolidation of competing telegraph lines, even by the purchase of one by the other, shall be strictly forbidden. A woman's private property shall remain hers after marriage. Any property she acquires after marriage shall also be entirely hers. Her husband shall not be liable for her debts before marriage, nor for those "contracted by her in relation to her sole property after marriage." Women shall be eligible to the offices of Register of Deeds and Notary Public, to those connected with schools and libraries, and to any others hereafter designated by law. The interest on public funds, loaned or deposited, shall always be turned over to the State, municipality, or other owner of the funds. Convicts shall be taught no mechanical trade which will make their labor compete with that of Michigan mechanics. Special legislation is prohibited. Sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial. Neither the State nor any municipal coporation shall appropriate money for any sectarian purpose. "The Legislature shall not pass any act authorizing the grant of license for the sale of ardent spirits or other intoxicating liquors."

Your Age.

There is a good deal of amusement in the following magical table of figures. It will enable you to tell how old the young ladies are. Just hand this table to a young lady, and request her to tell you in which column or columns her age is contained; add together the figures at the top of the columns in which her age is found, and you have the great secret. Thus, suppose her age to be seventeen, you will find that number in the first and fifth columns; add the first figures of these two columns. Here is the magic table:

1	2	4	8	16	32
3	3	5	9	17	33
5	6	6	10	18	34

Useful Hints for the Home Circle.

To clean a browned porcelain kettle, boil peeled potatoes in it. The porcelain will be rendered nearly as white as when new.

Consumptives, and others in feeble health, we learn have been greatly benefited by drinking half a tumblerful of warm blood twice a day. At the last accounts a dozen persons were daily visiting the slaughter-house near Boston for the purpose stated. One person asserts that he has gained ten pounds in ten weeks. Another, thought to be a confirmed consumptive, says he is now strong enough to "knock down a bullock;" and a lady, suffering from paralysis for six years, is improving beyond her most sanguine hopes.

A hot shovel held over varnished furniture will take out white spots.

Save your suds for garpen plants, or for garden yards, when sandy.

If your flat-irons are rough, rub them with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

Wood ashes and common salt made compact with water, will stop the cracks of a stove, and prevent the smoke from escaping.

A gallon of strong lye put into a barrel of hard water will make it as soft as rain water.

If you are buying carpets for durability, choose small figures.

The "Poor Girl."

The correspondent of the Cincinnati Times, writing of the visit of the Legislative Committee to the Newburg Insane Asylum, says: "One of the fatherly Senators stepped up to one of the young lady attendants, and said, 'My poor girl, do you know how long you have been here?' The 'poor girl' smiled and replied, 'Nearly a year.' 'How long do you think you will have to stay?' continued the Senator, in the same sympathetic tone. 'Well, sir,' continued the fair lunatic, 'I shall probably stay till they stop my wages or I get married.' And she walked away laughing. The kind-hearted Senator looked after her with tears in his eyes, and murmured, 'Poor thing!' while the 'poor thing' related the affair to the matron and laughed till she cried."

THE Congressional Temperance Society has now on its roll, pledged to total abstinence, one-fourth of all the members of Congress.

Danberries.

A DANBURY young lady whose father is at the head of a gang of stone-cutters, explained to a visitor that he was a geologist.

ORANGES are so plenty now that the man who doesn't fall down and break some valuable bone is lacking in public spirit.

A DANBURY man having proudly proclaimed in the presence of his little boy that his wife was no gadder, the young man was observed to involuntarily rub his back, but he said nothing.

ON these rosy spring mornings a man instinctively bounds from his couch at the first flush of day, and goes forth to inhale the fresh balmy air, leaving his wife at the stove to thaw out the dishcloth.

NOT many men forget the wash-days of their boyhood, when a fond mother with parboiled and soapy fingers buttoned their collars for them. Its impression upon the heart and nose is rarely effaced.

A DANBURY man who recently lost his wife was asked by a friend, several days after, if she did not die suddenly. "Indeed she did," he explained with much feeling; "why, only a week afore there was a man around here that wanted to insure her, but I never dreamed of anything happening. And," he added, apologetically, "I don't believe anybody would have thought it to look at her."

A LADY who was in town, Saturday, with a spring hat on her head, was observed in one of the stores to be bareheaded, and a clerk called her attention to the fact. She incredulously put her hand up to her head and found that the hat was surely gone. The store floor was carefully searched, but without success. The lady then went out an the street, and almost the first object she perceived was the lost hat lying in the gutter. It had blown from her head as she was getting out of her carriage.

Fashion Notes.

LACE berthas are very much worn.

FLOWERS of tintid tin foil are something new.

THE shape of the new bonnet looks as though it had been repeatedly kicked.

BLACK lace sleeveless jackets lined with pink or blue are fashionable.

VERY long trailing skirts are out of style even for full dress occasions.

ARTIFICIAL fruit will form the most conspicuous trimming on new bonnets.

WHAT is known as "grass fringe" has superceded the heavy ball fringe used on the cloth suits during the winter.

THE fashionable shoe of the period is of kid and buttons at the side. It comes above the ankle and is handsomely finished.

THE ladies are wearing a wide belt heavily embroidered with black jet beads and fastened in front with a showy jet clasp.

SPRING dresses will just clear the ground behind and be sufficiently short in front to show the shoe tips; moderately scant skirts.

NEW importations in black grenadine suits are richly embroidered and worn over steel or lilac silk to exhibit the pattern and design.

Trades of Animals.

It has been well remarked by a clever author that bees are geometricians. The cells are so constructed as, with the least quantity of material, to have the largest sized spaces and the least possible interstices.

The mole is a meteorologist.

The torpedo, the ray and the electric eel are electricians.

Whole tribes of birds are musicians.

The beaver is architect, builder and wood-cutter. He cuts down trees, and erects houses and dams.

The marmot is a civil engineer. He not only builds houses, but constructs aqueducts and drains to keep them dry.

The ant is a soldier, and maintains a regular standing army.

Wasps are paper manufacturers.

Caterpillars are silk spinners.

The squirrel is a ferryman. With a chip or a piece of bark for a boat, and his tail for a sail, he crosses a stream.

Dogs, wolves, jackals, and many others, are hunters.

Black bears and herons are fishermen.

Ants are day laborers.

Monkeys are rope dancers.

FARM AND HOME.

A FARMER'S SONG.

We envy not the princely man,
In city or in town,
Who wonders whether pumpkin vines
Runs up the hill or down;
We care not for his marble halls,
Nor yet his heaps of gold,
We would not own his sordid heart
For all his wealth thrice told.

We are the favored sons of earth,
We breathe pure air each morn,
We sow—we reap the golden grain—
We gather in the corn;
We toil—we live on what we earn,
And more than this we do—
We hear of starving millions round,
And gladly feed them, too.

The lawyer lives on princely fees,
Yet drags a weary life,
He never knows a peaceful soul—
His atmosphere is strife.
The merchant thumbs his yardstick o'er,
Grows ragged at his toil—
He's not the man God meant him for—
Why don't you till the soil?

The doctor plods through storm and cold,
Plods at his parent's will,
When dead and gone he plods again
To get his lengthy bill.
The printer (bless his noble soul!)
He grasps the mighty earth,
And stamps it on our daily sheet,
To cheer the farmer's hearth.

We sing the honor of the plow,
And honor to the press—
Two noble instruments of toil,
With each a power to bless.
The bone—the nerve of this fast age—
True wealth of human kind—
One tills the ever generous earth,
The other tills the mind.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

Successful cattle-breeders in Europe give molasses constantly to fatten cattle and milch cows. A large German farmer gives a pint a day, mixed with oil cake to his cows, largely increasing their milk.

The bad farmer, despite of a good soil and home markets, will become bankrupt and wretched, while the industrious and intelligent shall triumph over every difficulty and find himself in the enjoyment of peace, prosperity and happiness.

Whenever good land is in a fair state of fertility and has been manured occasionally, clover sod plowed in fall and exposed to the cold of winter, or plowed immediately after a crop of hay is taken off, or, still better, if the crop of grass is plowed under about the time it is in bloom and left lie until seeding time, will always yield the best crop of wheat.

Dried Blood as a Fertilizer.—The process of granulating the blood of hogs, to be used as a fertilizer, is becoming a business of considerable importance in connection with the pork-packing establishments of the West. It is cooked and dried to a black powder, and is in fine grains. The blood of a hog is worth for this purpose about three cents before it is prepared. One establishment in Wisconsin, which uses up 5,000 swine per day, receives for the blood alone $150.

Depth and Distance of Drains.—Mr. John Johnson, the father of underdraining in this country, answers a correspondent in the Tribune, that he placed the drains in his stiff soils twenty-five to thirty-eight feet apart; and two and one-half feet is deep enough for economy and use; that thus deep tillage and manuring has brought him an average of forty-two bushels per acre over sixty-four acres; that by this means the average of the wheat crop can be made as high here as in the England, with keeping plenty of stock and making plenty of manure. He summer-fallows.

Covering Bridle Bits.—A friend to horses write as follows to the Farmers' Union: Take a strip of muslin two inches wide, dip it in melted beeswax, and when sufficiently cool lay it on the bit and wrap it over so as to cover the bit. One thickness of the muslin on the bit is sufficient. If there is a joint in the middle of it, the saturated muslin must be in two pieces, leaving the joint free. Beeswax is such a good non-conductor that, with the above dressing, bits will not require warming in the coldest weather. A thread wound at each end of the wrapping will better secure it from coming off. The above dressing will remain on, not only through the winter, but for a year or more if not taken off intentionally.

Sheep Raising Profitable.—In a recent report of the Department of Agriculture, A. C. Miller, of Calhoun county, Mich., gives a table showing the expenses, returns and profits in keeping 110 sheep, 70 ewes, 20 rams and 20 lambs:

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

To extract ink from cotton, silk and woolen goods, saturate the spots with spirits of turpentine, and let it remain several hours; then rub it between the hands. It will crumble away, without injuring either the color or texture of the article.

To clean cane seats, turn up the chair bottom and with hot water and a sponge wash the cane work so that it may be thoroughly soaked. Should it be dirty use a little soap. Let it dry in the air, and it will be as tight and firm as when new, provided the cane is not broken.

Stove luster, when mixed with turpentine and applied in the usual manner, is blacker, more glossy, and more durable than when mixed with any other liquid. The turpentine prevents rust, and when put on an old rusty stove will make it look as well as new.

Never put a particle of soap near your silver, if you would have it retain its original luster. When it wants polish, take a piece of soft leather and whiting and rub hard. The proprietor in one of the oldest silver establishments in Philadelphia says that "housekeepers ruin their silver by washing it in soap suds, as it makes it look like pewter."

When color on a fabric has been accidentally or otherwise destroyed by acid, ammonia is applied to neutralize the same, after which an application of chloroform will in almost all cases restore the original color. The application of ammonia is common, but that of chloroform is but little known. Chloroform will also remove paint from a garment or elsewhere, when benzole or bisulphide of carbon fails.

It is said that a solution of two-thirds of a pound of castile soap to a gallon of water laid on a damp wall as a wash, and next day followed by another wash of alum water—two ounces disolved in a gallon—will cure the inconvenience and prevent any further recurrence of it. It is so simple a thing that housekeepers troubled with damp places in their dwellings will be glad to try it for themselves. This answer to a question sent several months since to this column will, we trust, prove satisfactory.

Only those afflicted with chapped hands can appreciate the suffering of many hard workers during the winter months. We give a recipe that may be relied on as a cure for the malady: One ounce each of spermaceti, white beeswax, gum camphor, and two ounces of almond oil. Put in a tin cup, place in a vessel of boiling water, and melt together. Every time the hands are wet rub a little of this over them. Linseed oil and common beeswax will answer the purpose, but ointment is not so nice as the above.

USEFUL RECIPES.

Black Wash.—One qt. lime water; 1 drachm calomel. To be used for foul and indolent ulcers; excellent to wash saddle sores on horses' backs.

Tooth Ache Drops.—One oz. alcohol; 2 drachms Cayenne; one oz. kerosene oil; let it stand twenty-four hours after mixing. It cures the worst toothache.

Shoe Grease.—One pound of tallow; 1 pint bank oil (?); 1 oz lamp black. Melt the ingredients. This is the cheapest and best grease of any description.

Green Salve.—One quarter lb. of lard; 1 oz. rosin; 1 oz. beeswax; 1 drachm verdigris; melt and stir well. This is one of the best salves known for old sores, ulcers, cancers, scrofulus sores, cuts and wounds.

Hard Soap.—Six lbs. sal. soda; 4 gal. water. Put this together and let it come to a boiling point; let it settle and pour off; and add one-half lb. borax, 6 lbs. grease; then pour in dripping tins; let cool and cut in bars.

Hair Oil.—One pint of alcohol; 2 oz. castor oil; a few drops of perfumery. Shake well to cut the oil. This is a splendid and nicely perfumed hair oil; it softens the hair, promotes its growth, and prevents its falling out.

Hair Restorative.—One drachm of sugar of lead; 2 drachms lac sulphur; 8 oz. rose water, mix, and shake every time it is used. Apply once a day for a week, and twice a week thereafter. This restores gray hair to its original color.

Arnica Liniment.—Two oz. alcohol; 1 drachm tincture arnica. Unequaled for pains in the feet and limbs from walking; for all fresh or recent sprains, bruises or contused wounds, and for rheumatism of the joints and gouty pains.

A Watch Trade.

Old Davis, of Ossipee—the well-known shingle and clapboard autocrat of thirty years ago—had a dog named Watch. The dog had become old and a nuisance. Davis had threatened often to kill the brute, and had as often relented.

One day Sam Brown, the Concord peddler, drove up to Davis' store, but Davis wanted to buy nothing.

"Can't I sell you a clock? I've got 'em as cheap as dirt, and real good ones."

"I haven't got the money."

"Drat the money! I'll take a fair exchange of anything."

Davis scratched his head, whereat Brown continued:

"Come, we'll have a trade somehow. You've got to have one of my clocks. What have you got to exchange for it?"

"I've got nothing but a watch."

"Eh?—a watch?"—cried the peddler, brightening up. "What kind of a watch?"

"'Tain't, of course, a very good one, or I wouldn't want to trade it off."

"What kind o' cases?"

"I can't say much for the cases, but the insides are in good order, and it runs well. It'll let you know when feedin' time comes, sartin."

"How'll you trade?"

"I'll give you my watch for one of your clocks, and call it a bargain, without any 'ifs' or 'ands.'"

"Done!" cried Brown, and he selected a steeple-topped Connecticut clock and brought it into the store. "There's your clock. Now where's your watch?"

Davis went to the door and whistled, and called:

"Watch! Watch! Here, old fellow, you're wanted!"

The dog came in with a bound.

"That's the watch, Brown. You'll find his in'ards perfect, and can run like Sancho; and when it comes meal time, if he don't let you know it, I'm mistaken in him."

The peddler gasped and staggered, and he said something not quite proper to ears polite; but he did not back down. He only said, as he hitched the dog to the axle-tree of his wagon and prepared to drive off:

"Somebody'll pay me for that clock before night."

And I opine that there are hundreds of people to-day in that section of New Hampshire who have a firm belief that they helped to pay old Brown for that clock.

Spring Bonnets.

The spring bonnets or hats (there is very little difference) are to be trimmed entirely with flowers, fruit, lace and ribbons. The straw shapes are very much the same as the winter ones. The face trimming will consist of a wreath of flowers going completely around the hat and under the braid or curls at the back of the head.

Designs of the Monopolists.

The following is an extract from a letter received by one of our citizens from a well-known and prominent gentleman of New York. It is important as showing the intensity of feeling caused by the doings of the monopolists:

"The monopolists of the East seem madly bent upon rushing upon their own destruction. The events of the last few days in Congress and elsewhere are full of significance to the thoughtful student.

"Is Wall street mad, that this ruin shall come? The people have lost hope in the Government and their patience is exhausted. The speech of Sherman in the Senate is the voice of Wall street and the majority in the Senate. This body has its plan for years, no matter what the House of Representatives may do. Nothing but that madness which is born of avarice can be so blind as not to see the irreconcilable determination of the West (and in this the South will join) to find a prompt solution. The West can at any time start the cry of secession. When this is done it will differ widely from the former attempt of the South to break the bonds which held them.

"The South attempted this and moved to force that it might perpetrate a direct and disgraceful system of wrong. If the West moves to obtain its freedom from the tyranny of monopoly for the sole benefit of one class in our section, it is because of the oppression of the East, and can be compared only to closing the door against life's resources; thus killing the goose that lays the golden egg. Already the signs are cropping out. This movement is not one to be awed into subjection by recourse to arms, for no arms will be taken by those in the East who alone can bear them. Many may, indeed, buy the arms, but many to-day in such an issue will not buy the men to bear them.

"Such a movement once set in motion will be found such a positive demand that, like an over-charged fountain, it will shun old barriers and find new channels to the sea.

"The great flood now rising in the West, spurns the mean defiances of the East, and rising in its might, will find, ere another year has passed, a more profitable channel for its tide of gold and grain. Then the starving seaboard may look in vain for the evidence of its great commerce. Poh! poh! sneeringly cries the monopolists; yet, just as surely as time rolls on, and the sun rises and sets, just so surely this is the next great result—the outgrowth of causes it requires no prophet to disclose. Western men who represent power no longer to be despised, say, 'We mean business at once. We only wait with bated breath to see the determination of the Government at Washington, and we have the men at work already who will carry this into execution, while your miserable Government is quibbling over straws.' Yet, in face of all this, madness rules the hour. Nero fiddles while the match is being lighted. The glory of the nation is departing.—New Haven Union.

Anti-Monopoly.

The accounts published in the newspapers of the meetings of the Granges, Farmers' Clubs and Associations, indicate an activity among the Anti-Monopolists of the country, not unlike that displayed in former times, of Republican and Democratic meetings, on the eve of an important election. This looks very much as though the Anti-Monopolists would be the most thoroughly organiged party which has ever entered the political field, when the time for action arrives.

There is no question of their power to sweep the Northwest, and probably the whole country, if their organization shall prove as perfect as it appears to be, and should their nominations prove acceptable to those in favor of reform, outside their organizations, the old political parties will be buried past all possibility of a resurrection.

The probabilities are that the next election will result in a more sweeping change of office holders than has ever been witnessed in this country, as but comparatively few in office have kept their hands entirely clean of the corrupting influences which have in some shape grown up and pervaded all the departments of general, State and municipal governments, and which the people are fully arroused to the importance of eradicating—root and branch. It is well understood that the very life of the Government, as well as the material interests of the people demand that this shall be done. Men, fresh from the people and of the people, must replace political leeches who have fed and grown corrupt upon public office.

Extravagance and wastefulness must be stopped. Monopolies of every description abolished, a general reduction of salaries to a fair and equitable standard inaugurated, and honesty and capacity alone made the test of a man's fitness to hold office.

This is the line of policy the Anti-Monopolists propose to inaugurate and carry out, and to which all the people (save the politicians) say amen.—Kewanee (Ill.) Independent.

Patron's Song.

Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.—
From o'er the broad prairie,
Adown the steep mountain,
They come from their eyrie,
To meet at the fountain.
Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.

Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.
What means the loud tramping,
Disturbing our slumber?
Are they only encamping
In myriad number?
Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.

Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.
In the great uprising
Portends there no evil?
To wait their devising,
Would that be uncivil?
Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.

Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.
Gather up to the front,
Sun-burnt sons of the soil,
For on you falls the brunt
Of the Nation's turmoil.
Gathering, gathering,
The farmers are gathering all over the land.

The Manufacturing Spirit.

The Missouri Grangers have done several things that we ought to thank them for; one of them, not to mention others, is the active and resolute interest in local manufacture they have awakened. We referred to this matter some time ago; but the interest of the Grangers is steadily increasing. There are meetings in various parts of the State to organize stock companies, with shares of $50 each, for manufacturing agricultural implements and other similar articles which do not call for the highest kind of skilled labor. This is as good a beginning as could be made, and the Grangers deserve credit for what they are doing. Few persons have an adequate conception of the immense sums of money sent out of Missouri every year for agricultural machinery and implements—reapers, mowers, threshers, plows, cultivators, cradles and handles. These articles are so high as to consume a large portion of the farmer's profit. Indeed, there are experienced farmers who assert that farming cannot be successfully prosecuted with what is called agricultural machinery; it costs so much because it is manufactured abroad; the carriage adds very largely to the price which the farmer is made to pay for it. Farming implements do not call for a very high order of skill in their manufacture they can be made as cheaply and as good in Missouri as elsewhere, and if made at home, they can also be repaired at home, a very important advantage. We need more manufacturers in our State, to save the money now annually paid out to support the industries of other States, and the Grangers will do both themselves and the State a good turn by persisting in their present effort till all the farm implements needed shall be made on our own soil, of our own timber and iron.—St. Louis Republican.

The "Door Test" and Character.

A correspondent of the Scientific American gives the following novel manner for measuring men's characters:

During the last ten years, in the winter season, according to our daily record, we have noticed the manner in which one thousand persons who called for work have opened, shut, or not shut, our store door; this you may say is a futile and useless undertaking, but we entertain a very different opinion. What are the facts and what the deductions?

1. Out of 1,000 persons recorded, 334 opened the door and shut it carefully when they came in and when they went out, without much noise.

2. Two hundred and twenty-six opened it in a hurry, and made an attempt to shut it but did not, and merely pulled it to when they went out.

3. Three hundred and two did not attempt to shut it at all, either on coming in or going out.

4. Ninety-six left it open when they came in, but when reminded of the fact, made ample apology and shut it when they went out.

5. One hundred and two opened it in a great hurry, and then slammed it to violently, but left it open when they went out.

6. Twenty came in with "How do you do, sir?" or "Good morning," or "Good evening, sir," and all these went through the operation of wiping their feet on the mat, but did not shut the door when they came in nor when they went outr

Deductions.—The correspondent goes on to say that he has employed men out of all the above classes, and during that time he has had an opportunity of judging of their merits, etc.

The first class, of 335, were those who knew their trade, and commenced and finished their work in a methodical manner, were quiet, and had little to say in their working hours, and were well approved by those for whom they did the work. They were punctual to time, and left nothing undone which they were ordered to do. They did not complain about trifles, and in all respects they were reliable men, and were kind and obliging in their general conduct.

It should be appreciated, in this connection, that the simple act of closing a door may combine a large number of qualities, and so be really a manifestation of personal character. The description of the 335 just given indicates that they possessed well-balanced temperaments, with large cautiousness, approbativeness, constructiveness, large perceptive faculties, with a good degree of firmness, benevolence, human nature, and comparison, while the black-head was but moderately developed in combativeness. Order is evinced by those who open and shut doors with ease.

A Hundred Years Ago.

One hundred and ten years ago there was not a single white man in what is now Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, or Illinois. Then, what is now the most flourishing part of the United States, was as little known as the country in the heart of Africa itself. It was not till 1766 that Boone left his home in North Carolina to become the first settler in Kentucky. And the first pioneers of Ohio did not settle till twenty years later still. A hundred years ago Canada belonged to France, and Washington was a modest Virginia Colonel, and the United States the most loyal part of the British empire, and scarcely a speck on the political horizon indicated the struggle that in a score of years was to lay the foundation of the greatest republic in the world.

A hundred years ago there were but four small newspapers in America; steam engines had not been imagined, and locomotives, and steamboats, and railroads, and telegraphs, and postal cards and friction matches, and revolvers, and percussion caps, and breech-loading guns, and stoves and furnaces, and gas for dwellings, and India rubber shoes, and Spaulding's glue, and sewing machines, and anthracite coal, and photographs, and chromo paintings, and kerosene oil, and the safety lamp, and the compound blow-pipe, and free schools, and spring mattresses, and wood engraving, and Brussels carpet, and lever watches, and greenbacks, and cotton and woolen factories, in anything like the present meaning of these terms, were utterly unknown.

A hundred years ago the spinning-wheel was in almost every family, and clothing was spun and woven and made up in the household, and the printing press was a cumbrous machine worked by hand; and a nail, or a brick, or a knife, or a pair of shears or scissors or a razor, or a woven pair of stockings, or an ax, or hoe, or shovel, or a lock or key, or a plate of glass of any size was not made in what is now the United States. Even in 1790 there were only seventy-five postoffices in the country, and the whole extent of our post routes was less than 1,900 miles. Cheap postage was unheard of, and had any one suggested the transmission of messages with lightning speed he would have been thought utterly insane. The microscope, on one hand, and the telescope on the other, were in their infancy as instruments of science; and geology and chemistry were almost unknown. In a word, it is true that to the century passed have been allotted more improvements, in their bearing on the comfort and happiness of mankind, than to any other which has elapsed since the creation of the world.

With all these wonderful improvements within the century, who would allow such narrow and contracted views as to object to a suitable Centennial celebration of the marvelous progress of the age?—Baltimore American.

Barbarians.

Prior to the time of Peter the Great, the Russians were, in general, barbarous, ignorant, mean, and much addicted to inebriation. Not only the common people, but many of the nobles, lived in a continual state of idleness and intoxication; and while the court of Moscow was the most splendid of any upon the globe, the streets of that city were filled with objects of misery and barbarity.

FIVE JACKS BEATS FOUR ACES.

From the Fort Smith (Ark.) Herald.

During the session of the United States District grand jury, a witness was called before them named Scipio Choteau, a half-breed Creek Indian and negro, bright, sharp and intelligent. He was the last witness to be called before adjournment that day. After examination, some one of the grand jury who knew him asked if he was not the man who had four aces beaten.

He answered, 'Yes,sah, I'se de man.'

'Will you have any objection to telling it?'

'I'se afeard it will get me into trouble; but if the judge is willin,'' appealing to the foreman, 'I will tell it.'

The judge consented, then Scipio said:

'You see I live on the cattle trail from Texas through the Creek country to Kansas, and I was on the road one day, and I meets a gentleman ahead of a big drove of cattle.

He says, 'Old man, do you live in dis country.'

I say, Yes sah.'

He says, 'Its a mighty poor country. How do you make a livin' ?'.

I says, Sah, 'tis a putty good country; we have plenty meat and bread, and I makes a good liv n' a——

He say, 'Old man, do you ever play keeds ?'

I say, 'Yes, sah, I does sometimes.'

He says. 'Would you have any objection to play a little draw ?'

I says, 'No, sah.'

So we gets off our horses along side de road, and sat down, and I pulls out de kerds. Well, in a short time I beat the gentleman out of sixty-two dollars and a half, and I tought I had him; so I puts up a hand on—for I is, do I say it myself, a mighty smart hand at korde—and I know'd he wo'd hab three jacks and I would hab three aces and in de draw I know'd he would git de oder jack and I git de oder ace. So he raises a bit, and I raises on back, till at last I put up all de money I had winned from de gemmen and all de change I had, and I knowed I had him. Well, in de draw de gent got de oder jack and I got de oder ace. De gent wanted to bet, but I claimed a sight for de money, and I told him I had an inwincible hand dat couldn't be beat.

He says, 'Old man, dem is right good britches you is got on; how much did dey cost ?'

I says, 'Yes, sah; dey cost me ten dollars.'

He says, 'I put up ten dollars agin dem.'

I says, 'Berry well, sah; but I tells you I got a inwincible hand.'

He puts up de money, and I holds up my legs and he pulls off the britches and lays em down.

'Now, sah,' I says, 'I had a inwincible hand. I's got fo' aces.'

De gent says, 'Old man, did you ever hear of five jacks beatin' fo' aces.,

I says, I's heard it, sah, but I's never seed it; and if you conwince me ob it, de money's yourn.'

'Berry well,' he says, laying down one keerd; 'ain't dat de jack of clubs?'

'Yes, sah,' I says, 'dat am de jack of clubs.'

He lays down anoder keerd; 'aint that the jack of spades ?'

'Yes, sah, dat is de jack of spades.'

He lays down anoder; and says. 'Ain't dat the jack ob diamonds ?'

'Yes, sah, dat is de jack ob diamonds.'

He puts down anoder; and says, 'Ain't dat de jack ob hearts ?'

I says, Yes, sah, dat am de jack ob hearts.'

Den he runs bis hand in his bosom, and pulls out a great long pistol and points it at me, and says, 'Ain't dat jack haul ?'

I says, 'Yes, sah.'

And he says, Ain't dat five jacks ? and don't dat win de money ?'

I says, 'Yes, sah, dat is jack haul, and dat is five jacks, and five jacks beats an inwincible hand.'

So he puts de money in his pocket, and ties my britches on 'hind od his saddle, and tells me to scatter—and I did.

You see, it served me right; for I thought de man was a green Missourian when I put up de hand on him; but he was a Arkansaw chap, and I finds them mighty sharp, judge.

The above is vouch by the foreman and several members of the grand jury as fact—every word of it.

THE MOUNTAIN MIRROR.

BY M. S. C. S.

It is called "The Mountain Mirror,"
That minute little lake,
Like a dewy eye of azure,
So clear and wide awake.

And lies among the mountains,
A trembling shining thing;
Such a heaving heart of sunshine,
An everlasting Spring.

Oh! what wild and thrilling legends,
It's bubbled waves could say,
With their lisping waves of silver,
Their reaching rings of spray.

Of the swift and painted warrior,
The darting, birch canoe;
Of dark-eyed maids, with shining braids,
And cheeks of dusky hue.

How its quivering arms encircle,
Another arching sky.
That within a frame of silver,
Seems placidly to lie.

And God, whose hand hath placed it there,
To gush with sweet intent,
Hath written on its tranquil breast,
A lesson of content.

THE TORY'S WARD.

BY CAPT. CHAS. HOWARD.

CHAPTER I.
MAJOR WOOLLERN.

Bright and early one hazy morning in the brown leaf month, October, 1777, a courier drew rein before Gen Howe's headquarters in Philadelphia. The coal black courser which he bestrode was reeking with foam, and the man drew a breath of relief as he sprang to the ground, and tossed the lines to a sable groom who made his appearance.

Entering the grand old colonial mansion over which waved the flag of St. George, the bearer of dispatches found Howe conversing with several generals, and at the same time, dictating orders to his private secretary who wrote at a handsome marble table.

'Well,' began the commander, suddenly starting towards the courier, whose face declared him the bearer of the startling tidings: 'What brings you thither so early in the day?'

'I come from Saratoga,' answered the messenger respectfully saluting the general, 'and I have the regret to report that General Burgoyne and his army are prisoners of war.'

Howe started back, and an oath fell from his lips.

'This is an unlooked for disaster,' remarked one of the officers. 'It must be remedied, and that speedily.'

'By jove! it shall,' cried Howe, like a man suddenly aroused from a lethargy. 'If we can keep our own secrets and effectually bar this city against the rebel spies, we can retrieve our fortunes, and put a speedy end to this rebellion'

"But, general, can we keep their spies out of Philadelphia?' meekly asked his adjutant general, a handsome, smooth faced young man of six and twenty.

'We can if we will,' answered Howe assuredly, and then his voice dropped to a lower tone. 'We must strike at once to inspire confidence in ourselves among the troops I will now teach our city rebels what it is to secrete rebel spies. They are doing it every day and that before our very eyes. Hereafter we will not correspond with the enemy on the capture of a spy. We will pull him up and acquaint Washington with his death. Gentlemen I summon you to a council of war to be held in this room to-night, I would have you all here by eight; do not fail to act promptly. We must wipe out the disgrace at Saratoga and that, as Kyphausen has said, speedily.'

A few moments later the general officers had departed, and Howe was closeted with the fatigued courier.

Major Woollern the adjutant-general, lighted a cigarette, and enveloped in a cloud of snowy smoke, strolled leasurely from the room.

'I wonder where Emma is this morning,' he murmured, glancing about as he stepped upon an elegant verandah. 'No doubt she is dreaming of her brilliant victory of last night. Never before played I euchre so poorly. Had I been playing for hearts, I would have lost.'

'Perhaps Major Woollern played for hearts, after all, last night.'

The silvery voice caused the soldier to start, and a deep blush crimsoned his temples. He did not dream that his words could reach ears save his own. He looked up quickly, therefore, and beheld a lovely young girl gathering honeysuckle seeds at the further end of the porch. She did not appear to notice him; but there was a mischievous smile about her deep red lips, which grew broader as he advanced towards her.

'So, Miss Emma, you would taunt me with my defeat,' he said pleasantly, pausing at her side and looking into her laughing eyes. 'Well I own that I played miserably last night hence your victory.'

'However well Major Woollern plays I can euchre him,' she answered boastingly. 'No doubt Burgoyne played well, but ——'

'Then you have heard the news,' he said, interrupting her.

'Father told me but a moment since. It was quite unexpected.'

'Yes; we had expected much from Burgoyne, and Clinton was marching to his aid. Miss Emma, we are not going to smart under defeat long continued the major, growing excited 'to-night we mature plans that will wipe out the disgrace.'

'Ah! Major, I fear I shall lose faith in you as a prophet,' she remarked not seeming to notice his last words 'This is the twentieth of October you see.'

Major Woollern bit his finely chiselled lips, and his gaze sank beneath the maidens eyes.

'And Washington the arch rebel is at large and at the head of an army!'

There lurked a sneer of triumph in her tone.

'True, Miss Emma, I am not going to prophesy again, but the rebellion will terminate before St. Valentine's.'

'Not going to prophesy again, Major, ha! ha! ha!' and her clear laugh rang out melodiously on the bracing autumn air. 'The final triumph of the gonfalon of St. George is but a question of time. But you will not play to-night?'

'Regretfully I say that I cannot,' he answered. 'Heaven knows that I would rather serve Venus than Mars.'

She did not reply but returned to the frosted vines again, and for several minutes he aided her in her honeysuckle harvest.

Howe suddenly called his adjutant from the beauty's side.

'Major, can you not remain a moment from that girl's side?' said the general putting on a stern face. 'I brought you from England to serve Mars, not Cupid; our king prefers fighting to love making; and besides the girl isn't as true as steel.'

Major Argent Woollern who was looking at the floor and crimsoning under the general's reprimand, started at the last words, and the pallor of indignation drove the blushes away.

'If every soul in Philadelphia was as loyal as hers, your excellency, we would not fear for treason in the camp' he cried. 'Her heart is as true as the steel in this blade,' and the youthful adjutant drew his trusty Damascus sword and bent it until the glistening point touched the jeweled hilt. I know Emma Hunter; you know her guardian; he would have no traitors about him.'

'Forgive me, my dear Woollern,' said Howe, relaxing his stern expression, and smiling as he came forward 'I was merely trying your good nature I do not doubt Miss Hunter's loyalty, nor her guardians. But I have use for you. Here, sit down and listen to my dictations.'

The young officer sheathed his sword, and a moment later he was writing busily at the table.

Howe paced the room dictating to his adjutant, who ever and anon glanced through the window at Emma Hunter, half concealed by the dying climbers.

He loved the tory's beautiful ward and blessed the day that first threw him into her presence. In the fullness of his adoration, he had disclosed to her ears more than one official secret, and the purport of which had, some how or other, reached American camps.

Howe would shake his head and wonder who was the spy, but his vigilance availed him naught. When the British army first entered Philadelphia, old Montjoy Hall was the first to fling his doors wide to its generals, and Howe had rewarded his loyalty by making his noble old mansion his headquarters. During Washington's last occupation of the Quaker City, the tory had given the Americans much uneasiness, by his fearless devotion to the king and his boisterous tongue. Washington at last tired of the tory, and expelled him from the city; but with the British troops he returned, and lived in the element he loved, fearless and independent.

So Burgoyne has surrendered,' murmured Emma Hunter as she sat in her chamber assorting the pretty black seeds which she had gathered. 'At last a northern wind has blown some hearts some good, and the cause of liberty is striking towards success. God speed the day of Washington's great triumph. But I must look to my papers; really I have forgotten to lock my drawers.'

She started forward paused before an antique and elaborately carved escritoire. Her face was pale as ashes; but the color returned when she opened a tiny drawer and put her hand on a package of yellowish papers.

Carefully she unbound them and looked them over.

One read thus:

'Admit the bearer, a true patriot, into our lines.
GEO. WASHINGTON.'

These brief words were enough to hang the tory's ward, and her life would be worth but little, if she was caught with these papers in her possession.

CHAPTER II.
A RIDE IN THE DARK.

At the time of which I write, Indian summer clothed the city of Brotherly Love in her beautiful robes and the soft gleamings caused the poetic heart to think of paradise. The ruddy leaves were dropping slowly from the trees, and the stately Delaware reflected like a mirror the keels of many boats.

The spacious gardens attached to the Hall mansion looked upon the river, and when the beautiful gleaming came, Major Woollern found himself seated on a rustic settee in a delightful arbor. He was looking into the face of the tory's ward, who was straining her cerulean eyes over a piece of delicate embroidery.

'What are you thinking about, Miss Emma? he asked, smiling.

She started, and looked up.

'Of the war.'

'Ah! fair ladies should think of love, not war. That is the soldier's dream,' he said. 'But pray tell me your thoughts; perhaps I can have the honor of presenting them to the council to-night.'

'Indeed!'

'Howe is determined that they shall awe and trouble us no longer.'

'I am glad of that. I have blushed for shame to think that Washington's flag floats within eight miles of Philadelphia. Will the council last long to-night?'

'Scarcely an hour. Howe's plans are perfected now, and his generals have but to say yes or no.'

'Then I shall remain up until the termination of your council. Major you will reward my wakefulness with its result?'

'Miss Emma, that would be disobedience of a sacred duty,' he said.

Major Woollern has never disobeyed, then,' and she smiled mockingly yet bewitchingly as she spoke.

'Beauty led Marc Antony to his fate. I fear it will lead a certain British major to his, he answered half seriously.

'A soldier should meet his fate like a man, whatever it may be.'

I will, Miss Emma.'

'Then you will inform me how soon forts Mercer and Mifflin are to quarter the soldiers of the King.'

'Yes; but what is to reward my unfaithfulness to his Majesty?'

Her eyes sought the embroidery again, and without resisting she permitted him to take her hand.

'When Thesus slew the miniataur he was rewarded with Arlonde's hand.' he continued, in a lover's tone. 'Shall not a hand as fair as hers reward the soldier of his king?'

'Major Woollern I never dreamed of this,' she answered quickly and with a trembling voice. 'I am not prepared to answer now.'

'Emma, your silence tortures me. I cannot endure it. When will you speak?'

'When the British flag waves over the American forts.'

He rose to his feet.

'It shall wave over them soon,' he said, with determination. I will place it there with my own hands, and I will, please heaven return to hear your answer.'

A minute later they deserted the arbor, and re-entered the mansion, where they separated. Major Woollern sought General Howe's room where the council had already assembled

Emma Hunter glided to the stables, and with her own hands caparisoned a black horse, which snorted to be free.

The skies were dark overhead, and afar to the south the lightning—strange sight for autumn—was flashing furiously. Several drops of rain struck the girl's hands as she returned to the house and sought her room, taking up a volume she seated herself at the table, but did not read. She heard a confused murmur of voices in the room below, but could catch no intelligible sounds. The council lasted till ten o'clock, and when the girl heard the generals taking their departure, she closed the book and descended.

By and by Major Woollern joined her on the porch.

'You have experienced a stormy time, no doubt, Major,' she said with a smile. 'I had hoped to play to you to-night, but we must defer the pleasure. What of the forts?'

On the night of the twenty-second we surprise them,' he answered in the lowest of whispers 'and the sun that rises after that night of victory, shall shine on our flag on the ramparts. I Miss Emma, will place the banner here; then I come to you.

He gallantly took her hand and gallantly raised it to her lips.

Half an hour later the tory's lovely ward, attired in a close fitting suit of black, swept like a spectre to the stables, and led the sable horse through the garden to a narrow road that led down the river bank.

Without assistance she mounted the saddle, and spoke gently to the steed, which started forward like a thunderbolt. Never a word the heroic girl breathed as she rode away, but she listened for the stern 'halt!' or the whiz of a musket in the dark.

Fortune favored her, for she successfully eluded the British pickets, and at last the far-flashing lightning revealed the walls of Fort Mercer.

'Thank heaven!' were the first words that fell from her lips, and then she heard the command to halt.

She drew rein, and rode slowly up to the American picket.

'Your pass, miss.'

She handed him a paper, and by the lightning he saw the name of Geo Washington, written in the hero's own bold chirography.

Then he stepped aside, and Emma Hunter rode on toward the fort.

The old gray-bearded son of Mars, who held the post, started when she entered his narrow cell-like room, as though she were an apparition. In a firm tone she communicated the result of General Howe's council of war, and received the thanks of the old commandant.

'We'll show them a thing or two when they come,' he said with a smile We will not tamely relinquish our guard over the Delaware.'

When Emma Hunter rode from the fort a young soldier walked by her horse's side.

Emma, he said, just beyond reach of the picket's ear, 'when will you answer me?

'When you march down the streets of Philadelphia, beneath the stars and stripes.'

'God hasten that day, then,' he said fervently, and carried her hand to his lips ere they parted.

Then the black horse dashed up the river again, and an hour later Emma Hunter's fair head pressed the snowy pillow.

On the night of the 22nd of October, 1777, the citizens of Philadelphia were startled by the terrific roar of a distant cannon. Howe smiled, and rubbed his hands with glee; but after listening an hour, he turned deadly pale. The Americans were prepared to receive his troops, and treason, very naturally, suggested itself to the British general.

After a while a courier arrived from the mouth of the Delaware with bad news for the commander. His troops had been compelled to retire from Ft. Mercer with a loss of four hundred of their number, among them the gallant Hessian general, Count Donop. But this was not all. Major Woollern, the gallant lover Woollern, had fallen in the act of planting the English flag on the ramparts of the fort. At his own request, he had been permitted to accompany the expedition. Emma Hunter turned away, sick at heart, when she heard of the gallant fellow's fate. She loved him—she could not deny it now; but he was gone!

But time brought wondrous changes to Philadelphia. On the 8th of June in the following year, the British evacuated the city; and when the young soldier who accompanied our heroine from Fort Mercer, marched down the streets flushed with victory, she gave him her hand.

Howe never knew that his headquarters sheltered a lover of liberty, and when peace came to America's blood drenched soil, Washington acknowledged, in fitting testimonials, the aid rendered him during the patriot struggle by 'The Tory's Ward.'

Dreams.

Some philosopher, who evidently knows how it is himself, interprets dreams as follows:

If a man dreams the devil is after him, it is a sign he had better settle his subscription bill.

If he dreams of an earthquake, and a turmoil generally, it is a sign that he is going to get married.

If he (being a married man) dreams of some fearful mysterious danger, it is a sign that his mother-in-law is coming to spend a few days with her darling daughter.

WASHINGTON dispatches indicate that the British Government will accept the invitation to participate in the forthcoming Centennial Celebration at Philadelphia as soon as the question whether the celebration is to be international or national has been settled by ourselves.

THE practice of "hazing" has been carried on to an unusual extent at the Annapolis Naval Academy lately, and Secretary Robeson threatens to dismiss the offenders if it is not stopped.

THE French steamship Europa recently sank at sea, while on the voyage from Havre to New York. Her passengers, 400 in number, were rescued by a passing steamer and taken to Queenstown.

THE vessel and cargo of the wrecked steamship Europe it is estimated were worth in the neighborhood of two and a quarter millions of dollars. She was one of the largest vessels belonging to the General Transatlantic line.

A COMBINATION has been formed between the Union Pacific Railway Company and the Panama and Pacific Mail Steamship Company for the purpose of destroying competition in rates of transportation to the Pacific coast. This is undoubtedly a good thing for the companies, but pretty hard on the traveling public and those who have to transport goods between the East and West.

Foreign.

BY the arrival of the steamer Alaska at San Francisco we have dates from Japan to the 10th of March. The annual exhibition at Kioto was opened March 1, within the walls of the Mikado's former residence, and for the first time the interior of the imperial dwelling was made visible to the public. The insurrection in the district of Saga has been completely quelled There is a serious discontent among the old military class on account of the proposed substitution of a definite sum of money for the annual pensions now received by that body. The Japan Mail recently published a long and violent attack upon United States Minister Bingham.

REPORTS from the seat of the war in Spain continue to be conflicting. The Carlists claim that dissensions have broken out in the army in Bilboa, which will lead to the early fall of the city into their hands. They also claim that less than half of their force was engaged in the recent engagement at Bilboa.

REPORTS from the famine districts of India show a general improvement in the condition of the people, except in the northwestern portion of Tishart, where over 500,000 persons are still dependent upon the Government. The spring crop is good except in Tishart....The latest news from Cuba states that a severe engagement took place recently at Guasiamia between the Spaniards and insurgents, which resulted in the defeat of the former with great loss. The rout of the Spaniards was complete, and it is doubtful if they will be able to recover from the effects of the drubbing they received for a considerable time to come.

Upward of 60,000 Republicans and Carlists are concentrating within the space of a few square miles of Bilboa, and it is evident that a decisive battle must soon be fought....Paris papers publish the full text of the dispatch from the Austrian Premier, Von Beust, to Prince Metternich, the Austrian Minister at Paris, dated July, 1870, saying: "We consider the cause of France as our own, but the alliance of Russia and Prussia prevents the armed intervention of Austria." Von Beust advises Prince Metternich to suggest that the good will of Italy may be obtained, and the mediation of that Government in the settlement of the Franco-Prussian difficulty secured, if France will permit the occupation of Rome by the Italians.

SERRANO'S plan of operations against the works of the Carlists before Bilbao has been pronounced impracticable by a council of war, and has therefore been abandoned.

CREMATION.

An Association of Corpse-Burners Organized in New York—Revolting Speech by One of the Crowd.

The subject of cremation, or burning the dead, has been discussed in a general way by the press of this country and Europe for several months past, and several associations for the advocacy of this mode of disposing of the dead have been formed in London, Paris, and other cities beyond the Atlantic. Not until very recently, however, has the matter taken any practical shape in this country. On the evening of the 3d inst., some fifty prominent citizens of New York met in Association Hall, in that city, to form a society to advocate burning instead of burying the bodies of the dead. Numerous letters and essays were read, and speeches delivered. The most distinguished of those who gave their assent to the movement by letter were Col. Alcott and Rev. Dr. Frothingham. The idea running through all the letters was quick destruction of the body—"that loathsome thing," as Mr. Bergh, President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, called it—and by the action of pure flame saving the survivors from the thought of loved forms in the condition of the dead knight, Orlando:

> "The worms crept in and the worms crept out
> His eyes, and his nose, and his temples about."

The writers also insisted on the propriety of reviving that ancient and poetic practice of cremation in the health point of view.

The speech of the evening was delivered by Ellis B. Schnable. He deplored the wastage of 130,000,000 of bodies every year buried deep into the ground, which ought to fructify the earth. He was not only for burning the bodies, but for scattering the ashes over the fields to fructify them; and thus, as he said, gourmands could rejoice in the idea that their elements would fructify plants; oxen would eat the plants, and men eat the oxen, and fat, jolly men's elements would live again in other men. He declared that the man who buried away the elements of his body is a thief. A dead man is no more than any other dead animal.

Mr. Henry Bergh warmly applauded the speech and went for total annihilation of the body after death.

Various committees were appointed to report to a future meeting, and those present were called upon to put down their names.

As it may be interesting to the American public to know who are the men that first put down their names in favor of burning their bodies, a list of the signers is appended: Samuel Sexton, John P. Pomeroy, Hugh M. Brown, F. C. Bowman, Geo. Lorillard, D. M. Bennett, Henry Stone, John Madison, R. D. Francis, James D. Wight, J. S. Arnold, H. W. Hageman, Francis M. Weld.

The Temperance Crusade.

The newspapers from all parts of the country, daily and weekly, continue to give accounts of the great temperance crusade, and the movement is apparently growing and spreading in all directions, East, West and South. We condense from the dispatches to the daily press a brief record of the progress of the movement in different sections:

ILLINOIS.

The movement has struck Princeton amidships, and promises to carry everything before it.

The temperance advocates of Chicago are still holding meetings, and threatening the saloon-keepers with prayer raids. No open demonstration has as yet been made.

The women of La Salle are organizing for a crusade against the saloonists.

The crusaders of Jacksonville are on the war-path, pushing the work bravely forward, but apparently with little effect on the liquor-venders.

In Galesburg the work of prayer is being prosecuted, but the saloon-keepers show a dogged obstinacy.

WISCONSIN.

Temperance meetings are the order of the day in Milwaukee. As yet the prayer test has not been applied, and probably will not be.

The prayer movement is being vigorously pushed in Ripon, but with indifferent success.

The friends of temperance in Oshkosh, Menasha and Appleton are keeping the ball in motion, and several conversions are reported.

INDIANA.

At Goshen the cause is reported to be gaining strength. The ladies, at a public meeting, have adopted the following resolution: "That we will not patronize any person or firm who does not sign the petition now in circulation, refusing to grant liquor-dealers license to sell rum."

The women of Indianapolis hold meetings daily, but will not attempt the prayer cure, or visiting of saloons.

MICHIGAN.

Schoolcraft has been invaded by the great temperance wave, and other towns in that vicinity are threatened.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Street-praying has been fully inaugurated in Wheeling, but with poor success thus far.

At St. Clairsville all the saloons have been prayed out of existence.

Many other towns have been struck by the tidal wave.

OHIO.

At Cleveland, Dayton and other places the prayer crusade is still vigorously prosecuted, though the ladies are meeting with poor success.

At Mount Vernon, the other day, Judge Davis attempted to enforce the ordinance against obstructing the sidewalk, and ordered the sentry-box used by the crusaders to be removed from the front of the grocery store of James Rogers. An excited crowd of men and women interfered, and prevented the removal of the box. There was intense excitement over the affair.

THE EAST.

Large temperance meetings are being held in New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and other Eastern cities, but no street-praying was indulged in.

Important Action by Railway Officials.

A meeting of the Boards of Directors of the Chicago and Northwestern and Milwaukee and St. Paul railways has just been held in New York city. B. S. Merrill and E. H. Porter, the respective Superintendents of the St. Paul and Northwestern roads, and Hon. Alexander Mitchell, President of the former company, were present at the meeting, which was called to consider what action was advisable to take in regard to the new Railroad laws of Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Besides the full boards, there were present Messrs. Charles O'Conor, B. F. Curtis, William M. Evarts, E. R. Hoar, and the regular attorneys of the companies. Messrs. Merrill and Porter made statements to the effect that it would be impossible to operate the roads of which they have charge under these laws, or to run them so as to pay expenses. They agreed in giving it as their belief that, if the laws were lived up to, the roads would no more than pay expenses, and certainly could not pay anything to the stockholders, even if they could pay the interest on the bonds.

The laws in question were then read to the lawyers present, and were carefully considered by them. They were unanimous in their opinion that these enactments were unconstitutional, and would never be sustained by the United States Supreme Court, although they might be by the inferior State and Federal Courts.

The Boards of Directors, after hearing these full and explicit statements of their managers and the opinions of the lawyers, unanimously resolved to resist the law, and instructed their managers to go on and run the roads upon business principles for the benefit of the community and the stockholders, and to pay no attention to the law where it conflicted with the opinions they had received from the lawyers.

The motion to postpone was carried—yeas, 133; nays, 121.

The Millerstown (Pa.) Horror.

A Pittsburgh dispatch says: Advices from the scene of the great fire at Millerstown state that no other bodies have yet been discovered; so that the seven already found probably constitute the number lost. A letter says that the bar-keeper of the Central Hotel, who was sitting up with a sick friend, was the first to discover the fire. He immediately rushed through the halls to arouse the guests. There were, including servants, a hundred souls in the house, and directly the corridors became the scene of the wildest dismay. Fortunately there were no lady guests registered, or the story of horror and death might have been immeasurably more painful to detail. The flames drifted up the wooden walls, and, quicker than it takes to tell it, spread over the entire southern side, and were curling in a thousand tongues from cornice and gable. Men rushed almost naked into the hall, some not even taking their clothing in their arms, and, anxious only to escape with their lives, tore up and down the corridors, madly seeking some outlet from the pursuing flames.

The wildest horror prevailed. Shriek rose upon shriek, in heart-rending accents, all the more impressive, because they came from strong men grappling with death, with the odds so terribly against all mere human power. Many on the lower hall had found their way out of the building, and the proprietor of the house, who was sick, had been borne out. For an instant it was hoped that all would escape, but again that hope was dashed by the beseeching cries for help from those who had lingered to dress, or, in the excitement of the dreadful moment, were unable to undo the fastenings of their doors.

To add to the horror of the situation, it was discovered that the flames had crept through the southern sleeping-rooms, and, following the draft along the corridor, had cut off the servants' escape from the attic.

Between prayers and shrieks and groans, the scene was now too much for human hearts. Knowing their utter inability to render aid, many turned away from the sickening scene they found it as difficult to endure as to relieve.

Some of the girls had courage and presence of mind to turn their drapery over their heads for protection and rush through the sheet of flame, and thus some escaped. Others rushed back to the north side and cast themselves from the windows upon the roof of the adjoining building, whence they were rescued. Others sank bewildered in the suffocating smoke, and, like some of the guests on the floor below, yielded without a struggle to the terrible death before them. The climax of horror had not been reached till Nelly McCarthy, one of the dining-room girls, appeared at the southern attic window, and proposed to cast herself to the ground, 40 feet below. A warning cry rose from the crowd below, but the poor girl would not retreat. Death was behind her, and with a wild cry of despair she cast herself forward and fell, a pitiful mass of broken bones, on the pavement.

VEAL SAUSAGES.—Chop fat bacon and lean veal in equal quantities, with a handful of sage, and a little salt and pepper. It should be chopped and beaten well together, rolled, and fried.

One Place Where the Leak Is.

During the latter part of 1871, as I sat by the evening fire, moodily pondering over the hard times, my wife said:

"Hub, I wish you would buy Dolly and I a new dress for a Christmas present."

I felt as though this little request which my wife wished to construe as an act of liberality and kindness, was nothing more than a duty on my part, and, under this feeling, I could not possibly refuse, though the want of money made it almost impossible to comply with this very reasonable and modest demand upon my purse. My salary was good, and, in years agone, had furnished my little family with all the necessaries and many of the luxuries of life. I was, in the general acceptation of the term, a temperate man—my morning call, noonday lunch, and evening social took only a pittance of fifteen cents each, while my fragrant Havana drew upon my purse for only ten cents after breakfast, dinner and supper. These were small outlays, and seemed necessary to my health, comfort, and social standing; they were mere trifles, and could not possibly amount to much, one way or the other. It is true I was out of debt, but, what was worse, out of money, and the modest request of my wife seemed to harrass me to a degree unimaginable to one not in exactly the same fix. The old adage, "the mickles make the muckles," came to my mind very forcibly, and, under the peculiar circumstances surrounding me, I made a firm resolve to act upon it for the next twelve months. I could remember very well that it was considered, in my younger days, rather disgraceful for boys to be caught smoking or chewing tobacco, or drinking whisky; consequently, these little habits must contribute their mites to the money-box, which I procured for the purpose of catching the stray nickles spent for unnecessary articles.

In a few weeks I imagined I felt better without the toddy and cigar, and thought of them only as discarded vices, as each day I deposited the little amounts in my savings bank.

Just twelve months after the time I resolved to do away with the unnecessary expenses, I opened my money-box, and, to my surprise, found just two hundred and seventy-three dollars and seventy-five cents! It may be well to state that the new dresses, with many luxuries for the table, and ornaments for my little home, were now procured without any difficulty whatever. Old Santa Claus was also more lavish with his toys and good things when little Dolly hung up her little stocking on Christmas Eve. I felt happy—not moody—under the good influences that were brought about by the price of bad habits; and, what is better, I have found out the cause of hard times and "where the leak is."—Southern Temperance Organ.

Why Are There So Many Bald-Headed Men!

Why so many bald-headed men, and so few bald women? Why is it that they shine like billiard balls? Why this spectacle of bald-headed barbers rubbing the dry tops of bald-headed men, recommending invigorators warranted to produce bushy locks in less than a fortnight, while bald-headed spectators and middle-aged men with wigs look on with derisive smiles; though all the while their wives and daughters throng our streets covered with crowns of beauty, and charming actresses toss their blonde tresses in luxurious profusion on the stages of our theaters? Our male population will no doubt take a serene satisfaction in saying that it is because men have more to worry them than women, and have the trouble of contriving how to support their wives and daughters. Probably, however, that is not the reason. Women, of course, have finer and longer hair than men, but men destroy their heads under their hats, and thus heat the tops of their craniums until the hair dies out for want of air. Men should either take off their hats oftener or ventilate them better.

Cremation.

Sir Henry Thompson, the great English doctor, has another long argument in the Contemporary Review in favor of the incremation of the dead. After demonstrating the sanitary necessity of such a measure in all great cities, Sir Henry gives the following as a programme for the funeral ceremonies: "When death occurs and the necessary certificate has been given, the body is placed in a light wood shell, then in a suitable outside receptacle, preparatory to removal for religious rites or otherwise. After a proper time has elapsed it is conveyed to the spot where cremation is to be performed. There nothing need be seen by the last attendant or attendants than the placing of the shell within a small compartment and the closing of the door upon it. It slides down into the heated chamber, and is left there an hour, till the necessary changes have taken place. The ashes are then placed at the disposal of the attendants." The communal councils of Vienna and Gratz have adopted a proposal to establish in their cemeteries the necessary apparatus for cremation, "the use of which will be optional and open to all."

New Mexico.

The bill introduced in the House of Representatives, March 26, providing for the admission of New Mexico into the Union as a State, has brought out some interesting facts concerning that Territory which are not generally known. New Mexico was acquired from Mexico in 1848. By the act of Sept. 9, 1850, it was constituted a Territory, with an area of 215,807 square miles. In August, 1854, the territory acquired from Mexico by the Gadsden treaty was annexed, making the total area 261,342 miles. In 1861, 14,000 square miles were set off to Colorado, and, in 1863, 126,141 square miles were cut off and organized into the Territory of Arizona, leaving 121,201 square miles as the present area of the Territory. The census of 1870 gives New Mexico the second position among our Territories, with a population of 91,784.

THERE were 4,116,730 bushels of salt produced last year in Michigan, being 500,000 more than in the previous one.

An Independent Press.

The late typographical unpleasantness found the Republican prepared for any emergency. The gentlemen of the Union had put the office in the most scrupulously neat condition before they said "farewell, and if forever" to the Republican. So that when certain of our editorial staff determined to "keep the pot bilin'" they had nothing to do except to take off their coats and assume the composing stick. We felt a just pride in this. There were Americans prepared for any need. They could write editorial and stick it, or, like the late Mr. Greeley, could stick it out of their own heads without writing it at all. It was a splendid sight, these gentlemen under the flaming gas, pecking among the lower case and small caps. It was early and informally agreed that each editor should get up his own matter. Our local led off in a stick and a half, in which he apologized for the brevity of his work by the effect of the lake air, said to make reporters drowsy. Our river reporter made a sensation by announcing that "the Crescent City, from New Orleans, blew to atoms Montezuma island yesterday, and six barges burned!" This explosion of an island, and of the preceding day, it was supposed, would be copied extensively. Still the work did not go on as rapidly as was desirable, and the suggestion was made that it would be better to put on a few more hands, if to be had. At this juncture there came a friend connected with the country press, who, knowing the importance to the Republican cause of the unintermitted publication of its central organ, came to announce that he had secured the services of a swift and sure compositor. Every amateur straightened himself as this old typo was announced, and wished he headed a squad of the same sort. The new comer was received with all the honors. Our distinguished chief of the staff, who had been bothered with the nicks, and who selected his type with the utmost deliberation, promptly laid down his composing stick to welcome this outlaw of the Union. We do not think we have seen more impressment of manner than when our chief grasped the hand of the new printer, and actually gave up to him his own composing stick. The new printer was introduced as a gentleman from Acadia. He was a dark and shadowy type of the Gallic race, and, having taken off his coat, advanced to one of several cases which were vacated with alacrity by the gentlemen editors, and offered him with demonstrations of uncommon politeness. Our chief, who regarded the Acadian gentleman as his special "sub," pointed out all the facilities of the office, and went so far as to present him with the editorial copy then in his hand, for composition. He even read over three times this editorial paragraph to the gentleman from Acadia. As ultimately corrected and published it read as follows:

"OUR MAGNANIMITY.

"We shall magnanimously forbear to assail our pugnacious antagonist the Pic., while it is down and unable for the moment to resist. When, however, like the great original, it shall have got its wind again, we will fight "an hour by Shrewsbury clock." Till then we repress our martial ardor, but heartily hope our fractious contemporary may soon be in fighting trim again."

As it came to the galley, after the manipulations of him of Acadia, it appeared thus:

"OUR MOGRAMULY.

"We shall magnanimously forbear to assail our pograine and a great the Pic., while it is down and unable for the moment to noist. When honorable its great original it should have got its wind again, we will project an hour by the shreaubery loole. Well then we repren our war bal and or, but heartily hope our practism colum for any may torn be in fighting trim alure."

The countenance of our chief as he slowly perused this astonishing perversion attracted the attention of all. He commenced whistling in a low tone a fragment of one of Dr. Watts' best hymns, intended for the prevention of profanity. Turning to his first assistant foreman, he remarked: "This fellow has been snaked in by the Union;" and turning, remarked to his expectant sub: "Cut." That was all he said, but the gentleman from Acadia either suspected his rates would be cut still lower, or had been so much in the habit of being turned out of printing offices, that without a word of explanation, or a demand that his work should be measured from the book, he put on his long and flowing robes and departed. Our chief resumed his inspection of type without another word, and there was no more hilarity in that office. Each man felt that his hour had come, and bent himself silently to the task. Ere the cock had crowed thrice the Daily Republican was in the hands of the pressman, and in a short time thereafter the fancy compositors were awakened to breakfast. We proudly cite the two numbers as a specimen of independent journalism, which was much relieved by the adjustment of all difficulties between proprietors and printers.—New Orleans Republican.

Buffalo Hunting.

The various modes of hunting the buffalo may not prove uninteresting. Although horseback hunting is the usual method, they are pursued successfully on foot. The buffalo lives near springs or streams, grazing from one to ten miles from water. The hunter who "still-hunts" conceals himself near a spring. About 11 o'clock a. m. the buffalo are seen coming to water. They always go in file and follow a path. When near enough the hunter selects his victim, and, aiming at a point just back of the fore leg, fires. If one is brought down, he waits until others get a smell of the blood, then three or four can be killed before the rest really know what to do. The foot hunter follows a herd, keeping out of sight by hugging ravines, and running at his best speed when an opportunity offers, so as to get within range. He may get a shot after chasing them for hours, and he may not. If the hunter is not successful, he can console himself with the thought that the exercise is healthy. To horseback hunting belongs the mos excitement. The hunters generally got in squads, and first separate the herd and then shoot down the stragglers.

The Temperance Crusade.

It is curious to notice the different forms which the temperance movement assumes in different localities. In Ohio the street-marches and saloon prayer-meetings are the order of the day, and no other method of closing dramshops is now regarded as orthodox. In Indiana the efforts of the women are happily directed to the enforcement of the hitherto ineffective Baxter law. In Massachusetts efforts are made to induce property-holders to pledge themselves not to allow liquor to be sold by their tenants. The Rhode Island women wait upon the Legislature to petition for the repeal of the Liquor-License law. It is recorded that in Wilkesbarre, Pa., the crusade has the singular result of driving two hundred disreputable women away from the city. The Washington people are asking for Congressional prohibition. In New York and Brooklyn no aggressive policy has been definitely agreed upon, but a good work is accomplished by the frequent meetings, which call public attention to the magnitude of the evil of drunkenness; and the warning voice of the pulpit is raised Sunday after Sunday with wholesome effect. Whatever the method, and whatever may be the exceptional excesses and indiscretions of the reformers, they all have in view a noble object, and we cannot withhold a wish for their success, in so far as it may promote human happiness without infringement upon individual rights.—New York Tribune.

A Desolate Land.

Greenland is almost continental in its dimensions, containing not less than 750,000 square miles, and is all a bleak wilderness of ice and snow, save a little strip extending to 74 deg. north latitude, along the western shore. The coasts are deeply indented with bays and fiords, which invariably terminate in glaciers. The whole interior seems to be buried beneath a great depth of snow and ice, which loads up the valleys and wraps over the hills. Nothing can be more desolate than the interior. It is one dead, dreary expanse of white so far as the eye can reach—no living creature frequents this wilderness—neither beast, bird, nor insect. The silence, deep as death, is broken only when the warring storm arises to sweep before it the pitiless, blinding snow. This represents the state of the northern part of our continent in the ice age. Some of the Greenland glaciers attain a vast size. Dr. Kane reports the great Humboldt glacier as sixty miles wide at its termination. Its seaward face rises abruptly from the level of the water to a height of 300 feet.

Since ice is lighter than water, whenever a glacier enters the sea the dense salt water tends to buoy it up. The great tenacity of the frozen mass enables it to resist the pressure for a time. By-and-by, however, as the ice reaches deeper water, its cohesion is overcome, and large segments are forced from its terminal part, and floated up from the bed of the sea, to sail away as icebergs. The glacier evidently crops under the water to considerable depths, or, so long as the force of cohesion is able to resist the tendency of the salt water to press it upward.

Though Greenland is said to be inhabited only upon the south and west coast, there is a record of an early settlement upon the side toward Iceland, with which there has been no communication for 400 years. The colony was planted about 1,000 A. D., which flourished, and maintained intercourse with its mother country till the beginning of the fifteenth century. Since that time, owing to the setting in of the arctic current, and the consequent gradual increase of ice upon the coast, the colony became inaccessible, and the records of it disappear from history. At various intervals between, 1579, 1751, etc., down to our own time, the intrepid Danes have striven in vain to reopen communication with their lost colony. This emerald coast, with valleys well stocked with reindeer and verdant glades, is now shut in by the pitiless ice-pack, and the fate of its inhabitants ought to excite the interest of the world. It would be very interesting to be informed of the condition of this colony; whether the increasing cold has enlarged the glaciers so as to push the dwellings out to sea, or whether the habitations are still standing, and a population has sprung up who know of the outside world only by tradition.—Popular Science Monthly.

Maintenance of a Uniform Temperature.

Gen. Morin has proposed a method, both simple and inexpensive, of maintaining a temperature as constant as possible in a given locality, through all the seasons of the year. The principle he announces is simply that of regularly renewing the air of any given place by causing cool air of a constant temperature to flow into it, by the aid of a moderate aspiration. In order to obtain this cool air, he states that, at a depth of about 70 feet in the earth the temperature is constant, and that it is to this fact that is due the uniform temperature of several French public halls, alluded to by him, which are supplied with air drawn through subterranean galleries. He gives, also, an elaborate calculation of the quantity of air, at a given temperature, necessary to be introduced into any apartment in order to keep it in a uniform condition (somewhat cooler than the average summer temperature) and shows that to maintain such a temperature it is not necessary to have recourse to the employment of caves, expensive to construct and to keep free from watery infiltrations; but that, on the contrary, by a proper arrangement of rooms one can establish the reservoir of cold air either at the level of the soil or at a moderate depth beneath it, giving it plenty of fresh air and sunlight; and in which a temperature a little lower than that of springtime can be maintained without inconvenience.

The Power of Imagination.

The influence of the mind on sensations especially is exceedingly great. Prof. Bennett, of Edinburgh, relates the case of a butcher who was once trying to hang a piece of meat on a hook. He found suddenly that he had suspended himself to the hook instead of the meat. His agony of pain, when he discovered it, was terrible, but an examination showed that the hook had only passed through his sleeve, and had hardly touched the skin. The exaltation of the senses that we see, especially in mesmerized persons, may go to a most wonderful extent. Indeed, the power of the sense of hearing especially is such that it would be dangerous, if you wanted to reach the truth about mesmerism, to talk, in a room adjoining the one in which was the mesmerized person, about that which the mesmerized person was to find. The mesmerized person would have a good chance of hearing what you say. All the senses indeed are exceedingly delicate then.—Dr. Brown-Sequard.

The Precious Metals.

One ton (2,000 pounds avoirdupois) of gold or silver contains 29,163 troy ounces, and, therefore, the value of a ton of pure gold is $602,799.21, and of a ton of silver, $37,704.84. A cubic foot of pure gold weighs 1,218.75 pounds avoirdupois. A cubic foot of pure silver weighs 656.25 pounds ditto. One million dollars gold coin weighs 3,658.8 pounds avoirdupois; one million dollars silver coin weighs 58,925.9 pounds avoirdupois. If there is one per cent. of gold or silver in one ton of ore, it contains 291.63 ounces troy, of either of these metals. The average fineness of the Colorado gold is 781 in 1,000, and the natural alloy, gold 781, silver 209, copper 10; total, 1,000. The calculations at the mint are made on the basis that 43 ounces of standard gold, or 900 fine (coin), is worth $800, and 11 ounces of silver, 900 fine (coin), is worth $12.80.

The Farmers' Song of Progress.

See, the farmers rallying out;
  What, what's the matter?
What is all this noise about?
  What, what's the matter?
    Gathering in from far and near—
    Every earnest farmer here—
    What is it the people fear?
    What, what's the matter?
      This is what's the matter now,
      This is what's the matter;
      Monopolies have raised the row—
      That's what's the matter.

See ye not the gathering cloud?
  Hear ye not the thunder,
Pealing often, long and loud?
  Why stand and wonder?
    The day has come when right and wrong
    Have mustered forces great and strong,
    For the conflict, fierce and long,
    That's what's the matter.
      That's what's the matter now,
      That's what's the matter—
      To the strong we do not bow,
      That's what's the matter.

Vanderbilt and all the rest,
  Won't help the matter;
They can't stand the Patron's test,
  That's what's the matter.
    Down with crafty railroad kings,
    Down with all Mobilier rings,
    Back-pay steals and all such things;
    That's what's the matter.
      That's what's the matter now,
      That's what's the matter—
      Watering stocks we don't allow,
      That's what's the matter.

Hear ye what the Grangers say:
  "Stop now your clatter;
The right is bound to win the day
  That's what's the matter.
    Politicians, clear the track,
    Pay your stolen back-pay back,
    Drag away your party hack;
    That's what's the matter."
      That's what's the matter, ho!
      That's what's the matter—
      Party hacks won't always go,
      That's what's the matter.

Signs are in the morning sky—
  Growing light and lighter,
Of a better day that's nigh—
  Of a future brighter.
    Listen to the onward tread
    Of the army that is led
    By the hand that holds the bread;
    Say ye, what's the matter?
      That's what's the matter, now,
      That's what's the matter—
      Justice holds the Patrons' plow,
      That's what's the matter.

The car of light is rolling on
  With increasing thunder;
Tricksters, heed its warning tone,
  And stand from under.
    Truth shall join in hand with might;
    Wrong submit to conquering right;
    Darkness yield to dawning light;
    That's what's the matter.
      That's what's the matter, ho!
      That's what's the matter;
      On to victory let us go,
      That's what's the matter.

—Industrial Age.

Farmers' Clubs and Grangers.

H. C. Baichly writes from Prairie City, Ill., to the Industrial Age:

"It is evident that the original conception of the Patrons of Husbandry did not contemplate a political element; at any rate, not in the sense of a compact and distinct party. Hence, it is doubtless best to exclude the discussion of political topics from their councils, lest it might very much impair their usefulness, and destroy that harmony, fellowship and good will that prevail, or ought to prevail, in their social gatherings.

"There are so many, and such varied and diversified, questions connected with politics, that men naturally differ very much in their views, and the discussion of such topics sometimes leads into heated and acrimonious dissensions, a thing very disastrous, especially in social gatherings. Yet it ought not to be inferred from this that Grangers should not discuss politics at all, nor take political action, under any circumstances, or at any time. But on the contrary, they ought to take more interest in public affairs than heretofore. Certainly, the Patrons of Husbandry, alike with other American citizens, have an inalienable right to take such interest in public affairs, and take such political action as they may conceive to be to their best interest. This is their privilege as well as duty, and to take action in their own way, and in accordance with their best judgement, and who shall gainsay it? Not only so, but I think it would be the part of wisdom and prudence, when the proper time comes, for the Farmers' Association and Grangers to unite, and select men from among their own ranks, whose honesty, integrity and capability are unquestioned, and make them standard-bearers for the various offices of emolument and trust.

"True, some men would call this a selfish and proscriptive policy; especially lawyers, doctors, politicians and place-hunters. But let us look at that matter more closely, and see how the matter would be if it were reversed. It is admitted that the farmers are greatly in the majority over any other single class or profession. Now suppose there was a community, or say State, where, for instance, the lawyers had a majority of votes over the farmers, is anyone so verdant as to suppose that a farmer or mechanic, or day laborer would stand the remotest chance for the office of even Constable? Nay, verily not. But how has it been formerly with regard to the matter of public offices? Why, these very classes named above, though greatly in the minority, have had these things pretty much their own way. They would form a clique, and in secret conclave would parcel out the various offices, have everything cut and dried, and bring it thus into the political convention or primaries, and call on us outsiders to indorse this pre-arranged work, and generally we silly, confiding souls would humbly sanction the work of these designing manipulators; and then the whole thing was proclaimed to the public as the free, intelligent action of the mass convention, or primary election. The next thing in order was for the candidates, or some of their political bummers, to traverse the country and make stump speeches to the people; and we would go to these meetings to get political wisdom, by listening to a harangue, generally full of falsehoods, abuse and vituperation against some political opponent. Others who had not the gift of gab, or unable to make stump speeches, would plod over the country, call on us at our homes, in the field at labor, and importune us for our votes, shake hands, inquire about our health and our families, how crops are, how we are progressing, dandle the baby on their knees, and manifest great solicitude in our affairs generally. But after the election, how is it then with these place-hunters? Why, they would not condescend to notice us if they were to meet us on the street or in public. They would turn up their aristocratic noses at the smell of the stable-yard on the honest tiller of the soil; and in heart despise him with his stogy boots, brogan breeches, hickory-shirt, slouched hat and sunburned, toil-hardened hands. And yet, these are the men that now are so very solicitous about our future welfare, and would warn us to beware of some prominent men of our own class, who have been efficient workers in this Farmers' Movement; because, forsooth, they tell us these men are working for office. Another piece of presumption on the part of these professionals and politicians, was that they alone possessed the requisite knowledge, wisdom and intelligence to properly fill the public offices. As a little, spindle-legged, young pettifogger in our town said: "O! the farmers are too dum ignorant and clumsy to hold office—go to the Legislature and make laws." Before the inception of the Farmers' Movement in our county, said lawyer dreamed of legislative honors; he now talks of migrating, as he has sense enough to see that his chances are getting smaller by degrees and beautifully less.

"Then we are advised to beware of such men as Flagg, Smith, Hooton and others who have battled manfully in the ranks of this grand army of laborers. They tell us these men are acting from self motives; that all they are laboring for is office. Well, we will try to exercise our judgment about that, and thank these disinterested souls for their advice.

"But, suppose these men were aspiring for office, what then? They would find plenty of imitators among lawyers, doctors, politicians and snobs, who make office-seeking and place-hunting a profession. And as these offices must be filled by somebody, would it not be natural as well as prudent for us to choose men from among our class, whose interests are identical with ours, and whose sympathies are with us, and therefore labor to promote the welfare of the industrial classes?"

The Pope and the Patrons.

The antipathy of the Church of Rome to secret societies and the total prohibition of its sanction to any one of its members joining either Free Mason lodges or other similar organizations, is generally known. We believe excommunication would follow any persistency in membership. It appears, however, that Pio Nono has made a decision which somewhat relaxes this stringent rule. We learn from the Norisk Volkeblad, the Scandinavian organ of Minnesota, that the matter has been finally adjudicated on by the Holy Father. A Catholic member of the State Legislature was desirous—as most members of State Legislatures are at present—of joining the Grange, but had—as most members of State Legislatures have not—conscientious scruples about doing so, arising from his religious belief. He consulted Father Ireland, of St. Paul, who referred him to Bishop Grace. Both these clergymen expressed themselves as possessing a favorable impression of the principles, objects and methods of the Grange, but neither of them could break through the absolute rule of the church, and recommended the legislator to appeal to Rome. He accordingly laid the matter before the Pope, to whom he transmitted at the same time full particulars as to the objects contemplated by the order, and the means by which it was proposed to attain them. A reply has been received from His Holiness stating that the Pope "allows the petitioner to join the Grange of Patrons of Husbandry, and be a member thereof, if he find nothing therein conflicting with his conscience or the creed of the Catholic Church." As a consequence, the order has received a large accession of strength in Minnesota, and when the news of the Pope's decision has reached other States, its effect will be largely to increase the numbers of the Patrons, and to remove the interdict laid upon Catholics desirous of becoming such by prelates who have disapproved of the Grange or been doubtful as to the consistency of its obligations with those of the church.—Davenport Democrat.

Politics and the Granges.

The Lansing (Mich.) Granger has the following, in relation to the future political status of the Grangers:

"We hold it to be the right, yea, the duty, of every man and woman, whether of the Grange or not, to take an active part in the political affairs of the times. Much of our inefficient and corrupt government in the past has resulted from the very fact that the people took little individual interest themselves, but left everything to the party leaders. The day of party leaders in this country is fast drawing to a close. The masses have clung to the soiled garments of these great partisan champions long enough. Men will henceforth vote as they please, knowing their interests, and believing themselves qualified to judge aright. It is very possible that there is a light dawning upon the political horizon of this country, which the rabid old-time partisan organs have not yet been able to discern through their smoky eye-glasses. The men and women of the United States have very largely ceased the old method of thinking by proxy. They are doing only a limited business in that way at this time. A very unhappy surprise awaits in the near future the old habitues of the stump. When they go about from township to township, as of yore, to tell the people how to vote at the next election, they may be greatly amazed to find that the farmer had concluded several days before how he would vote, and, needing no information on that subject, had wisely remained at home attending to his business."

An Old Painter.

Galignani says the Count Waldeck, painter, residing in Paris, has just arrived at the great age of 108 years. In 1826 this artist, being then 60, and in want of money, presented some of his pictures at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, and asked 40,000 francs for them. M. Bastard, the Director, replied that the resources at his command did not permit him to make a purchase of that importance, but that if M. Waldeck consented he would obtain for him an annual allowance of 2,000 francs. The painter has, therefore, received during forty-eight years a total sum of 96,000 francs. The old gentleman is in excellent health.

COLD WATER.

A cup of water from the spring,
O, 'tis the most delightful thing;
Among all drinks this stands the first,
'Twill surely quench one's raging thirst.

Now, my young lads, just only think,
For three score years it's been my drink;
I've always passed by the saloon,
Every morning, each night and noon.

Thus, while journeying on my way,
On a hot, sultry summer day.
How tempting 'tis to pause a spell
Beside the farmer's mossy well,

To let the bucket gently down—
That old bucket so dark and brown
Then draw it up, you may observe,
I tilt the same on top the curb.

'Tis thus I drink, this drink is mine,
It far excels your rum and wine!
'Twill rival all the drinks you buy,
So nicely made from corn and rye.

Thus, while I'm free to use my voice,
Cold water'll be my only choice;
The water cold, my constant drink,
While I am free to act and think.

Now, shall I ask the real sot,
In winter's cold or when 'tis hot,
If water does not meet his mind,
More than all other drinks combined.

If he's honest, no doubt he'll say,
Just take my rum and gin away;
I henceforth desire, without fail,
To be supplied with Adam's ale.

I ask that youth, each boy and fop,
Who oft frequent the drinking shop,
To change his course, to pause awhile,
No longer drink that stuff so vile!

Set down that glass! drink water cold!
That you may live till you are old;
Then at the close of life may you
Die with heaven in your view.

A starving woman in Paterson, N. J., driven to an excess of desperation that savors of mad despair, was actually forced to spend her last six dollars for a wig. Pity the sorrows of the poor.

"Where did you learn wisdom?" inquired Diogenes of a man esteemed wise. "From the blind," was the reply, "who always try their path with a stick before they venture to tread on it!"

One of our neighbors had just put on his pants, the other morning, when he immediately took them off again, under the impression that they were haunted. The kitten was pulled out by the tail and drowned.

"The evidence shows that he sot up with her night after night, and they squoze hands and talked soft, and I think she ought to have about $23 damages," was the charge of a Kansas Judge to a jury in a breach-of-promise case.

At a party, while a young lady was playing with peculiar brilliancy of touch, a bystander bachelor exclaimed, "I'd give the whole world for those fingers!" "Perhaps you might get the whole hand by asking," said the young lady's observant mamma.

"What," exclaimed the fashionable Fitswiggle to the exquisite Miss La Sparrowgrass—"what would you be, dearest, if I should press the stamp of love upon those sealing-wax lips?" "I," responded the fairy-like creature, "should be—stationery!"

The following sweet dispatch passed over wires to a Maine girl: "To——: Your life is a rich bouquet of happiness, yourself the sweetest flower. If northern winds whisper southern wishes, how happy you must be. Good night. Happy dreams, sweet love. Frank."

"Respectable people" are a singular set in Portland. Within a week one respectable citizen was caught stealing jewelry, another with kid gloves stole a ham, a third was arrested for stealing spoons, and a fourth, a "prominent citizen," was picked up at midnight in a state of almost hopeless intoxication.

A suburban minister applied to a ticket agent, on one of the railroads, for a "clergyman's ticket," and on the official expressing a doubt as to his clerical character, exclaimed: "If you don't believe I'm a clergyman, I'll read you one of my sermons!" The agent passed over the ticket, but did not insist upon the proof.

Novel Way of Running a Boarding-House.—"What do you do with so much?" said a gentleman at the South End, the other evening, to a beggar-boy, who had a basketful of provisions, and was soliciting more. "Mother got three new boarders last night, and two other fellers left without paying her anything."

Satin.

Satin was originally manufactured in China. Its smooth surface is obtained by the use of a loom, with five-leaved heddles and as many corresponding treadles. Four move up and down together, carrying as many yarns of the warp, across which the weft is thrown by the shuttle. The glossy or right side comes at the bottom from the shuttle being always thrown when 4-5 of the warp yarn is beneath to sustain it. By using very fine silk yarns of any color for the warp, and a heavier black yarn for the woof, the right side will present only the colored yarn and the other will be a black surface, upon which the crossing of the fine warp yarns is hardly visible.

A Decisive Test.

A person attending the Mardi Gras festival of Memphis gave ou[illegible]me empressement, that he wa[illegible]hicago Alderman. This statement [illegible]ng been called in question, an official of the Phœnix City was interviewed by telegraph on the subject, accompanied by a description of the gentleman who claimed such exalted eminence. "Is he drunk or sober?" came back over the wires. "Drunk." "He's the right man, then, and is worthy your confidence," was the reply.

Thursday, April 16th, 1874

Last July, a few days before Mr. Sumner left Washington, to pay his last visit to Boston and the beloved friend of his youth and manhood, Longfellow, at Nahant, he said to me: "My life has been a battle; but it is almost over. For myself, the sooner it is the better. I would like the last proof of what Lee & Shepherd call my "complete works." I want to see the civil rights bill passed. Then I shall have nothing on earth to stay for. I have no dread of death. I dread nothing but to survive my faculties and my usefulness, and such agony as that which I have just passed. My prayer is that I may go soon and suddenly."—[Mary Clemmer Ames.

THE ELECTIONS.

From every quarter of the country the political news is cheering to the Democracy. Cities and towns in Ohio heretofore opposition, have wheeled into line, indicating the great change that cannot come too soon.

The election for State officers and a Legislature in Connecticut, last Monday resulted in a sweeping victory for the Democrats and their Liberal allies. Ingersoll, for Governor, is elected by a plurality of 6,742 and both branches of the Legislature are overwhelmingly Democratic. This gratifying result exceeds the expectations of the most sanguine and insures the election of a Democratic United States Senator, for the first time in many years. The Democrats and Liberals of the whole country are jubilant over this great victory and all consider that Connecticut is now enrolled among the permanent opposition States. This is glory enough for one day.

Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Dayton rolled up rousing majorities against the Republican party.

In Illinois, Iowa and Michigan the local elections resulted equally disastrous to the Republicans.

In referring to the elections the Chicago Tribune says: "It appears pretty evident, from the result of the elections in Ohio, that the entire German population and a very large portion of the native vote who sympathize with them have abandoned the Republican party forever. It has been but a few years since every city in Ohio, without exception, had a republican Government. To-day, the Republicans have not control of one of the cities. Cleveland and Dayton have outdone even Cincinnati in their majorities against the Republican party. The same may be said to have occurred in Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota.

* * * * * *

"The general lesson taught by the April elections is that the Republican party has received a promonitory stroke of the general paralysis that it will experience in November 1874. Its discomfiture is inevitable. It is stripped of the allies by whom it has been kept in power. It is abandoned—as in Connecticut—by the disgusted people, who have tired of its corruptions. It is left to its fate by every man who feels the rigor of taxation and the extortion of the plunderers, and its end will be accomplished in the fall by the great body of the agricultural."

A REFORM CONVENTION.

A Farmers Call.

The following is the form of a call, which the farmers have have decided to issue to bring the people together in a grand independent rally:

To the people of the State of Indiana.

Believing that the people are honest and capable of self-government, that the old political organizations are corrupt; that there is no trust to be placed in the promises of either of the socalled great political parties; that there are no questions that ought to divide the people of Indiana; that the dead past issues should be buried with the past, and that we should address ourselves to the living questions of the day, we therefore invite the farmers and the industrial classes generally, of Indiana, to meet us on Wednesday, the 10th day of June, in the city of Indianapolis, to devise ways and means to bring about such reforms as will emancipate our state from the intolerable burdens heaped upon us by the misrule of corrupt party politics. Come let us counsel together.

We are obliged to leave out some interesting reading matter, owing to the large increase of our advertising patronage.

Pioneer Sketches

—OF—

DeKALB COUNTY

NUMBER SEVEN.

It was in the summer of 1837. The first marriage licenses taken out in the county, was those of Francis Smith and Maria Gunsenhouser, and of John Platter and Ann Emiline Walden. Both licenses were taken out on the 5th of September; and both marriages were performed by Washington Robeson, the first Justice of the peace in the county.

The first funeral, in the settlement, was that of Mrs. Barker, who died just above where Newville now is. Judge Widney was sent for to perform the funeral services, there being no minister then in the settlement. He sang, prayed and talked to the people on the subject of death.

The first store in the county, was opened where Orangeville now is, in the spring of 1837. John Platter, Wm. Rogers, a Mr. Savage and some other person put in each $200, and brought on the amount in such goods as the settlers most needed. John P. Widney was employed to cut logs for the store house—receiving $2 for the job, and performing it in half a day. The house was sixteen by eighteen feet, of round logs.

The first "grist mill" or "corn cracker" rather in the county, was built by Wm. Mathews, on Bear creek, on the east part of the school section of Concord Township, near George Johnston's. It was a small affair truly. The stones were about two feet in diameter, and were turned by means of a "flutter wheel" on an upright post, set in a tub, through one side of which the water passed. The whole machinery was set in a small rickety frame, without weatherboarding. The corn dropped, a grain at a time, from the little hopper; so that, perhaps that in 24 hours, at a good stage of water, 8 bushels of corn might be "cracked." I remember carrying a half bushel of corn from my brother's, at Newville, to this mill, a distance of four miles, on my shoulder,—waiting a half a day to get it ground, and then carrying the meal back in the same way. Among the humorous tales told of this mill, the following will do to repeat.

My brother James, in the fall of 1837, took a bushel of corn to be ground, and, after it had been grinding for some time went below to see how much meal was in the little store box, used for a meal chest, and, to his dismay, found a large yellow dog, eating the meal as fast as it came from the spout!

The first election in the county, was held in July, 1837. The settlers on the river, all voted at the house of Washington Robeson Esq., at Vienna, or Newville as it is now called. Three county commissioners, two associate Judges, and a Clerk and Recorder were to be elected;—and perhaps some other officers.

On counting out the votes, a ticket came up that sorely puzzled the Judges, as to whether it should be counted or not. So much of it as I can remember ran thus:

For commissioners
I'll tell you sirs;—
The old Major—
Or Johnny Blair;
William Roger
And Peter Fair.
For Clerk, and Recorder too,
John F. Coburn, sure will do;—
Arial Walden for a Judge,
And James Bowman for a drudge.

Much merriment was had over this ticket. The office of drudge was supposed to be intended to accommodate the court with whiskey, as some Judges, at that early day, took their drams. It was not then known who put in this ticket. but it has been supposed that it was one who had since filled the office of Judge himself. Who brought his liquor the records say not. The gentleman voted for. to fill the last office mentioned on the ticket, was not elected.

Samuel Widney, Peter fair and A. F. Beecher, were elected county Commissioners; Arial Waldon and Thomas L. Yates, Judges of the court, and John F. Coburn Clerk and Recorder.

John P. Widney, carried the returns of this election to Auburn, (as Wesley Park's cabin, and perhaps one or two others, were then called,) and I accompanied him.

We went on foot and followed an Indian trail, (as there was no road,) wading all the swamps on the route. On returning not being a very good Indian, I gave out, so as to hardly be able to drag my limbs home. This was my first and last experiment in carrying election returns.

Mr. Yates, one of the Judges elected, was rather an odd genius of a backwoodsman.

The Central is the cheapest grocery in town.

Turn out to the entertainment Friday evening.

Hillsdale, Mich., passed through a $40,000 fire last week.

Judge Studebaker, of Decatur, was in town yesterday.

There seems to be a general cleaning up of yards and streets.

The Presbyterian Sabbath-school gave a festival last Tuesday evening.

Try Humes when you want to get a pair of fine boots made to order.

Mrs. Little is prepared for doing all kinds of bleaching, repairing, &c.

W. W. Humes makes boots and shoes to order at the lowest prices for cash.

Look out for a grand announcement of new clothing by S. Lauferty next week.

More men and teams wanted in getting out ties for the Baltimore road apply at the Swineford House.

Remember that a new stock of millinery goods will be opened out in a few days at the new fancy store in Ensley's block.

The old slaughter-house is undergoing repairs, and will hereafter be used for a dwelling house.

Geo. Patterson lost one of his fine work horses, while engaged in drawing heavy timber, near Columbia city.

If you want good, fresh groceries remember the Central Grocery. Either Ed or Joe will be glad to wait upon you.

Go to W. W. Humes' to get your repairing done. Shop over Chas Klotz' dry goods store.

Mr Lauferty has presented us with a cane, which for cheapness and durability cannot be excelled.

Go to Humes' and leave your order for fine boots and shoes if you want a good fit and the best style.

Virtue of Christainity—To hear a little four-year-old praying "Dear Jesus let Pa come home," and Pa did come.

If you want to get a fancy pair of sewed boots or shoes made to order go to W. W. Humes'.

Those having goods at the depots should give their hauling to Isaac Roth. He is careful in hauling, and charges reasonable.

Lauferty, the enterprising Samuel, has returned with a complete new stock of Clothing, Piece Goods, Notions, &c. Will be open this week.

We heard a wife, on leaving her husband on the street, in the presence of others, say: "Dearie, come to supper early. Good-bye, Dearie." Ugh!

Dr. Ford has bought the building lot of C. C. Shaffer, and two more brick buildings will go up during the summer, by the Doctor and J. H. Ehlers.

The impromptu festival, last Tuesday evening, at Ensley's Hall, for the benefit of the Presbyterian Sabbath-school was very largely attended, and enjoyed. Music and good things prevailed.

A nice large new stock of millinery goods will be opened out at the new fancy store of Stametz & Wile, in a few days consisting of a full line of the best styles and the lowest prices.

Lauferty has returned with a mammoth new stock of clothing hats, caps and piece goods and a full line of notions.—The goods are arriving daily, though some may not be received until the latter part of the week. The fine new stock of hats and caps are on hand.

Mr. L. Bowers, of the Eagle Mills has secured the services of one of the best Millers of the Buckeye State, Mr. Joseph Forney. Those who have grists to grind and want good flour will bear this in mind.

The spile drivers are hammering away west of the junction, on the Baltimore line, and several places are ready for the bridge stringers. Mr. Hill is doing an excellent job and will not countenance any way.

POSITIVELY CASH.

Notice is hereby given, that from and after this date I will sell for cash only, as the credit business is played out with me. Do not ask for credit, because it will not be given.

S. LAUFERTY.

A ham, well packed in pulverized charcoal, after the usual smoking, will keep for years. Butter in pots, well surrounded with charcoal, will keep for twelve months. Each atom of charcoal can absorb 1,000 times its bulk of deleterious gases.

A certain gentleman contemplating going to the western territories, while in his dreams, endeavored to cipher the nearest and cheapest route to Utah, was overheard by a faithful sentinel. He was informed that when he got to the Salt Lake he was then in it.

Concord Grange was organized in the north part of Concord Township, last Saturday week. Wm. Simonton was chosen Master, and C. Curie Sec'y. Another Grange was organized in the same Township yesterday. An item from the "Press" against the Grangers is now in order.

If you have any desire to save money go right straight to Vordermark's. This popular house has now a fine stock of Infants', Childrens' and Misses Colored Shoes, city style, which they are selling very low. Also a large stock of Mens' Shoes, spring and summer style. In the Odd Fellows building.

Splendid.—The new soda fountain of McQuiston & Benedict, beats everything in the county. It is a beautiful piece of work, and is as good as it is handsome.—These gentlemen have fitted up a beautiful set of parlors for ice-cream during the season, and will be in excellent shape to cater to the public in this line.

Guess how a young man spelled the word "Union." Its the hardest word in the English language to spell to one that don't know how? With an "U" perhaps No, sir. "Unyon." No sir. Give it up. Why, U-n-i-o-n, of course. Another fellow spells it differently, thus: "Yunion." He has'nt been beat since Indiana has been a State.

Mr. Mays—I wish to say through the Courier that the Hartford Insurance Company have paid my loss promptly and acted the man with me in every respect, and I can take pleasure in recommending them to the public. I paid paid them five dollars and in return received $500.00.—To those that have no insurance, by all means get insured. Delays are dangerous.

Respectfully yours,

T. C. Elsos.

Re-union—There was a re-union at the Central Grocery the other day. We dont know whether it was on account of the bridge across the canal or not, but it seemed that everybody did not return at the same time their neighbors did, and it was resolved to have a re-union, at the above place.

Major Eldrige and Captain Rainier did the honors of the occasion by dishing out as fine a lot of Groceries as ever was seen in the town, at prices that defy competition. Go and see their Sugars, Coffees, Teas, and fine stock generally.

Detroit and Indianapolis "Through Route.—A Woodruff sleeper will leave the M. C. R. R. depot at Detroit for Indianapolis on Monday at 5.40 p. m. running through via Jackson, Fort Wayne and Muncie, arriving at Indianapolis in time to make all the connections with the numerous trains going out of the city in all directions.

This cannot but prove of great advantage to the traveling public, as at the present time is no connecting line on the route.

It is a permanent line, and will merit the patronage it expects to receive. It has the support of the Great Western, Michigan Central, Ft Wayne Jackson & Saginaw, Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cincinnati and Bee Lines.

Passengers leaving Grand Rapids or Saginaw, arriving by connecting trains at Jackson, can take the sleeper at 8 40 p m and be in Cincinnati at 7:30 or Indianapolis at 7:45 the next morning, at Louisville at 1:10 p m, with direct connections for Nashville, New Orleans, Charleston, etc.—Jackson Citizen, April 2.

The Angola Republican says Connecticut gives a very small majority to Ingersoll the Democratic candidate for Governor. The other election which have been held this week, principally town or municipal throughout the west have pretty generally gone the same way and for the same reason.

We think that is drawing it very mildly rather indifferent, you know, so as readers may believe that it did'nt amount to much. We hope our neighbor will endeavor to be fair in its partizan endeavors. The election of U. S. Senator for the first time in 25 years, is what some of our Radical papers term a Democratic triumph. Perhaps our friends want to ignore this in their very Radical county, where it might not have a good effect. Such statements do not build up their reliability very fast. Now, our neighbor of the Press says, with commendable candor, "The election in Connecticut on Monday is a Democratic victory. That party re-elect Gov. Ingersoll and their entire State ticket, and secure majorities in both branches of the Legislature, which will give them a United Stated Senator to succeed Buckingham, Mar. 4, 1875.

LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT!

—AT—

Ensly's Hall,

FRIDAY EVENING,

April 17, '74

PATRONIZE HOME TALENT!

There will be an entertainment given, as stated above, by the Franklin Literary Society, of Auburn, the exercises of which consist of orations, essays, recitations, tableaux, vocal and instrumental music and the laughable farce "Irish Tiger." It has been the aim of the society to make this one of the best entertainments ever given in the place. All the exercises are perfectly pure and chaste, yet amply interspersed with the comic. Such pieces as the "Barn-yard Serenade," Stars of the Summer Night," Home by the Sea, Photograph," &c., together with the beautiful tableaux, "Golden Stair," cannot fail to please everyone. This entertainment is given for the purpose of paying for their organ, and it be hooves all to aid them.—Admission 25 cents.

Population of Auburn.

Our popular, clever and scrupulously exact old friend Wyllis Griswold, Esq., has been listing our town for school purposes, and while thus engaged conceived the idea of taking the census. It will be remembered that in 1870 we were only entitled, according to the census, to a population of

SIX HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-SEVEN.

Since that two railroads have been completed to Auburn, and a third one, by far the most important, is being rapidly pushed forward, so that in a few weeks we will have a connection to Defiance.

Thus in a little over three years, we have more than doubled in population, there being now 827 males and 784 females residing within the corporation, making a total of

SIXTEEN HUNDRED AND ELEVEN.

We can rely upon the correctness of the report made by Mr. Griswold, as far as that number is concerned, as in no case did he exaggerate, while he has learned of several since not counted in the above.

There are only one or two things that retard and hold back our town from what might be a rapid advance, and these are old fogies, and a few unconscionable speculators that can't ask enough. In the first we would point to such men as Fluke and Baker, though we must say the former is far, far in advance of the latter.

They do say, however, that there is a gold mine in that corner lot of Fluke's and he don't know it. If somebody would slip around quietly and offer Philip $15,000 he might get it, though we doubt it. Now, Mr. F. is a good, easy, clever citizen and no doubt feels happy that his neighbors have built up around him and made his property valuable. If that corner lot could be allowed to remain vacant, to the disgust of the entire town, for ten years to come, it would be a gratifying result Mr Fluke has been offering said property for $4000, but refused it this week because someone said a Chicago man wanted it.—We don't wish anybody bad luck, but it would be a sweet morsel to roll under his tongue, if he would never realize that much again. As to our hard working friend Baker, across the Rhine, he has been offered $12,000 for his farm of 120 acres, that could have been bought before the completion of the Eel River Road for $8,000. His heavy subscription of $000,000.00 has enhanced its value so that he would not be justified in taking less than a $100,000 cash down, and then he would not know what to do with the money. Now, if we had a few more of just such as these, where would we be to-day? That other class we spoke of is so numerous and demoralized that we will have to defer their pedigree until some-other time. May the Lord have mercy on their souls.

HISTORY OF INDIANA.

The teachers of this State have long felt the need of some means to enable them to learn something of the history of our State, while the law requires a knowledge of the history of the United State, it leaves them to do as they please about acquiring a better knowledge of Indiana itself. As a natural consequence, but little of this is known to most teachers. Many seem scarcely to realize that the State has a history. The ordinary works on this subject, while they give a full colonial history of the thirteen States, make but little mention of those admitted since the Revolution. In most cases nothing is said of them but to give the date of their admission into the union.

To supply this want, Superintendent Barns has prepared a brief history of the State, which will be added as an appendix to Anderson's Grammar School History. The work is now in the printers hands in New York, and will soon be ready. It adds but little to the size of the book, but gives a brief, concise account of the State from the earliest settlement to the present time.

The Angola Republican says that the increase of the State tax by the Republican Legislature was only from 5 to 15 instead of from 5 to 20 cents as we stated. Under the old basis of valuation this would be correct, but the standard of value was increased nearly double at the same time practically making the State levy 20 cents more than the Democrats had it. And the Republicans don't want to be responsible for this heavy burden put upon the tax-payers. But we can't possibly excuse the Radicals in this matter. It was there funeral, they were running things and had full power, and it is to the party in power we look to for wholesome legislation.—We don't wonder at the Republican trying to escape the responsibility but the fact remains the same. Therefore we say again when the people walk up to the County Treasurer's office to perform the cheerful task of paying their taxes, they should remember that the last Republican legislature increased the State tax from five cents to twenty on the one hundred dollars.

That paper says the masses are not all deceived in this matter. No, we know that from the earnest protest we hear from our tax-payers generally, all condeming the extravagance that crushes them down these hard times. But why such a long article in the defence of the high tax if the masses are not deceived?

Butler Items.—Haskins & Son have the best livery stable in the county. It is a brick building, two stories high, and arranged with all the modern conveniences, when completed it will be one of the best in the country.

Hon. E. W. Fosdick, is building a hand some new law office. Mr F. is one of the reliable men of the town, and there are few enterprises in the interest of the place that does not find his name connected therewith.

Heasler & Fay have opened up a new stock of hardware, and are doing a fine business. They are both popular and clever gentlemen and understand their business in all its details.

Gengnagle & Son have also a fine stock of hardware, and are meeting with a liberal patronage.

Sheldon & Co. have sold out their drug store to Kinsly & Co. but are still at the old stand adjusting their business matters with their numerous patrons.

The happiest man in town is our friend Pinchin, and if there is anything to disturb the serenity of his life, it can't be nothing more than his politics, which is bad enough. But then, when Pinchin is anything he is that with all his might.

C. S. Stoy is doing a good business with his saw and planing mill. He has a new machine for dressing and preparing siding that does the business in good order.

Mr. Editor.—In your issue of March 26th, 1874, I see a communication which I suppose was intended for me, from a Learned Gent., who subscribes his name "A. B. C." and says he does not want information. I suppose he thinks what he does not know is not worth knowing—But I never saw a man in my life that was so learned or so smart, but what there was something left for other persons to know. Again he feels very modest in reference to being questioned. He appears to think it an unpardonable sin, to doubt the veracity of a preacher, that a man should take it for truth, and not read for themselves. I suppose the gent. would like to have men come to him in the night time, for fear of being seen by men, as did Nicomemus to the Saviour. But we have no such personages in these latter days as our Saviour or even such as the Apostles. But instead thereof, we have those that would be teachers and allow no person to question their sayings. These are those spoken of in Holy Writ that are going about deceiving the very elect if possible.

Now in reference to my wishing a pub lic discussion. I have no such desire; nevertheless I think I could hold friend A. B. C. about as uneasy as people generally get, on any subject he might make choice of. But a man that is not an expert swimmer should not venture out into deep water, as there might not be a friend near to reach forth his hand and lift him up, as did our Saviour to Peter.

Now, if there is any possible chance of gaining any information from friend A. B. C. concerning Old Apoleon, or his refined Intelligence, I would be extremely glad to receive them, as he gave no information in his communication whatever concerning that question. As I said before I am after information. But if friend A. B. C. feels incompetent for the task, I will excuse him and drop the subject, hoping he will endeavor to post himself up on the subject.

Respectfully,

W. M. B.

STEUBEN COUNTY.

The temperance movement in Angola still progresses, and the Republican says it accomplishing good results....The wheat crop is not very promising....At a meeting of the Northern Indiana Medical Association there, last week, the following gentlemen were elected delegates to the American Medical Association, which meets in Detroit, in June: J L Haggerty, S C VanAntwerp, J B Casebeer, G Erickson Jared Spooner, T F Wood, H D Wood T McNabb, J L Gilbert....The Republican comes to us this week in a new dress and greatly improved, under the management of Germ Brown and Frank McCartney.—The paper will be a Grant organ, and being owned and managed by the Court House ring, will take in Grant and his share in the salary grab, with considera-vim. The Grant party being on its last legs we fear the new management will have their hands full, but it is no doubt confidently expected that the ring in this county, by their new organ, can successfully blind the tax-payers to such an extent, at least, as to lead them by the nose where they will. If they fail in this, however, they can ascribe it to the fact, that old style of journalism of condeming what you see in others and covering up what exists at home, is not the winning card People are going to be more independent than to endorse what is notoriously corrupt and rotten.

NOBLE COUNTY.

ITEMS FROM THE NEW ERA.

The New Era, the Democratic paper of Noble county, is rapidly crushing out the little life that is left in the scheme to move the county seat from Albion..... The Grangers have published a call to organize a county council at Albion, the county seat, on the 25th... The machinery for the basket factory has arrived.... The house of Robt Chambers, York-tp., was entered and $176 stolen.

WHITLEY COUNTY.

The Commercial wants us to see another class of citizens when we visit that place, intimates that the ones we saw were not the substantial ones. Well, what we saw seemed to be agreeable and pleasant, and endowed with good, common sense. As to substance, we think the beautiful Central block is evidence enough on that score, the owners of which we esteem our special friends....We will inform the Post at the soonest possible moment when the dramatic club make their next appearance Our hall is ready for the plaster and we are awaiting that inviting event, and we hope Mr. Ensley will rush things.... James Washborn takes only five colums in the Post for his advertisement. Oh, for Washborn here ...A new Auditor has come to light in Columbia City. Its a son of the present incumbent. The Post says, "we hope that example may do some good in the temperance movement. Our total-abstinence fathers should look after their sons who frequent billiard saloons so much. Commence at home.

ALLEN COUNTY.

It has been finally agreed to have an exposition at Fort Wayne. The following resolutions were passed:

1. That we find the citizens of Ft Wayne cordially endorse the project to establish an Exposition of Mechanical, Industrial and Fine Arts, in connection with the annual Agricultural Fair to be held in this city, commencing September 8th, 1874.

2. That we pledge ourselves to aid in raising a guarantee fund of $30,000, in furtherance of the scheme.

DEFIANCE COUNTY

The Democrat says, at a meeting of the stockholders of the B. F. & C. Railroad held in Columbus on Monday the following gentlemen were elected Directors:

W C Quincy, Wm Keyser, John D Cowan, W C Holgate, A J Smith and John Gardner. Of these gentlemen Mr. Holgate of Defiance, is the only one not directly in the employ of the company. W C Quincy was elected Prest., Wm Wing Secy and Treas., and James L Randolph, Chief Eng'r. The President reported that the road would be completed through Ohio by August 1st and to Chicago this year

Cedar Creek, April 12, 1874

Mr. Editor.—It seems that the Courier is disposed to give the "celebrated nigger talent" a little gratuitious advertising and especially to remind the citizens of Butler township, and all others, that this celebrated talent was organized at Butler Center.

Now, we beg leave to say, publish and cry-out that Butler Center may have been guilty of grevious wrongs against humanity and the State, been the rendezvous of highwaymen, thieves and all evil disposed persons; but, sir, Butler Center never was guilty of the last great and unpardonable sin, as you would charge her with. Butler Center has suffered long and much, long ere this reaches you her cup of sorrow will be well-nigh filled. The hair has been wrongfully misplaced, her back is broken.

I would not willfully charge others with this great responsibility, but, sir, self preservation actuates me to tell the truth "though the heavens fall." Altona, who has'nt heard the name? Altona the 2nd embryo city of the famous frog ponds, where trains don't stop 20 minutes for dinner, situated in Richland township, DeKalb County, about 7 miles nearly west of Auburn on the Baltimore Railroad. Altona (not the Pennsylvania Altona) is the place that gave birth, organized and fostered this "celebrated nigger talent"—let history record it. Auburn may also feel proud. She contributed some and the most of the prominent "array of talent" for instance, Bayles, Lunsford, &c., Not a member of this famous "Johnson and Christie's minstrel troupe" live in Butler township, nor have they, as an organization, ever been at Butler Center. It is probably hard, very hard, for some individuals, or even localities, to become suddenly famous, or accused of any great wrong. Altona and Auburn must stand it.

ANOTHER NEW ENTERPRISE.

Another new enterprise has been taken hold of by two of our responsible and enterprising citizens. It is that of a large and extensive millinery emporium, something more extensive and complete than has ever before been attempted in the county. They are making preparations to carry a full and complete line of millinery goods, and notions of every description, so that it will not be necessary to go to larger places for anything in this line. The new firm, under the name of W. Martin & Co., are refitting the rooms above Davenport & Co's. drug store until they can get into a more suitable location. Mrs Martin has just returned from Cleveland, where she has made a large investment in a complete assortment of every desirable article to be found in that city, such as a full line of Bonnets and Bonnet goods, a fine display of which can now be seen. There is also a fine assortment of embroiders, ladies' cloaks and Dresses, Marseilles trimmings, Sashes in all shades, childrens white aprons, Kid Gloves, Hosiery, Hoop Skirts, ready made Underwear, Lace Collars all colors, Neck Russias, Collarettes, Ladies' Satchels, Neck Ties, Scarfs, Lalo and Linen Handkerchiefs, Hair goods, Fringes, Ruffles and a great profusion of Flowers, Ribbons, and Straw goods. Something new in the way of dress protectors, and a fine lot of perfumery have been added. Bleaching, dress-making and cutting and fitting will be a principal feature in this new establishment, and as they will have in employ a large force they are ready to take all orders and fill them with promptness and satisfaction. A large force of young ladies is all ready to work, all well skilled in their line of work, and our citizens may rest assured that good work will be the motto of the new establishment.

HARD JUSTICE.

A crab and a turtle lived under a myrtle,
Just in the pond at the foot of the hill,
The crab was the hack—sharp, snappy and black,
The turtle was master—fat, pokey and still.

The turtle drew orders from all the pond's borders;
The crab did the marketing all by himself,
And worms fat as butter and all full of sputter
He brought for his master to lay on the shelf.

They lived there together through all the fine weather,
And then came the autumn with whirlwind and gale;
The pond grew an ocean, and in the commotion
The turtle imagined his victuals were stale.

"I've pains in my liver," said he with a shiver;
"The worms are like shavings, the snails have no meat,
I'm meager and hollow; I was an Apollo;
Go quickly and get me some food I can eat."

They argued together. The crab said the weather
Was much too severe for his delicate frame;
"The wind," said his master, "will blow you the faster;"
Then kicked the crab out with no scruples or shame.

Ten sprawls! he is landed, well watered and sanded;
One groan! and he starts for the inn just ahead;
He's nobody's chicken to mind for a kicking;
He'll have his revenge on the turtle instead.

"A splendid old turtle lives under the myrtle,"
He cries to the landlord who came to the door,
"Go get him for dinner before he grows thinner, Go quick! I will show you the way to the shore."

The crab went the faster, and reached his old master
In time to inform him of what he had done.
"Oh! whippity-whoof, sir, you'll make a fine soup, sir,
I'll watch while they fix you. Oh! that will be fun."

The landlord looked gently, but very intently,
All over the crab who had acted as guide;
Then said: "You are tender and dainty and slender,
You'll do for my supper, well buttered and fried."

The crab cried in terror, perceiving his error;
The landlord walked off with both master and man.
They boiled the fat turtle from under the myrtle,
And fried the false crab in a hot buttered pan.

JO DENTON'S VISION.

Jo Denton was considered an eminently respectable man. He had amassed wealth, he moved in society, patronized art and literature, was a pillar in his church, and dabbled in politics just enough to smash the party slate when it did not suit him. We are not going to inquire too closely into Jo's early history, nor rake over the ashes of the past, nor dig up the old stepping-stones by which he had reached his success; they have for long years been covered up with the green turf of respectability; academic groves are planted above them, the church has a liberal pleasant nook, all seemingly unaware of the foundation it rests upon; and society claims the whole as its own. Yet there will be skeletons in the closet of memory, if nowhere else; the ghosts of murdered Banquos will appear at times and places inopportune; moral earthquakes will upheave the wicked old landmarks of sin, and bring to light all that is hideous in a man's past life, and show, after all the covering up, that Satan has a long time held a mortgage on his soul, and has patiently bided his time for foreclosure. In Jo Denton's case it happened in this way:

He was accustomed, like many respectable men, to take his champagne and toddy in company with a few congenial spirits, who together constituted a "Convivial Club"—eminently hightoned and respectable, of course. It was not often that anybody called for them during these orgies, if we may so term them; but on one occasion, when the champagne had sparkled with unusual brilliancy until night had stolen a kiss from rosy morning, Jo sprang from his seat and said: "Somebody calls me," and went out of the room. Directly there came back an unearthly shriek, and Jo's voice, in its wildest accents, cried: "Away, damnable shape! I cheated you out of your property? It's a lie, you villain!" and in a quick succession followed two distinct reports of a pistol. Before his companions could reach the door Jo tumbled headlong into the room, with the blood streaming from his head, and, to all appearance, dead.

"He's shot!" cried all in chorus.

On searching outside nobody could be found; but there was a revolver lying near the door.

"An assassin!" cried one.

"Some old enemy!" cried another.

The police were aroused as quickly as possible, and started in pursuit of the murderer. While they are "working up the case" we will follow poor Jo. Can there be a doubt in any theological mind where he went, drunk as he was and boiling over with the bluest of blue devils? Closely, then, we follow him as he presents himself at the gates of the infernal regions and asks admittance. A demon who acted the part of door-keeper put his ear to the key-hole and demanded who was there.

"A friend," answered Joe.

"Advance, friend, and give your name."

"Jo D nton."

"All right," said the demon; "the devil has been expecting you for some time. Come right in!"

As Jo entered, bowing low, the demon gave a whistle of astonishment as he said: "Well-a-day, my friend, you are in a sad plight; what has happened to your head?"

"Top blown clean off," answered Jo; "and I'm afraid I'm done for unless your folks can help me."

"I'll announce you to his Satanic Majesty at once," said the demon, darting away.

In a few moments there was a sound as of a Kansas cyclone, and Satan bounded into the room, filling it with a horrible smell of burnt gunpowder.

"Why, old friend Jo!" cried Satan, throwing his claws about him, and sulphurous smoke into his face, "here at last, old boy, eh?" and at the same time giving him a friendly hug with his tail. "Glad to see you! You have done well—played the religious dodge to perfection, and for so many years!—ha! ha!"

"Fact is, your Satanic Majesty," said Jo, "I didn't mean to come just yet—left my earthly affairs in an unsettled condition. My property will go to the d—l—be[illegible]n, I meant to say that my family [illegible] provided for, unless I go back to the [illegible]h to settle my business."

"Want to go back to earth," said Satan, "well, well, you have been a good and faithful servant, and I'll see what can be done. But what's this?" continued Satan, "top of your head gone? Bless me, how odd you look!—moral works all gone! ha! ha! You can't go back to earth in that shape."

"That's just it," said Jo; "I want to get fixed up for a few years—new top-head."

"Can construct a skull for you," said Satan, "but won't put the moral works in again; you might give me the slip."

"Well," said Jo, "fix up the skull respectable-like, and I'll trust to luck to get it filled up."

"Must make one stipulation," said Satan.

"What is that?"

"That you will not let certain parties that I shall name occupy any part of your reconstructed skull."

"What parties are they?"

"You see your head is off just above Destructiveness, as the phrenologists call it."

"Well?"

"There is a big space to be filled, if I reconstruct your skull on the old plan."

"Exactly," said Jo, "and there are parties waiting to occupy it."

"There's the rub," said Satan; "now I'll name such parties as must not be permitted to occupy it."

"Go on," said Jo.

"Well, to begin with, there's Cautiousness. I don't want any Cautiousness in your head; you might have ruined a great many more young men if you had not been so cautious about the consequences. Next are Sublimity and Ideality. Though Ideality leads a few astray in the matter of extravagant dressing, I know she is my enemy. Poets, artists, the best writers of all ages, employ Ideality and Sublimity in the conception and finishing of the best productions. Sublimity was old John Milton's right bower in the constrhction of 'Pardise Lost,' in which he painted me in such forbidding colors. I'm not a particular friend of Sublimity."

"Well, what more?"

"There's Conscientiousness. On no consideration must Conscientiousness occupy a place in your head. That faculty has caused me more trouble than all the rest. It's always interfering with a man who undertakes to serve me. Says Pope:

> 'What conscience dictates to be done
> Or warns me not to do,
> This, teach me more than hell to shun,
> That, more than heaven pursue.'

No, no; Conscientiousness must not be admitted. It's the 'still small voice.' If I could have my way, I'd leave that faculty out of every child that's born."

"You are making a good many vacancies. Any more?"

"Yes, there's Hope. I don't want you to let Hope have even desk-room in your head. It's always retarding the lost sinner's progress to hell. As the poet says—

> 'Hope springs eternal in the human breast.'

Just as I think I've got a sinner sure, Hope breathes into his soul an encouraging word, and away goes my sinner toward the gates of Paradise."

"Surely," said Jo, "that is enough of the old occupants to exclude from my reconstructed head."

"No, no," said Satan; "I'm not through yet. Human Nature must be excluded. I ruin people, and especially young people, by hiding my motives; and your young man or young woman who has Human Nature divines these motives, and I lose my prize."

"Still more exclusions?"

"Yes; Veneration must be shut out. Respect for parents and veneration for the Supreme Being are bad for me. It costs a world of trouble to counteract their influence when they have taken root in childhood. Benevolence, too, must be excluded, unless, indeed, it be so very large that a man will cheat and lie and steal for the purpose of having means wherewith to exercise his Benevolence; but this is so rare that I think it had better be excluded."

"I hope you are near the end of your proscriptions," said Jo.

"One more," answered Satan, "and a very important one, it is Spirituality. On no account allow Spirituality to cross the threshold of your brain. It's a very Jacob's ladder to heaven, and once firmly ensconced in a man's brain, I may as well abandon him."

"Is that the end?"

"That will do; I do not think that what good will be left can possibly keep you from me. And now, to close the business, I must have a second mortgage on your soul that you will fill these vacant places in your skull with such tenants as Destructiveness, that kills his fellow-man; Secretiveness, that makes men liars and thieves; Acquisitiveness, that gets money for its own sake, and does no good with it; Combativeness, that is ever foremost in quarrels—these and their friends are the tenants that must occupy your reconstructed skull."

"Your conditions are hard," said Jo, "and what if I do not fulfill them?"

"Then I shall call for you at the earliest convenient moment, and you go back to earth no more."

"But if I fulfill them?"

"Then you can stay upon earth as long as you choose."

"Thanks, thanks!" cried Jo; "and can arrange my affairs."

"Your skull shall be made whole!" cried Satan, and without more words his architects fell to work on Jo's skull. What with pounding, chiseling, and making the partitions, they drove him to distraction; and to add to his horrible agony and terror, when it was nearly completed the walls began to settle and the whole concern to lurch as if it would fall. Then came the jack-screws that were put under to raise it up. The planks upon which to work them were thrown remorselessly upon his soft brain, and the power of a hundred imps applied. Jo yelled in agony as they turned the screws. At length his skull was completed, and Jo found himself with a whole head.

"Now," said Satan, "lie down and rest yourself before undertaking your journey to earth; for I assure you it is much more difficult to get out of hell than to get into it."

Following the advice of Satan, Jo laid himself down in the coolest spot he could find, and so fatigued was he with the pain of the operation, that in dreams he was wafted back to earth again. His old companions welcomed him, but his heart was heavy with the thoughts of his terrible contract with Satan. "How is it possible," thought he, "to fill the empty chasms in my head—once the homes of my best and truest friends—with such demands as Satan would have? Ah, me! would that I had never been born!"

To add to his misery, Conscientiousness came and rapped at the door of its accustomed home. "I see, friend Jo, thou art here again. I've been searching for thee far and wide, that I might occupy my old place again, although you shut me close, and stifled my voice when I tried to save thee from harm."

"Begone! thou art quite ready to occupy another's property!"

"I tried to find thee," returned Conscientiousness, "but in vain."

"Avaunt! I tell thee, or I will smite thee to the earth!"

Next came Sublimity and Ideality—the one majestic in mien, the other the personification of all that is lovely in the graces.

"Here is our dear home at last!" and so saying Ideality threw her arms about Jo's neck and kissed him. "Now let us go into our abiding place."

"Curses upon you!" cried Jo. "You here too? Away! Bring some fiend to occupy your place, unless ye can decorate hell with more horrors than it now possesses!"

Ideality gathered up her beautiful robes and fled in dismay.

"Satan in this work!" cried Sublimity, as he dashed his ponderous weight against the door of his old home, and in an instant was inside.

"Well done!" cried Jo. "You're there, are you?"

"Yes, and I'm here to stay."

"I'm lost! I'm lost!" cried Jo.

"No you're saved!" cried Sublimity, "if you but call in your old friends. There's Conscientiousness, the just; Hope, that never despairs; Human Nature, that can tell you the motives of Satan himself; Veneration, that looks for help to the Supreme Being; Benevolence, that will win your enemies by kindness, and Spirituality, that lights up all in the darkest hour. Let them in, and then let Satan win if he can!"

"Oh, that's your game is it?" yelled Satan, hurling a brimstone ladle at Jo's head.

"Come, friends!" shrieked Jo, "quick! help against Satan! Come, Conscience, Hope, Spirituality! Oh, Jesus!—come!"

* * * * * *

"Jo! dear Jo! Don't you know me, your own wife? Here are all your friends!"

Jo looks for a moment wildly at his wife, and then falls back upon the bed. The wildness is gone.

"Where am I?" he at length asks.

"In your own house, dear Jo."

"Thank God!" he says. Now isn't my head shot off?"

"No, no; only a wound."

"Was I in a fight?"

"Never mind now, Jo, you must lie down and rest yourself."

"Just what Satan said to me."

"He's out of his head," says one.

"No, not now," says Jo, "I'm as sane as ever I was in my life—that is, if my head is all right"—and Jo carefully put his hand on the top of his head as if expecting to find it gone.

"Thank heaven! then it was a dream."

He insisted on being told what had happened.

"Three days ago," said his wife, "you went to your Convivial Club, and—and drank until you had the——"

"Blue-devils," suggested Jo.

"Yes, and in your raving you drew your revolver and—and—"

"Shot the top of my head off!" interrupted Jo.

"No, but made an ugly pistol-shot wound on your head, and the surgeon had to raise a portion of your skull from the brain. A hair's breadth more, and you would have been past help."

Then there was more rejoicing and more thankfulness.

Jo mended rapidly under the loving care of his wife, and was soon able to be about. He went once more to the Convival Club, and told his dream, and bade them a final farewell. Some who had taken a glass or two laughed at it, but the majority took it more seriously, and said it must, indeed, have been a terrible experience that could make Jo Denton a temperate and really worthy man.

A Happy Pair.

A London correspondent writes: "The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh have been endowed with an income something like $200,000 a year. They are to have at least two magnificent residences in England—one, Clarence House, in town, and another, not, I believe, fully decided on yet, in the country. Besides, they will have two establishments at St. Petersburg, when they choose to visit that frigid native climate of the Duchess Marie. This is leaving out of account the freedom they will be able to make of Windsor and Buckingham Palace, and Osborne and Balmoral and Marlborough House and Sandringham, the residences of Alfred's royal mother and brother. And what, then, will be their life? One or two ladies and gentlemen of noble birth will be attached to them as ladies and gentlemen in waiting, equerries, and high social attendants. They will have stables, with an ample choice of equine flesh for every imaginable purpose of pleasure. Their chariots, coupes, dog carts, cabriolets, pony carriages, will enable them to enjoy every variety of comfortable and showy drivings. They may go where they list, for the greatest nobles will be only too glad to receive them chez eux, and the royal boxes at theaters and opera and the best places on the grand stand of the turf will be at their very good service.

New Cure for Small-Pox.

In Holland, quinine has recently been administered with great effect in cases of small-pox. German physicians claim to have used it successfully for several years past against that fearful disease. It must be administered, however, at an early stage of the disease, and in very large doses, to counteract the effect of the small-pox poison. It must also be very pure; and the complaint is getting more and more general that very little of the quinine sold in the market is genuine.

The Postmaster General's dignity must have suffered, the other day, when he received a letter from Delta, Iowa, saying, "If you don't git some one to run this 'ere poastoffus purty soon it'll be throwd in the river, for I'm going off on a bear hunt and can't fool any moar."

The first daily newspaper ever published in the English language was issued in London, March 11, 1702—one hundred and seventy-two years ago. It was called the Courant, and was about the size of half a sheet of foolscap, printed only on one side, and contained "no editorials, locals, court news, political matter, advertisements, or English intelligence of any kind."

Desperate Valor of the Ashantees.

A correspondent writes from the field: "The Ashantees fought like demons. They were present in enormous numbers, pouring on our gallant troupes by thousands, yelling and screaming hideously. Although our firing told on them immensely, they had to be driven from point to point, and even when pushed out of the successive villages, returned to the attack. In the thickest parts of the brush they climbed the trees in order to fire more effectually upon our troops. The order of advance from Insarful was as follows: The attack was made in the form of a square, through the middle of which ran the main road, and the line extended about 300 yards on either side. The 42d regiment, preceded by Lord Gifford and his scouts, formed the front line, with two of Rait's guns in the center, Gordon's Houssas in a dense corner of jungle. It really seemed as if nothing but the failure of their ammunition would drive them out. Now at one point, now at another, along the hill crest they poured down crushing volleys. Life they counted at no price if only a white man could be killed. It was the same desperate obstinacy we had seen at Abrakrampa. They climbed trees to fire with more deadly effect, but the mass just lay down and shot till shot themselves or short of ammunition. Sir Archibald Alison, Brigadier of the white troops, declared he never came under a fiercer fire in India or the Crimea."

A Patent Piano-Player.

The latest invention, calculated to do away with human skill, is a patent piano-player, by which an aspirant for musical distinction can perform the most difficult pieces without the preliminary torture known as practicing, or those terrors to the infant mind called scales. This wonderful machine owes its birth to Paris. It occupies a position in front of the key-board of the piano, and extends from above the keyboard to the floor. Over the keys of the piano are keys corresponding to the keys beneath them. These are the fingers of the machine, and they have this advantage over the human hand, that they have a finger for every note. The top of the machine is about one foot in width. It has in the center two rollers, which are moved by a crank. These carry the music through, and as it passes the piano plays it. The music is on paper, and the notes are made by cutting holes in squares. As these holes pass a certain point they allow a hammer to pass through, and the stroke of that hammer is communicated to its own key on the piano. Each key has its hammer. It only requires that these holes be cut at proper intervals to strike any number of keys in given series. The machine can be adapted to any instrument with keys.

The Late Senator Sumner's Family.

Of the late Charles Sumner's family the Boston Journal gives these facts: "Senator Sumner was the son of Sheriff Charles P. Sumner, a well-known and respected citizen. He had two sisters, Mary and Julia, and three brothers, Albert, Henry and George. The only survivors of these brothers and sisters is Julia, now Mrs. Dr. Hastings, a resident of California. Two of the brothers were lost at sea; one at the same time that Margaret Fuller Orsoli met her fate. George died in a hospital from softening of the brain. On the 17th of October, 1866, the Senator married Mrs. Alice Hooper, widow of William Sturgis Hooper, who was a son of Samuel Hooper. Mrs. Hooper was a daughter of Jonathan Mason. The marriage ceremony was performed by the late Bishop Eastburn. On the 10th of May, 1873, a divorce was decreed between the parties by Judge Colt, of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts."

Rochefort.

Fortune favors the brave. The rumor of Henri Rochefort's escape from the penal settlements in New Caledonia is confirmed. A Melbourne dispatch to the London Daily Telegraph gives some particulars of the affair. Rochefort, Pascal Grousset, and two other Communist convicts, managed to secure a small open boat, in which they boldly put out to sea. After being three days out the adventurers were fortunately picked up by a British sailing vessel and brought to an Australian port. It is said that Rochefort intends to visit this country on a lecturing tour, and then take up his residence in Brussels.

Consumption.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, M. D., World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y.

The great prevalence of this disease, and its fatal results, are well calculated to enlist our best efforts for its cure. What is Consumption? It is a disease of the lungs produced by an acrid and impure condition of the blood, which, circulating through these most delicate organs, poisons and irritates their tissues and invites the scrofulous humors of the blood, causing the deposition of tubercles and establishing local scrofula. Another prolific exciting cause of the development of scrofulous disease of the lungs, or tubercular consumption, is Chronic Nasal Catarrh, which, extending along the mucous lining membrane of the throat, trachea and bronchial tubes, finally attacks the substance of the lungs, and here establishes such an irritation as to invite the blood to deposit its burden of impurities in these organs. Consumption itself is not so often hereditary as is generally supposed. That a condition of low vitality may be transmitted from parents to children is unquestionably true. It is this deficiency of vitality which is inherited—a weakness which makes nutrition imperfect, and leads to the deposit of tubercles. But thousands of persons who inherit feeble vitality would never suffer from consumption if the functions of the system were kept correct and the blood pure. When the liver becomes torpid, and but very imperfectly pours off the effete, poisonous materials of the blood, the lungs, as has before been shown, become irritated. The general health becomes broken down, and the person feels languid, weak, faint, drowsy and confused. Pain in the right side, in the region of the liver, and sympathetic pain in the shoulders and spine, and through the lungs, is generally complained of. The patient has a dry, hacking cough—that liver Cough! Small, minute tubercles are developed in the lungs, and perhaps exist for months all unknown to their victim. Nothing is done to remove the tubercles by the ordinary treatment. Cough is only a symptom of the disease, yet this only is aimed at in the usual treatment.

There is no rational way to cure consumption except to purify the blood. Those poisonous materials in the blood which cause the tubercles must be thrown off by exciting the liver to action. Vitality must be supported, the system nourished and built up, and the development of tubercles thus prevented. Remove the blood poison by restoring the action of the liver, and the cough, which is only a symptom of the real disease, is relieved. You thereby strike at the root of incipient consumption and cure the patient.

From the properties and remedial effects of my Golden Medical Discovery, the reader will readily understand why it has been so successful in curing this fatal malady.

With it I have arrested the hacking and harassing cough, the night sweats and hectic fever of the consumptive invalid, snatched from the jaws of death and restored to health and happiness many who, but for my Discovery must soon have fallen victims to that relentless foe. God, I believe, has instilled into the roots and plants from which this wonderful medicine is extracted, the healing properties, by the use of which Consumption, the scourge of the human family, may in its early stages be promptly arrested and permanently cured. I do not wish to delude, flatter, and then disappoint the afflicted by asserting that this can be accomplished when the lungs are half consumed, as many do who, being devoid of all conscience, aim to humbug the afflicted, that they may sell their often worse than worthless compounds.

But if my Golden Medical Discovery is employed in the first or early stages of the disease, I know from ample observation, and actual tests in hundreds of cases, that it will positively arrest the disease and restore health and strength. From its wonderful power over this terrible disease, I thought strongly of calling it my Consumptive cure; but from the fact that it is a perfect specific for the sore throat and hoarseness to which ministers and other public speakers and singers are subject, and also for Bronchitis, and all severe coughs, and is an invaluable remedy for diseases of the Liver, and also as a Blood Purifier, I decided not to apply to it a name which might mislead and prevent its use in other diseases for which it is so admirably adapted. I wish to mention a most wonderful nutritive property which it possesses, and which so peculiarly adapts it to the wants of the consumptive and the scrofulous. The nutritive properties possessed by Cod Liver Oil are trifling when compared with those possessed by my Discovery. It is astonishing to see how it builds up the solid muscle, and increases the flesh and weight of those whose systems are reduced below the usual standard of perfect health. The following testimonial fully confirms all that I claim for my Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of Consumption:

Bleeding from Lungs, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Consumption. A Wonderful Cure.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 13th, 1874.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I had suffered from Catarrh in an aggravated form for about twelve years and for several years from Bronchial trouble. Tried many doctors and things with no lasting benefit. In May, '72, becoming nearly worn out with excessive Editorial labors on a paper in New York City, I was attacked with Bronchitis in a severe form, suffering almost a total loss of voice. I returned home here, but had been home only two weeks when I was completely prostrated with Hemorrhage from the Lungs, having four severe bleeding spells within two weeks, and first three inside of nine days. In the September following, I improved sufficiently to be able to be about, though in a very feeble state. My Bronchial trouble remained and the Catarrh was tenfold worse than before. Every effort for relief seemed fruitless. I seemed to be losing ground daily. I continued in this feeble state, raising blood almost daily until about the first of March, 1873, when I became so bad as to be entirely confined to the house. A friend suggested your remedies. But I was extremely skeptical that they would do me good, as I had lost all heart in remedies, and began to look upon medicine and doctors with disgust. However, I obtained one of your circulars, and read it carefully, from which I came to the conclusion that you understood your business, at least. I finally obtained a quantity of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, your Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets, and commenced their vigorous use according to directions. To my surprise, I soon began to improve. The Discovery and Pellets in a short time brought out a severe eruption, which continued for several weeks. I felt much better, my appetite improved, and I gained in strength and flesh. In three months every vestige of the Catarrh was gone, the Bronchitis had nearly disappeared, had no Cough whatever, and I had entirely ceased to raise blood; and, contrary to the expectation of some of my friends, the cure has remained permanent. I have had no more Hemorrhages from the Lungs, and am entirely free from Catarrh, from which I had suffered so much and so long. The debt of gratitude I owe for the blessing I have received at your hands, knows no bounds. I am thoroughly satisfied, from my experience, that your medicines will master the worst forms of that odious disease Catarrh, as well as Throat and Lung Diseases. I have recommended them to very many, and shall ever speak in their praise. Gratefully yours,

Wm. H. Spencer.

P. O. Box 507, Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Spencer is a gentleman very widely known, and among those who know him, no one would pretend to question his statements, nor doubt his sound judgment.

His testimonial is only a fair sample of thousands of others received from those who have been cured of Lingering Coughs, Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption, of severe diseases peculiar to Females, and many other forms of disease, by using my Family Medicines, after they have been pronounced incurable by eminent physicians. I have more testimonials of this kind in my office than one man can lift, yet I had no room for them here, having already trespassed upon the columns of this paper more largely than I had intended when commencing this article upon Consumption.

Dr. Walker tried various extracts from herbs and roots, without benefit. He noticed, however, that Alcohol, that bane of the human race, was used in their preparation, and he determined to exclude the poison entirely from his own practice, so that the sin of making men drunkards, while pretending to cure them, should never lie at his door. The Almighty blessed his experiments, and in the Vinegar Bitters he has produced a pure, health-restoring agent, which banishes disease in every form, re-invigorates the system, and restores strength to the feeblest sufferer. There is no part of life's citadel where the enemy can make a lodgment, that the Vinegar Bitters will not find him and put him to the rout. Impurity of blood is the parent of disease; the liver, the stomach, the lungs, the nerves, every vital organ is affected primarily, from this cause, and in this direction the Vinegar Bitters acts with magical influence. 37

The Organ as a household instrument has been rapidly growing in favor, and the yearly sales are now enormous. A good organ remains in tune, is easily kept in order, and blends naturally with the quality of the voice. The advertisement of the Smith American Organ Co., in another column, is referred to the consideration of our readers. This house has an enviable reputation for good work and fair dealing.

Where Does It Come From?

Pints and quarts of filthy catarrhal discharges. Where does it all come from? The mucous membrane, lining the chambers of the nose, and its little glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life-liquid was to build up the system, but it is extracted and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which also acts directly upon these glands, correcting them, applying Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from.

CATARRH OF TWENTY YEARS' STANDING CURED.

Monroe, Ouachita Parish, La., Sept. 15, 1871.

R. V. Pierce, M. D.:

Sometime about last June I commenced the use of your medicines, and they have entirely cured me of Catarrh of twenty years' standing. Respectfully, Mrs. C. E. Phillips.

Our sprightly Western magazine contains as usual a number of entertaining stories, well spiced with other good reading, and in addition an excellent plan for a modern home, with an itemized estimate of cost of building. The articles on the toilet are continued, and the ladies will find the one in this number even more interesting and valuable than the two preceding ones, as it is running over with sensible suggestions and valuable receipts for removing tan, preventing wrinkles. FARM, HOUSEHOLD AND KITCHEN.

THE FARM.

"LIVER ROT."—An English farmer, who has kept sheep for forty years, says he has found rock salt an antidote for liver rot, and that these animals cannot be too liberally supplied with this saving substance. He further declares that in cases of congestion of the liver, or rot, he has found two tablespoonfuls of turpentine, shaken up in a half pint of water and given to the sufferer, "a frequent cure, unless the disease has made very great progress.

GOOD BUTTER.—An exchange says: "The market will never be glutted with good butter, any more than the world will be overstocked with paintings and sculpture. Let no one think that he can vault into success either in making or selling. He must begin at the bottom and work up. He may labor at a loss for several years. The only way is to keep at it; read, think and work; get good customers, first at the price of store butter, if need be; make your butter a necessary article upon their tables; let them find that its quality is unvarying, and then they will be willing to pay what it is worth."

NO GOOD.—The New York Herald says there is no use in manuring lands to grow weeds; in buying tools to rust out under a stone wall; in erecting buildings to rot away for want of paint and care; in buying animals and leaving them to the unhindered action of disease; in accumulating manure to fill the air with its exhalations and the brooks with its leachings; in raising forage to floor a barnyard with; in buying land to yearly lose its strength and virtue; in growing crops to feed unheeded insects. Yet more than one of these defects may be seen on almost any farm in the country, and the extent to which they lower the average success of our farmers is greater than would be believed.

CURE FOR FISTULA.—The opening at the top of the withers should be enlarged so that the forefinger can be introduced, in order to ascertain how far and in what direction the disease has extended. If the matter has penetrated and formed sinus, they should be completely laid open with the knife. The first dressing should consist of some active caustic. The following will answer: Take of sulphate of zinc, one part; water, four parts. This solution is to be applied to the diseased part daily by means of a little tow or sponge fastened to the end of a probe or stick. One circumstance it is very necessary to attend to in the treatment of the fistula—that is, if there is any cavity, pouch or sinus, by which the matter may be retained, the obstacle should be immediately removed, either by laying it completely open, or by making an opening in the most depending or lowest part, so as to allow the matter to run off freely.—Spirit of the Times.

GOOD FARMING.—Here is the secret of good farming. You can take from the land more than you restore to it, in some shape or other, without ruining it, and so destroy your capital. Different soils may require different modes of treatment and cropping, but in every variety of soil these are the golden rules to be attended to: Drain until you find that the water from heaven does not stagnate in the soil, but runs through it and off it freely. Turn up and till the land until your foot sinks into a loose, powdery loam, that the sun and air readily pass through. Let no weed occupy the place where a useful plant could possibly grow. Collect every particle of manure that you can, whether liquid or solid. Let nothing on the farm go to waste. Put in your crops in that course which experience has shown to lead to success in their growth, and an enrichment and not impoverishment of the land. Give every plant room to spread its roots in the soil and its leaves in the air. And in all your operations endeavor to be a little ahead of your neighbors.

CLEAN AND DRY STABLES.—A horse will endure severe cold weather without much inconvenience, so long as he is furnished with a dry stable. But require him to stand on a wet, foul floor, and his health will soon begin to fail. Horses often suffer from cold feet and legs, and many stables have damp and wet floors. Few men who handle horses give proper attention to their feet and legs. Especially is this the case on farms. Much time is spent of a morning in rubbing, brushing and smoothing the hair on the sides and hips, but at no time are the feet examined and properly cared for. The feet of horse require more care than the body. They need ten times as much, for in one respect they are almost the entire horse. All the grooming that can be done won't avail anything if the horse is forced to stand where his feet will be filthy. The feet will become disordered, and then the legs will get badly out of fix; and with bad feet and bad legs, there is not much else of the horse fit for anything. Stable prisons generally are very severe on the feet and legs of horses; and unless the buildings can afford a dry room, where a horse can walk around, lie down, or roll over, they are not half so healthy or comfortable to the horse as the pasture, and should be avoided by all good hostlers in the country.

EXTRAORDINARY YIELD OF CORN.—Mr. John W. Murry, of Carroll county, Maryland, reports, in the Westminister Advocate, that on one acre, the past season, he raised 30¼ barrels (153¼ bushels) of shelled corn. The reported culture was as follows: The land was so situated that it received the washings from the road and from his barn-yard, and had been in grass for fifteen years. In the spring of 1872 he plowed it and planted it in corn. The yield that year was 26¼ barrels. On the 16th of May, 1873, he plowed the corn-stubble ground very deep, and harrowed and rolled it. The next day he sowed 300 pounds of bone-dust and harrowed it again, marked it off 32 inches one way, sowed 200 pounds of Rhodes' super phosphate in the rows, and dropped the corn, one and two kernels in the hills, 10 inches apart. The variety of corn was the Chester county mammoth yellow. On the 4th of June, as much was missing, he "dragged the ground and replanted;" plowed on the 10th, some hills still missing; on the 17th plowed, hoed and plastered the weak spots;" on the 30th, dragged, plowed and thinned; on the 4th of July, "hilled with a potato plow as deep as one horse could pull," and continued to thin as it required until the shoots appeared.

HOUSEHOLD AND KITCHEN.

LAMB.—Lamb should be roasted until the gravy that drops is white; the fore-quarters are the best for a roast; the leg is good broiled or roasted; two hours will roast the fore-quarters well.

BROILED BEEF.—The best piece is the round, the next best the edge-bone. Put it into boiling water, otherwise it will lose all its juiciness. Ten pounds of beef will require three hours or more of boiling.

AN EXCELLENT PUDDING.—One-half pound suet, shred fine; one-half pound grated bread crumbs; one-quarter pound leaf sugar, the yolks of four eggs, and the white of two, well beaten; two tablespoonfuls of orange marmalade or sliced citron, if preferred. To be put into a buttered mold, and boiled for two hours. To be served with wine poured over it, or sauce.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.—If you want to have buckwheat cakes at a moment's warning, at any and all times, mix in a large stone or earthen pot. When you take out quantum sufficit for breakfast or supper, mix as much in another vessel as you take out, and pour into the large pot, stirring it well. By observing this rule you will always have nice light cakes and plenty of them when you want them. The large pot must be kept in the cellar.

TOOTH POWDER.—The following recipe for tooth powder possesses three essential virtues, giving an odorous breath, preserving the enamel, and cleansing and preserving the gums: Powdered orris root, half an ounce; powdered Peruvian bark, one ounce; prepared chalk, one ounce; powdered charcoal, two ounces; oil of bergamot, or lavender, 20 drops. These ingredients must be reduced to an impalpable powder and thoroughly mixed in a druggist's mortar.

RICE CREAM.—Put in a stew-pan four ounces of ground rice, two ounces of sugar; a few drops of the essence of almonds, or any other essence you choose, with two ounces fresh butter; add a quart of milk; boil from fifteen to twenty minutes, till it forms a smooth substance, though not too thick; then pour into a mold previously oiled, and serve when cold and well set. If the mold be dipped in warm water, the cream will turn out like a jelly. If no mold, put either in cups or a pie-dish. The rice had better be done a little too much than under.

AN INVALUABLE WASH FOR THE TEETH.—Dissolve two ounces of powdered borax in three pints of hot water. Before quite cold add one tablespoonful of spirits of camphor and two tablespoonfuls of tincture of myrrh; bottle and cork tightly. Add one wine-glass of this mixture to a tumbler of warmish water, morning and evening, and apply it with a soft brush or sponge rubber. This solution will preserve and beautify the teeth, arrest incipient decay, and produce a healthy action on the gums, and is the best thing wherewith to rinse the mouth. It is an easy thing to whiten teeth by the use of acids or corrosive substances, but those will invariably injure the enamel, and thus produce decay.

London.

The population of London is 3,883,092. This vast multitude is more than the population of New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Boston, and all the leading American cities taken together. Seven hundred and seventy-seven thousand dwellings lodge this vast multitude, which consumes annually about 4,400,000 barrels of flour, 420,000 bullocks, 2,975,000 sheep, 49,000 calves, 61,250 hogs, one market alone supplying annually 7,043,750 head of game. This, together with 5,250,000 salmon, irrespective of other fish and flesh, is washed down by 75,600,000 gallons of ale and porter, 3,500,000 gallons of spirits, and 113,750 pipes of wine. To fill its milk and cream jugs, 22,750 cows are kept. To light its streets at night, 630,000 gaslights consume every twenty-four hours, 22,270,000 cubic feet of gas. Its water system supplies 77,680,824 gallons per day, while its sewer system carries off 16,629,760 cubic feet of refuse. To warm its inhabitants, a fleet of 1,800 sails is employed in bringing (irrespective of railroads) annually 5,250,000 tons of coal. The smoke of this immense quantity of coal is so dense as to be plainly seen thirty-six miles from the city. To clothe this multitude, it takes 4,160 tailors, 50,400 boot and shoemakers, nearly 70,000 milliners and dressmakers, and 297,500 domestic servants. The streets are 2,900 in number, and if put together would extend about 4,000 miles. The principal ones are traversed by about 1,500 stages and 20,000 cabs (besides private carriages and carts), employing 50,000 horses.

ELASTIC TRUSS.

MOST IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT to RUPTURED Persons New and perfect Remedy for Hernia. The Invention of The Elastic Truss is without doubt the most important medical discovery of the Century. The results of this new discovery for the certain relief and cure of Hernia are most astonishing and gratifying. This new Truss is worn with perfect comfort night and day. It yields to every motion of the body, always retaining the Rupture during the hardest exercise or severest strain, and if the directions are followed a permanent cure will soon be effected. No well informed person will now wear any of the old-fashioned metal spring trusses that were formerly used, but now discarded. This new Truss is sent by Mail or Express to all parts of the country, with full directions for fitting. A full descriptive circular will be sent free if requested by Mail. The Elastic Truss will be supplied through the Surgeon-General's office on request, to any pensioners who are entitled to a Truss from the Government. Age or the length of time a patient has been ruptured will not prevent a cure.

From the numerous testimonials in our possession we append the following:

"After the experience of months, patients testify strongly to its efficacy, as well as to the ease and freedom from inconvenience with which the instrument is worn. With superior advantages, the Elastic Truss possesses in a high degree ALL requisites and qualifications claimed for other inventions. I have no hesitation in regarding it as an important means for the relief and cure of Hernia.
"J. M. CARNOCHAN, M. D.,
"Ex-Health Officer of the Port of New York, Surgeon-in Chief of New York State Hospital," etc., etc.

NEW YORK, March 10th, 1874.

GEO. V. HOUSE, M. D., Supt. Elastic Truss Co.:
Dear Sir—After suffering for thirty years in my own person from the use of every form of Metallic Truss procurable in this country and in Europe, I, two years ago, applied your Elastic Truss, and since that time I have experienced comfort and satisfaction, and been taught the truth, that the Elastic Truss is the only instrument that should be used for the relief and cure of Hernia; and now, after more than thirty years' continuous practice, and having adjusted many hundreds of Trusses (and for the last twenty months yours exclusively), I gratefully declare it to be my deliberate opinion, that your Elastic Truss is the only one entitled to the confidence of the public; that elasticity is the only power at all adapted to the requirements of a Truss or Supporter, and am convinced that your Elastic Truss actually cures a large proportion of all cases to which it is applied, not only among children, but in numerous cases within my own knowledge of patients from 50 to 75 years of age.

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL
Nature's Great Remedy
FOR ALL
THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES!!
It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medicinal properties are retained. Tar even in its crude state has been recommended by eminent physicians of every school. It is confidently offered to the afflicted for the following simple reasons:
1. IT CURES,—not by abruptly stopping the cough—but by dissolving the phlegm and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter causing the irritation. In cases of seated CONSUMPTION it both prolongs and renders less burdensome the life of the afflicted sufferer.
2. Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain, and subduing inflammation.
3. IT PURIFIES AND ENRICHES THE BLOOD. Positively curing all humors, from the common PIMPLE or ERUPTION to the severest cases of Scrofula. Thousands of affidavits could be produced from those who have felt the beneficial effects of PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL in the various diseases arising from IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD.
4. It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.
All who have known or tried Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's remedies require no references from us, but the names of thousands cured by them can be given to any one who doubts our statement. Dr. L. Q. C. The manufacturers claim that they have succeeded in producing the most satisfactory harmony ever heard from Reeds; while at the same time their Organs have never been equaled in Power.
An Organ Leading 3,000 Singers!
The following letter, from the Most Eminent Organist in the U. S., refers to an Organ now used in the Rev. Dr. Talmadge's church. The Organ formerly used, made by another house, had proved insufficient.
DEAR SIR: I owe you personally my best thanks for sending to us (the Brooklyn Tabernacle Congregation) one of the Smith American Reed Organs to the Academy of Music. It is perfectly wonderful that so small an instrument should have sufficient power to lead a Congregation of so many thousand people. The Trustees, as well as myself, are much pleased with it. The quality of Tone is also all that can be desired. It speaks for itself, and all I have met with, who attend the services, speak of it as most satisfactory. Accept my thanks, and believe me to remain most respectfully yours,
GEO. W. MORGAN, Organist.
